Delicate Dress Goods.

Some gowns are so dainty in the weave, so delicate in tint, that they seem to soil by being looked at—one or two wearings making them unpresentable, NOT USELESS. We make a specialty of cleaning fine fabrics, the more delicate the material, the better the results. Sometimes an accident will ruin a gown, without injuring the texture. We dye them then, sometimes we get a prettier effect than the original color. Fine goods stand redyeing. The finer the material the better the new color. We charge so little for cleaning or dyeing, that even if you are in doubt as to the result, it's worth while to experiment. Want a new evening gown for a dollar or two? Laundry drivers will receive your work.

IMPRISONED SINGLE TAXERS.

Much Interest in the Hearing of Their Appeal at Wilmington, Del.

Wilmington, Del., Aug. 14.—Argument was begun before Judge Wales in the United States court yesterday on the application of the single tax prisoners for release from the Dover jail. James J. Haggerty and Arthur Stephenson, the petitioners, were in court. Jackson H. Ralston, counsel for the applicants, opened argument for the applicants before Judge Wales, who had refused to have the evidence taken at the hearing before the lower justice reviewed. The court said the only question to be determine was whether the commitment of prisoners was or was not contrary to the constitution of the United States. Attorney Ralston held that the ordinance under which the sixteen men were committed was illegal and void and conflicting with the provisions of the Dover town charter. He also contended that the convictions were contrary to the provisions of the constitution of the United States. Beniah Watson, for the Dover authorities, replied to Ralston. He held that the trial of the prisoners was not contrary to the provisions of the constitution and that the town ordinance was proper. There is much interest in the case, and the court room was crowded Lecture Delivered by Rev. Mr. Morgan of England at Northfield, Mass.

Northfield, Mass., Aug. 14.—Rev. Mr. Morgan of Birmingham, England, gave an address yesterday on "The Early Life of Christ." The preacher drew lessons regarding the bearing of Christians in every-day life. Dr. C. Scofield, late of Dallas, Tex., and now pastor of the Congregational church here, followed with an address on Kadesh Barnea. Rev. F. B. Meyer of London answered a number of questions that have been proposed to him since he commenced his course of lectures. D. L. Moody invited the visitors to drive to Mount Hermon in the afternoon and inspect the school buildings. On their way back a short service was held at the grave of Mr. Moody's mother, who died last January. "Grandma" Moody, as she was generally called, was well known to those who have been coming to the conferences at Northfield during the past fourteen years.

M'KINLEY CAMPAIGN

What Is Going on at the Chicago Headquarters.

THREE SENATORS CALL ON MR. HANNA

They Discuss the Outlook in the West with the National Chairman—Mr. Hanna's Comment on Bryan's Madison Square Garden Speech.

Chicago, Aug. 14.—Three United States senators, Messrs. Shoup of Idaho, Mitchell of Oregon and Nelson of Minnesota, spent part of yesterday afternoon at republican national headquarters and conferred with Chairman Hanna on organization plans and needs of the party in their respective states. Senator Shoup says there is a big fight before him in his state, but he told Mr. Hanna to count Idaho in the republican column. Senator Nelson, who has been making numerous stump speeches in Minnesota, said Minnesota was safely republican; and Senator Mitchell's judgment was that Oregon would also go republican. Mr. Hanna said he had partly read Mr. Bryan's speech of acceptance, and made this comment: "I thought it very much of a skimmer. From the general tone and direction of the speech, contrasted with the platform, it seems to me Mr. Bryan is trimming his sails to catch the eastern breeze of democratic votes," Gen. Powell Clayton wired Perry Heath last night from New York asking for a copy of the Chicago convention proceedings for the special use of Gen. Harrison on the stump.

VIOLATED NO REGULATION.

Refusal of the 'Frisco Sub-Treasury To Exchange Gold for Silver Certificates.

Washington, Aug. 14.—The treasury department has received no information about the alleged refusal of the assistant treasurer at San Francisco to exchange gold for silver certificates. This is a policy that has been followed for years and is peculiar alone to the San Francisco sub-treasury. On the Pacific coast nearly all the money in circulation is gold and silver coin. But little paper money is used. For the convenience of bankers and others who desired to make shipments of money to the east, a practice has grown up at San Francisco of exchanging silver certificates for gold. It costs less to ship $1,000 in paper to New York than $1,000 in coin. In this way the officials of the sub-treasury generally made all forms of money interchangeable over its counter. As a result, the sub-treasury gained from $2,000,000 to $3,000,000 annually for the past few year while all other sub-treasuries in the east were losing gold. As it was simply a practice and not a treasury regulation, treasury officials say there was no need of their being informed of it. If it is resumed they will be equally in ignorance.

Hale Johnson Formally Notified.

Chicago, Aug. 14.—Hale Johnson of Newton, Ill., was formally notified in the Association Building auditorium last night of his nomination by the prohibitionist convention at Pittsburg for the office of vice-president of the United States. There was a small audience, but it was not lacking in enthusiasm. In accepting the nomination, Mr. Johnson arraigned the old parties on the charge of responsibility for the continuance of the liquor traffic, its growth and its power in politics.

Defaulting Cashier Commits Suicide.

Washington, Aug. 14.—Acting Comptroller Coffin is informed that Josiah E. Kelly, assistant cashier of the First National bank of South Bend, Ind., had committed suicide, because his defalcation of $24,000 had been discovered. The national bank examiner reports that the shortage was made good from the surplus and the business of the bank will in no way be affected.

Plattsburgh, N. Y., Aug. 14.—At the Catholic summer school last evening the Rev. C. W. Currier spoke on "Our Nation's Crisis," and Rev. SPORTS

FRIDAY, August 14. Sun rises 5:9 a. m., sets 7:7 p. m. Lanterns must be lighted between 8:8 p. m. and 4:7 a. m.

Cyclists desiring to join the League of American Wheelmen will be furnished with application blanks and necessary information by addressing the Cycling Department of the Daily Press.

CYCLING COMMENT.

Charles Johnson, of Dunellen, has a new Niagara wheel.

List of members published August 14th, gives the L. A. W., new, 953; total 63,400. New Jersey Division, new, 76; total, 4,028.

Miss Mamie DeNise, of Chatham street, in the borough, is the possessor of a brand new Olympia bicycle, which she is learning to ride.

As the pleasant days for touring are at hand, all cyclists should identify themselves with the L. A. W. The hotel rebate alone will repay the outlay, and the Road and Route Book with the Hand Book will give you all the desired information. Don't delay, but join now. Application blanks at this office.

An amusing sight was witnessed on Watchung avenue, between Front and Second streets, last evening, when a colored woman was seen trying to ride a wheel. She was piloted through the avenue by a colored man, but the weight was two to one against the pilot and the woman struck the car track and turned a clownish somersault in the gutter. Except for a punctured tire and a torn dress there was nothing unusual about the occurrence.

John Keefe, of the Vim Bicycle Club, of Newark, appeared as a trick rider at the division meet at Paterson very creditably. He evidently will be one of the attractions at the race meet of the Vim Club, to be held at the Waverly track in the near future. Keefe formerly resided in this city, where he was employed by the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company, and is now living in Newark and holds a trustworthy position with the Keer & Martin Cycle Company.

The track at Waverly Park, near Newark, is now open for training purposes, every evening after six o'clock. Before the Atlanta Wheelmen's meet on August 22nd, it will be rolled, scraped and worked into the best possible condition. The training quarters are to be enlarged, and racing men will have better accomodations that at any previous meet. The contestants in the Police-Fire men Letter Carrier race at the meet will be designated respectively by blue, red and gray sashes. This will enable the spectators to pick out the men at all stages of the game. The race will be scored by points at the end of each lap. A big delegation of Newark's city officials will be present to see the man ride. The fact that the Berlo Quait covered the mile in the neighborhood of 1-56 at the Atlanta Wheelmen's meet last June, on the same track, speaks well of its speed possibilities. At the coming meet the King's County Wheelmen's Quad will attempt to pull Earl around in even shorter time. One of the triplet teams entered in the race, for "trip" have ridden a mile under two minutes while practicing on the track.

AROUND THE BASES.

There will be quite a baseball game at Dunellen Saturday afternoon, when the local team meets the Somersets of Somerville. The latter nine expect to wipe up the earth with their opponents, but they may be surprised.

The Murray Hills, New York city's semi-professional team, will cross bats with the Y. M. C. A. team on the latter's grounds Saturday afternoon at 3:30 p. m. McKenzie, who captained the Princeton 'Varsity team in 1895, is captain of the Murray Hills. Also a number of other well known players will appear with him. They have defeated all the well known clubs in northern New Jersey this season, and are undoubtedly one of the best teams that could possibly be secured. The following will be the batting order:

Y. M. C. A.	MURRAY HILLS.

the afternoon, beginning at 3:30, were then discussed by the committee. Frank L. C. Martin was unanimously elected Grand Marshal.

The location of the judges' stand was discussed and the square at the junction of Franklin place, LaGrande and Putnam avenues seemed to be the most favored, although not definitely chosen. The route of the parade was also considered. All of the well-paved streets in Plainfield and North Plainfield, that is possible, will be included in the line of march and it is hoped that everybody in the city will decorate their homes.

The general committee, on whose efforts the success of the affair depends, has been organized as follows:

Finance committee—Edward White, chairman; J. Fred MacDonald, T. J. Carey, L. B. Woolston, H. H. Coward.

STORM-BOUND AT "CAMP LEVEE."

The Campers Had an Exciting Time With Rain and Lightning.

The storm last night was a rousing one at "Camp Levee." A board hut had been erected yesterday and most of the campers were glad to take refuge in it during the heaviest rainfall, as the tent was a rather moist place. They had a number of visitors yesterday, including a party from Taylor's.

The lightning struck two trees in close proximity to the camp, and the young men there had a chance to witness one of the grandest of nature's displays, an electrical storm.

Another Quiet Wedding.

The marriage of John Vroom, of The Daily Press circulating department, to Miss Sadie Perrine, of this city, is just announced. The ceremony was a quiet one and took place on February 8th. The news of the marriage was kept secret until a few days ago when the bride's parents moved to Muhlenberg place and the recently-married couple went to live with them. John has the hearty congratulations of The Press staff and his many other friends.

The Will of the Late Elias R. Pope.

Many curious person in town are anxious to know the provisions of the late Hon. Elias R. Pope's will, if one there be. It may be stated that Mr. Pope drew up his own will before he went to California in the spring of 1895 and up to today the will has not been opened and read.

Not the Same Man.

The William Barry, whose marriage was announced in yesterday's Daily Press, is not the one employed by Martin I. Cooley, of Rockview terrace, as coachman, but he is a machinist employed at one of the large factories in this city.

Wonderful Suns.

Astronomers are not yet all agreed as to the causes of the variations of color and brilliancy which are exhibited by many stars. In the constellation Cepheus, in the northern sky, there is a star named Delta Cephei, which in the course of about three days alternately gains and loses a large part of its light. The spectroscope has proved that Delta Cephei consists of two stars revolving around one another in a very elliptical orbit, although they never get far enough apart to be separately visible from the earth. Even when viewed with a telescope their light is blended into a single star disk, although if we could go near enough to them we should find that they are, in reality, millions of miles apart. When brightest, the united light of the twin stars is two or three times greater than when faintest. One of the explanations recently offered by astronomers to account for these changes is that one of the stars composing Delta Cephei has a very thick atmospheric veil, consisting of clouds of condensed metallic vapors, and that when the stars draw near one another in their orbital motion the increase of heat dissipates the obscuring veil, and permits the star to which it belongs to shine with a splendor that it cannot obtain when its rays are interrupted by its envelope of clouds. It is hard to believe that the inhabited worlds could exist in the neighborhood of such a pair of suns as that.—Youth's Companion.

Water from Solid Rock.

A most interesting fact has been discovered by a Swedish scientist. It is that water can be found by boring into granite and other crystalline rocks to a depth of 100 to 700 feet. A well was sunk in the Island of Akro, off the Swedish coast, not long ago, and at a depth of 110 feet fresh water was tapped, providing an apparently inexhaustible supply.—Chicago Tribune.

RAVAGES OF THE STORM

FURTHER DAMAGE DONE BY YESTERDAY'S ELECTRICAL STORM.

A Number of Barns in This Section Struck by Lightning and Burned—a Dwelling House in Cranford Also Hit.

The severe electrical storm that visited Plainfield early yesterday morning was not confined to this vicinity alone. All through this section the storm raged with terrible fury doing considerable damage, especially to the farmers. It is said to be one of the most severe storms that have passed over this fertile district. Besides the numerous buildings struck by lightning, trees were blown down and the crops damaged somewhat.

Yesterday considerable damage was done to the fire-alarm system in Elizabeth by the lightning.

Early yesterday morning lightning struck a barn at Cranford, and it was burned to the ground. The building was owned by Gaynes Tipple, and with contents was valued at $2,000. A house belonging to E. W. Hart, on Berkeley place, Cranford, was struck, but the damage was slight.

The most severe thunderstorm, accompanied by high winds, vivid lightning and heavy rains, in the history of Whitehouse, passed over that section early yesterday morning. For five hours lightning flashed continually.

At Stanton it struck the barn of Jos. Anderson and burned it to the ground together with two cows and a horse. Wyckoff Vandorn's barn, near Whitehouse, was also destroyed, and a valuable horse, thirty tons of hay, all his machinery and several outbuildings were consumed. North of Whitehouse Thomas Bush's barn was struck, and four cows and three horses perished. Ex-Congressman J. Nelson Pidcock's barn and outbuildings were also burned with their contents.

Lightning struck the barns of Daniel Dowling, near High Bridge, they were burned to the ground. The hay and other contents of the barn were destroyed.

During the storm lightning struck a barn at Plainsboro, near New Brunswick, and burned it.

Patrolman Flanagan, of the city police force, thought his time had come at 2 o'clock yesterday morning. He was on the way to the station house for his rubber coat, and was passing under the network of wires at the intersection of Park and North avenues, when he was rendered almost speechless by a sudden flash of lightning. The officer was dazed for a time, and finally reached the sidewalk for a few minutes. In a weakened condition he managed to get to the station house, there to find the place in total darkness. The fuse in the electric light converter had burned out, and just as Officer Flanagan was seeing his way around by lighting matches, Roundsman Frederickson dropped in, fearing that someone was trying to make away with the cells.

The members of Eugene Moore's family of Washington Valley were gathered in the family circle while the heavy shower was in progress, early yesterday morning, when Mr. Moore's son remembered that the barn doors were wide open. He hastened out to close the doors, and just at that moment there was a bright flash of lightning, followed by a heavy clap of thunder, and young Moore was thrown to the ground in a dazed condition. His eye lashes were burned off short and the hair on his head was singed close to the scalp. This considered as something unusual, inasmuch as the young man suffered no other inconvenience.

Off for His Faderland.

Peter B. Hansen, of Plainfield avenue, an employe at the Potter Press Works, left town this morning on the 7:28 train from New York. From that port he sails this afternoon for Stockholm, where he originally came from, and he may or may not return, as he decides later on. Mr. Hansen took his "bike" along with him and will try cycling in Sweden.

Nothing but Soap.

But well worth seeing is the show-window at White's store. They have made an exact reproduction of the World's Fair Administration building, and made it all of white castile soap. It contains over five thousand cakes and is a great piece of work. It will be lighted up by electric lights tonight.

The Political Situation Again.

William Hayward, who for eighteen years was employed as a hatter at Coriell's hat shops on Clinton avenue and who went to Orange a year ago, thinking he could better his condition, is visiting friends in this city. He reports work very dull among the Orange hatters, and says many of the shops have been closed owing to the uncertainty of the political situation.

JERSEY UNIONS TO MEET.

The Annual Congress in Trenton on August 17th.

The eighteenth annual congress of the New Jersey Federation of Trades and Labor Unions will be held in the Assembly Chamber, at Trenton, commencing at 10:30 a. m., Monday, August 17th. Every bona fide trades union in New Jersey is invited to send delegates. The basis of representation in the congress is three delegates for 100 members or less and one additional delegate for every additional 100 members or majority fraction thereof. Central labor unions and trades assemblies are entitled to one representative on payment, in advance for the year of $5. Delegates from trades unions will be admitted on presentation of properly sealed credentials and on payment of 15 cents annual capitation tax, in advance, for each member in good standing.

The aim of the Federation is the encouragement and formation of local trade and labor unions and the closer federation of such societies through the organization of central trade and labor unions in every city and the further combination of such bodies in the State Federation of Trade and Labor Unions. No question of a political partisan character can be entained, received or acted upon by the congress.

The congress will be in session only one day, unless a majority of the organizations decide otherwise.

TOWNSHIP SCHOOL TRUSTEES MEET.

They Listen to Reports and Transact Routine Business.

A regular meeting of the North Plainfield Township School trustees was held last night, at which all the members were present. By a request of the teachers it was decided to open the schools Monday August 31st. Miss Alice Needham, a teacher at the Greenbrook School, submitted her resignation and it was accepted. Miss Smith, of Dunellen, will fill the vacancy. It is understood that Miss Needham will teach in the borough public school. The committee on repairs reported progress in their work and stated that the schools would be in first class shape for the opening day.

An interesting fact was noted at the meeting and that is the decrease in the school membership at Washingtonville. Last year there were ninety scholars at this school and this year there is a decrease of twenty-five, which is due to removals, principally, while others are over the limit in age.

At the Greenbrook school the membership will remain the same. The other business transacted was of a routine nature.

A Model Residence.

The handsome new mansion of the estate of the late David K. Moore, which has just been completed on Stelle avenue near Central avenue, is a model in its style of architecture and interior designs. Contractor John Abbott has exerted himself to satisfy the owners so far as artistic carpenter work is concerned, and in this respect the building commands the attention of all lovers of fine architectural workmanship. The grounds and driveways about the place are being put in first-class condition, and when the lawns are completed the place will be one of the most handsome in this part of the state. Mrs. Moore and her family will occupy the new house within a week or so.

Could Not Find An Officer.

A drunken individual camped out on the front piazza of the Obitz house on Somerset street, opposite Mountain avenue last evening. The lady residing there tried to find a policeman to remove the unwelcome visitor but there was none to be found. She walked down Somerset street as far Spencer's store and finding no officer left word there. During the night the inebriated man disappeared but whether a policeman or his own sweet will was the directing influence, it is impossible to say.

Stole Wagon Wheels.

Some person or persons effected an entrance last evening in the barn located on West Second street, owned by George Leland and stole five wagon wheels belonging to him. Mr. Leland has not the slightest idea who committed the act, but if the guilty ones are caught they will get the full penalty.

Business Increasing.

Messrs. Marsh, Ayers & Co., the painters and decorators, report decidedly brighter prospects for the fall and winter trade. The summer, thus far, has been exceedingly slow, but judging from the number of contracts this firm alone has signed for the fall, would show a marked increase in their business.

MURDER IN THE ALLEY.

IT APPEARS THAT A LITTLE JOKE ENDS WITH A TRAGEDY.

Mrs. Bertha Ericco's Favorite Was the Victim of the Anger of Tom Barber—All the Details of the Affair.

There was a murder committed in Paradise Alley last week, and this morning the perpetrator of the crime was tried in the city court before City Judge DeMeza. The principal witness against the accused was Mrs. Bertha Ericco, a resident of the alley and mistress of the feline victim whose life was suddenly brought to an end by a heavy stone wielded by the brawy arm of Tom Barber, of East Third street. Through her testimony and Barber's own admissions, he was found guilty and fined $3.

The story of this tragedy is rather difficult to learn as each side has a different version.

At any rate, Barber visited the alley last week and happened in the vicinity of Mrs. Ericco's house. Mrs. Ericco is a newcomer in that neighborhood, having only lived there six months, but Roundsman Mattox counts her among his most promising pupils. Someone, by way of a joke, threw the cat at Barber. If the cat had been drowning and Barber's hand had been a straw the result would have been the same, for the cat clung to the hand with a mighty grasp. Long and deep scratches resulted, whereupon the indignant young man vowed vengeance.

A stone was near at hand and he proceeded to extinguish all the nine lives of the cat at once. Barber's language was not of the most choice, so Mrs. Ericco claims, and he used very unpleasant expressions. Like many good men before it, the cat had to die to be appreciated. After the feline had given its last kick, Mrs. Ericco remembered what a wonderful animal it was, and determined to hold its exterminator accountable. According to her, Barber wrapped the dead animal in a towel and threw it in a freight car. The latter claims that he threw the carcass on the track, intending to bury it afterwards.

The next act in this tragedy was when the owner of poor Pussy swore out a warrant for the arrest of the murderer and then came arrest. The trial came off this morning. Barber admitted killing the cat but not using improper languge. The trial was rendered quite exciting by Mrs. Ericco, whose Scotch blood boiled over with wrath, Ronndsman Mattox had his hands full to keep his pupil still for an instant. The Judge fined Barber $3.

A NEGLIGENT OFFICER.

A Borough Marshal, It is Said, Will Be Asked to Resign.

For some time past the work of one of the borough marshals has not been satisfactory to the Mayor or the police committee, and on several occasions the officer has been requested to appear before the Mayor and committee to answer to the charge of not attending to his duties. He appeared before the officials and was reprimanded. This, however, seemed to have but little effect with the officer, and his indifference has been a source of displeasure to the borough officials. It is now understood that the marshal was asked to resign but refused, saying that he had done nothing to warrant his stepping out. The Daily Press is informed that at the next meeting of the Council charges will be preferred against the marshal and that his resignation will be demanded. During a service of seventeen months he has not made a single arrest.

A Serious Charge.

On complaint of the society for the prevention of cruelty to children of North Plainfield. A warrant was issued yesterday for the arrest of Frank Stiles. Mr. Stiles was arrested this morning and taken before Justice Thomas who held him $250 bail to appear for trial Tuesday afternoon August 25th at 2 o'clock. The defendant is charged with crime. W. A. Coddington represents Mr. Stiles, and the plaintiff have secured an attorney whose name is not known at present. The trial promises to be an interesting one.

He Lives in Cranford.

The Press erred yesterday in stating that Editor Potter, of The Cranford Chronicle, is a resident of the borough of North Plainfield. The truth is that Mr. Potter owns and lives in a house in Cranford, and is in all respects identified with that thriving town. Our mistake was owing to the fact that he is a frequent visitor at the home of relatives in North Plainfield.

The whole system is drained and undermined by indolent ulcers and open sores. DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve speedily heals them. It is the best pile cure known. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

DIED FROM SUNSTROKE

MAURICE FITZGERALD ANOTHER VICTIM OF THE HOT WAVE.

He Was Prostrated Last Tuesday While Driving His Brother-in-Law's Wagon, and Never Recovered from the Effects.

Maurice B. Fitzgerald, aged 25, died at Dr. J. H. Cooley's sanitarium in North Plainfield at 5:30 o'clock this morning from the effects of sunstroke received on Tuesday last, as was told in the Press at the time. He leaves a widow, but no children.

The deceased was employed by his brother-in-law, Frank Linke, to drive his delivery wagon, and on Tuesday he started for his home at the corner of Third and Liberty streets, about dinner time. Arriving at the door he was stricken down and carried to his room and made as comfortable as possible. Drs. Hedges and Davis labored for hours, but the patient remained in a comatose state and was delirious for a day or two.

Yesterday he began to sink and it was found that his brain was affected, so it was decided to remove him to the private sanitarium, where he might find rest and quietude, and at the same time have the best of care and medical attendance. Accordingly the patient was driven to the sanitarium about 9 o'clock last evening and put so bed, but he never rallied, and died as above stated at 5:30 this morning.

Decedent was born in County Kerry, Ireland, twenty-five years ago, and came to Plainfield in 1889. He has since then been a member in his sister's household, and was respected and universally esteemed by all who knew him. He had a large circle of friends and acquaintances who will doubtless be shocked to learn of his early demise.

The body was transferred to his late home on Liberty street this morning from which place the funeral will probably take place on Monday, although the arrangements are not yet fully completed.

Not in Opposition to Voorhees.

The has been talk in Elizabeth about the Kean influence being inimical to the renomination of Foster M. Voorhees for Senator. Mr. Kean is taking no part whatever in any plan to deprive the Senator of a renomination if he should seek it, and no one knows this better than Mr. Voorhees himself. The Senator could not have been in public life all these years without making enemies, but Mr. Kean is not one of them now, whatever he may have been a year ago.—N. Y. Press.

Wonderful Fishing.

W. J. Roome, of Sycamore avenue, now at Point Breeze Camp, Wolfeboro, N. H., for his summer outing, is sustaining his world-wide reputation as an expert fisherman by the great catches of bass which he is making. Willie calls it a poor day's sport if he does not come home with twenty or thirty two to three-pound bass on his string. John W. Murray can vouch for the truth of this, as he is also there helping to deplete Lake Wentworth of its finny inhabitants.

Bluefish or Whale, Which?

J. A. Flannery, of this city, was the recipient yesterday of a prize in the shape of a fish or other marine wonder, which his son-in-law, George Johnson, captured at Seabright. The fish came by express, packed in ice, and "Ted" was surprised on opening the box to find a mammoth specimen of the finny tribe measuring about three feet in length. "Ted" was looking for Morgan Turton last night to share his luck with him.

Thought He Had the Speaker.

Patrolman Vanderweg was walking down West Third street the other evening when he heard some language that was evidently not meant for his ears. The language was of a sulphurous order. He located the speaker as Mrs. Bridget Newman and she appeared in the city court this morning to answer to the charge. She pleaded not guilty. The Judge reserved his decision.

Sixteen to One.

This war cry of the Silverites seems to be about the ratio at which the enthusiasts of either party hold the chances of the rival candidates. The odds are probably excessive either way, but it's a sure sixteen to one shot that if you don't lay in your winter coal right now, you will regret it before the cold weather sets in. In this relation it will pay you to consult George O. Stevens & Co., 747 West Front street.

Theo. Pruden, of East Second street, who has been seriously ill for nearly two weeks, is out for the first time today.

Chas. Wilcox, of West Second street, who has been employed at Moore's ship yards, in Elizabethport, for some time past, will enter the employ of the Pond Machine Tool Company, on Monday next.

THE MARSHAL AND THE COW.

They Have an Exciting Time Together in the Borough.

The police force of the borough consists of three regular marshals and several specials. The chief marshal is away on his vacation. One of the regulars has been absent for some time in Colorado leaving only one regular now on duty and two specials acting in the regular's places with one of the former acting as chief. Well, the specials are a little unused to regular police work and as there is not been much business in the police court during the hot spell one of the specials yesterday with an eye to business made an arrest in the middle of the road on Grove street and allowed his prisoner to escape. That started all the gossipers in the Cracker Barrel Club to question how far the rights of the taxpayer goes when he and his are peaceable and not making any noise.

A hackman named Barry, living on Grove street, last night called at the station house and demanded his cow that one of the marshals arrested in the afternoon, while being driven by a boy. The cow when arrested didn't say a word, but sized up "Mr. Brass Buttons" and ran away from the old officer and lost herself. Of course her owner wanted "Old Brindle" back home, because he missed her milk, and was very mad.

Special Officer and Acting Chief Peter Hansen consoled with the owner, as did also Justice Crosley. They told him that it was a mistake. He wanted the cow, however, and Special Hansen was given a free ride in the hackman's carriage around Washington Park last evening to assist in search for her.

She is now back home. Apologies were offered and accepted. "Old Brindle" hasn't said a word, yet. She was found near Washington Rock.

Two New Cottages Started.

Contractor John Abbott, of this city, yesterday staked out the ground for the erection of two more handsome cottages on East Sixth street, for the David M. Moore estate. The work of excavating and building will be begun at once, and will be pushed forward to completion on or before December 1st, next. The buildings are to be of Queen Anne style of architecture, and they will be equipped with all the modern appliances, including heat, ventilation and other sanitary arrangements. The cost of the new buildings is not stated.

Firemen Want to Parade.

Some of the firemen in this city would like to get off Oct. 1st and participate in the centennial parade of Humane fire company No. 1, of Easton, Pa. Forty-five fire companies from various parts of the country have already agreed to join in the demonstration, and if Alert's silver carriage was not in the shop for repairs it might be taken to Easton and win the prize.

A Private Club of Three.

Pleasant young people who are enjoying the refined attention of the Albemarle are Meredith Dryden, Miss Constance Parker and Miss Harriet Reese, says the Asbury Park Journal. Dryden hails from this city and is one of "the private club of three" that are sojourning at Asbury Park. The other two members are F. H. Freeman and Walter Douglass.

A Benefit.

The members of the German Beneficial Society of this city and North Plainfield are to hold a benefit in the Gesang and Turn Verein hall on Monday and Tuesday evenings. The entertainment will consist principally of singing, speaking, etc., by members. A delegation from the New Brunswick Turn Verein will assist in the entertainment.

A Journalistic Victim.

William H. Moses, editor of "The Patterson Morning Call" was overcome by the heat at his desk Wednesday night and died early Thursday morning at the General Hospital of Paterson.

Mrs. Sandford's Funeral.

The funeral of the late Mrs. Sarah M. Sandford will be held from the residence of her son, Wm. M. Sandford, 343 East Front street, Monday morning at 11:15 o'clock.

A New Award.

The Presbyterian church insurance difficulty at Bound Brook has been at last settled, the new arbitrators having awarded the church $8,200.

Councilman Ginna's Opinion.

Councilman Ginna says in his estimation, Bryan is not as strong as he was the day of the convention.

If you have ever seen a little child in the agony of summer complaint, you can realize the danger of the trouble and appreciate the value of instantaneons relief always afforded by DeWitt's Colic & Cholera Cure. For dysentery and diarrœa it is a reliable remedy. We could not afford to recommend this as a cure unless it were a cure. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

PUBLIC TROLLEY PARTY

THE STREET RAILWAY'S NEW VENTURE IS A SUCCESS.

The Cars Were Crowded at First and Remained Well Filled to the End—Enthusiastic Reception by the People.

As the hour of 8 approached last evening a crowd began to gather at the corner of North and Watchung avenues. It was mainly a curious crowd that had come to see the start of the first of the street railway's trolley parties, but there were a number that wanted to go for the ride, with band accompaniment.

The Plainfield Cornet Band appeared a few minutes before the appointed time and was placed in one of the open cars. Then there was a scramble for the remaining seats. Another car soon appeared and that was immediately filled to overflowing.

Slowly these two cars moved up Watchung avenue to East Fifth street while the third car was collecting its load of passengers. A short stop was made at the Putnam avenue switch to allow the third car to catch up and the residents in the neighborhood were treated to some music. The scene was illuminated with colored fire, burned in front of the residence of Thomas H. Cuming, of Putnam avenue.

Then the ride continued, first to Netherwood, then to Dunellen, up to West Seventh street and Monroe avenue and concluded with the Somerset street branch. At first the cars were crowded but, after the novelty wore off somewhat, they were comfortably filled and remained so during the rest of the ride. The band gave its selections in its usual excellent manner.

The party attracted attention all along the line and quite a number turned out to see it. Small boys cheered, girls and women waved their handkerchiefs and everybody seemed pleased with the first trolley party.

Where Is That Hose Company?

It now seems as though the residents of Prideville have no ambition regarding the formation of a hose company there. The Borough Council have certainly made them an excellent offer, in agreeing to erect a handsome fire house, and place a hose carriage in it, providing they organize a company. But as no steps have been taken in that direction it looks as if there will be no adequate fire protection in that vicinity.

An Appeal From the Hospital.

Muhlenberg Hospital makes a strong appeal to people of Plainfield for a quantity of old muslin, good sheets and pillow cases, which articles they are very much in need of. A quick response will be appreciated.

TO BE REPRESENTED AT INDIANAPOLIS

Railroads To Cut Rates to the Hoosier Capital Convention—The New Jersey Sound Money Democrats To Meet Next Monday in Jersey City.

Baltimore, Aug. 15.—The gold democrats of Maryland will send sixteen delegates to the Indianapolis convention, notwithstanding the action of the executive committee of the Sound Money league of Maryland in deciding to make no effort in that direction. Harry A. Parr, president of the Sound Money league, will again call the executive committee together for a reconsideration of the vote whereby it was decided to send no delegates to Indianapolis. Mr. Parr said: "I am ready to do all in my power to aid the sound money democrats in other states. If they think it will be of any service to them for Maryland to send delegates to the Indianapolis convention I shall favor that plan, and to that end will call the committee together at once to take action on the matter. If it should be considered the best plan to nominate a third ticket, I shall not oppose it, although, in my opinion, the best way to gain our point is to vote for the republican nominee directly and thus emphasize our protest. I do not believe in any half-way business."

St. John Corrects a False Impression.

New York, Aug. 15.—The following statement signed by Mr. St. John has just been given out: "In order to correct officially the false impressions repeatedly conveyed as to the matter, I state that our accomodations at the hotel Bartholdi consist of one moderately large room and four small rooms, with the use of the hotel parlor additionally. These constitute the treasurer's quarters of the democratic national committee and the state headquarters of the national silver party, as from the beginning and as officially stated at the outset. The question of retaining them for the purpose for which they have been rented at a very moderate expense, has not been discussed by the democratic national committee."

New Jersey Gold Democrats.

New York, Aug. 15.—The announcement is made that the executive committee of the gold standard organization of New Jersey will hold its first meeting at Taylor's hotel, Jersey City, Monday next at 3:30 p m. The composition of the committee has not been publicly announced because it is understood that certain places on it have been left vacant pending decision as to the relatively availability of different candidates. At the meeting on Monday regular headquarters will be selected and systematic campaign work laid out. The first task of the new organization will be the perfecting of itself for regular representation in the Indianapolis convention.

Cut Rates for Indianapolis.

Indianapolis, Aug. 15.—It is announced that a one-fare rate for the round trip has been secured for those who will attend the convention of the new democratic party in Indianapolis, September 7. The sale of tickets at such rates will begin September 2. The tickets will be good for return, leaving Indianapolis as late as midnight, September 10. An enormous quantity of gold literature has been ordered and its distribution will begin at once. The statement to the public, which a special committee has been appointed to prepare, may not be given out for publication before August 17, when the national executive committee meets in Chicago.

Victory for Chairman Hackett.

Utica, N. Y., Aug. 15.—The reports from the republican caucuses in Oneida and Herkimer counties show a complete victory for the organization. It made a clean sweep in Utica, which forms the first Oneida district, and carried the second and third districts and Herkimer county. This insures the unanimous re-election of Charles W. Hackett as member of the state committee from the twenty-fifth congressional district.

Entertained by Major McKinley.

Canton, O., Aug. 15.—Major and Mrs. McKinley entertained at dinner last evening Thomas McDougal, a prominent attorney of Cincinnati, who was accompanied by his son and daughter. There were also present a number of invited friends. The major's mail continues to be quite large, and he is daily in receipt of letters telling him of the formation of McKinley clubs in different parts of the country.

Massachusetts Gold Democrats.

Boston, Aug. 15.—The gold democrats have issued a call for a state convention at Horticultural hall, Boston, on Aug. 25, to nominate delegates to Indianapolis and choose presidential electors. Hon. F. O. Prince will call the convention to order, and it is probable that ex-Mayor Matthews will be the permanent chairman.

Wanamaker Speaks at Germantown.

Philadelphia, Aug. 15.—At a republican mass meeting held in Germantown, a suburb, last night, ex-postmaster general John Wanamaker made a lengthy speech in favor of the present money standard and against free coinage.

A Copyright Suit.

New Haven, Conn., Aug. 15.—The plant of the Hygeia Ice Company was attached yesterday in a suit for $10,000 instituted by the Hygeia Distilled Water company of New York. Infringement of copyright is alleged.

GEN. ZAYAS WAS MURDERED.

Not Killed in Battle, But Treacherously Slain by the Spaniards.

New York, Aug. 15.—A letter has been received by the Cuban junta from a correspondent in Cuba, under date of Aug. 6, which states that Juan Bruns Zayas was not killed in battle, as reported, but was murdered. He had been in the habit, with other officers, of going to a thatched cottage and having his morning coffee with the family that occupied it. His host is believed to have proved treacherous, for he got up from the table one morning and went out. There was a knock at the door shortly afterward and the general went to open it, supposing it was his host that had returned. He found instead a body of Spanish soldiers under command of Lieut.-Col. Perol. He tried to break through and received a bullet in the left eye. Two other officers, Planos and Perpinon, and a third, whose name was not given, were also killed as they came to Gen. Zayas' assistance.

THEIR RACE BECOMING EXTINCT

Report of the Suffering of Labrador Indians Made by Two Priests.

Quebec, Aug. 15.—Rev. Fathers Goyer and Lacoste, who have just returned from Canadian Labrador, say that the Indians there are suffering severely from lack of sufficient food. A general complaint is made against the Newfoundlanders, who are destroying the eggs of birds, which should be a source of revenue to the Indians. The missionaries complain of outrageous abuse on the part of traders, who deal out whiskey to the Indians with deplorable effect. This abuse has given rise to serious loss of life and is spreading poverty, disease and misery throughout Labrador. Pneumonia, consumption and other diseases are increasing among the Indians, who are fast dying out.

For Tampering with the Mails.

Chautauqua, N. Y., Aug. 15.—Rev. Dr. H. B. Waterman of Oak Park, Ill., an Oriental traveler and Palestine lecturer, was arrested by United States Deputy Marshal Buch here last evening for tampering with the mails. For some time past numerous complaints have been made against the mail service here and the complainant, Mr. Fuller, postmaster at Chautauqua, says he will sift to the bottom so as to ascertain where the trouble lies.

Pennsylvanian Murdered in the West.

Lincoln, Neb., Aug. 15.—W. F. Eyster, a prominent man of Chambersburg, Pa., a railroad directer and capitalist, was found dead in an alley here late last night, having been drugged and robbed. He left his hotel four hours before being found with a sough character who has not yet been arrested. He was on his way to Colorado, and stopped here to visit friends.

Insurgents Attack Mussulmans.

London, Aug. 15.—The Daily News to-day publishes a dispatch from Athens saying that a body of Christian insurgents attacked a number of marauding Mussulmans at Katovathia, near Candia. It is stated that the Mussulmans were nearly annihilated. A body of troops was sent to attack the Christians, but they were defeated.

Olin Warner Dies of His Injuries.

New York, Aug. 15.—Olin L. Warner, the sculptor, who was accidentally thrown from his bicycle weeks ago, died at the Presbyterian hospital last evening. Mr. Warner was riding his bicycle along upper West End avenue when he met in collision with a truck. His injuries necessitated a surgical operation.

American Canoe Association Meeting.

Clayton, N. Y., Aug. 15.—The annual meet of the American Canoe association opened on Grindstone island at noon yesterday. The outlook is that the attendance will be very large. The meet is to cover two weeks, the last week being assigned to the races.

To Review Italians.

New York, Aug. 15.—Mayor Strong to-day promised a delegation from the United Italian societies to review a parade of the societies on September 21. The Italians on that day will celebrate the taking of Rome by the troops of Victor Emmanuel by a parade in the morning and a picnic in the afternoon.

WONDERS OF BIRD MIGRATION.

Some Fly During the Day and Others at Night.

The manner of travel differs greatly among the birds. Nearly everybody has seen or heard the flocks of wild geese passing over in the night, making tremendous leaps, so to speak, across the country on their way south. That the shore birds bound to Patagonia travel in like fashion has already been told. Probably the great majority of birds travel south in great flocks at tremendous height from the earth. They are thus able in pleasant weather at least to see the landscape and so direct their way unvaryingly. In storms and fogs they lose their way, become confused, plunge about among the tree tops, fly through the streets of cities and dash themselves to death against the windows of lighthouses. To my mind this gathering of timid birds like the thrush—birds that live the summer through close to the ground and are never seen 100 feet above the soil—the gathering, I say, of birds like these in great flocks that go careening high in air for vast distances over the land by night is the greatest marvel of migration. It seems a matter of course that swallows should do so, for they are tireless.

On the other hand there are birds that are seen by day in "a ceaseless tide of migration." "They pass leisurely from tree to tree, gleaning as they go," says one observer writing on the characteristics of warblers. It is worth noting that the birds who migrate in this fashion are peculiar in their habits as workers—they never waste any time in play. The robins, the orioles, the bobolinks make a picnic excursion of their annual flight, but the plodders of the feathered race must needs carry their knitting to camp meeting. It has been supposed that the birds who migrate by night do so to escape the attacks of predatory birds, but these plodding migrants are quite as subject to attacks as any. Besides, on the clear nights when the night flyers go they are certainly subject to attacks from owls. There are so many things we do not know about the habits of birds that it seems worth while to call attention to points that may be disputed in the hope that some who seek knowledge out of pure love of it may turn their attention to this most interesting part of life in nature.—Colette Smiley, in Chautauquan.

How to Live a Century

In an address on old age, recently published in the British Medical Journal, Sir James Crichton Browne, M.D., LL.D., says: "Man is entitled to live one hundred years."

Many men have lived a century and not one of them has ever committed suicide. Note that fact. It is a simple question of wear and repair. Accidents excepted, a human life is measured by the body's power to build itself up as fast as use tears it down. In health this is done.

But disease attacks it. Appetite and digestion fail; strength declines; flesh melts like snow. What can stop the wasting and replace the loss?

Scott's Emulsion

of Cod-liver Oil, with the Hypophosphites of lime and soda.

It is a body-builder. It is the essence of the elements and principles that feed, nourish, reconstruct. It is fuel fat for the vital fire; it makes red blood; it stops the wasting; it puts back the lost flesh.

Hence its brilliant results in cases of anaemia, bronchitis, chronic gastric and intestinal disorders and consumption. The oil (easily digested and assimilated) forms flesh and tissue; while the lime promotes the growth of bone. It is like an architect in wood, in stone and in iron—all at once.

In Scott's Emulsion the taste of the oil is fully disguised. It does not nauseate the most delicate stomach.

No other emulsion is "just the same as," or "as good as" Scott's. There is a radical difference.

Accept no substitute.

THE DAUNTLESS EXPEDITION.

Collector of Customs at Brunswick, Ga., Says It Was Impossible To Stop It.

Washington, Aug. 15.—Thomas W. Lamb, collector of customs at Brunswick, Ga., has sent the following telegram to the state department concerning the sailing from Brunswick of the Dauntless filibustering expedition to Cuba: "The plans for the filibustering trip of the tug Dauntless were so well conceived that with the greatest surveillance exercised she could not be intercepted as a filibuster. The tug, apparently under ordinary circumstances, left her wharf ostensibly for Miami, Fla., to secure a tow. However, with lights extinguished, she took on a body of men from Jacksonville, supposed to number 100, at Woodbine, at the junction of the Florida Central & Peninsular railroad with the Stilla river, in the customs district of St. Mary's, Ga., passing out at St. Andrew's bay. This information came too late to take action. It is said she was heavily laden with arms and ammunition. No application was made for clearance papers at this customs office."

The companies at Nogales will protect the American section of the town and if possible assist in the capture of depredators.

Baggally-Lowrey Marriage Postponed.

Bar Harbor, Me., Aug. 15.—It is announced that the marriage of Juliet Tyron Lowrey of New York and Herbert Lacy Baggalley, son of Sir Richard Baggalley of England, which was to have taken place at Corfield, the summer home of Mrs. George Kemp, here on August 26, has been postponed on account of the illness of the bride, who has been compelled to leave Bar Harbor for her health. CONDITION OF TRADE

The Situation Not So Bright as Might Be Expected.

HOT SPELL SOMEWHAT RESPONSIBLE

Government's Unfavorable Crop Report Also Another Discouraging Feature. Iron Industry at a Stand Still and Prices Continue Low.

New York, Aug. 15.—Dun's weekly review of the business outlook will to-day say: An extraordinary spell of deadly hot weather has affected trade throughout the country, and in the east speculative feeling was somewhat affected until Thursday by apprehension of the possible influence of the Bryan meeting. With cooler weather there came also on Thursday perception that the meeting would not affect business unfavorably. But other conditions were not stimulating. According to government reports, the crops sustained injuries. Labor difficulties extend, and the closing of establishments for want of work, and the refusal of commercial loans by banks, checked operations in many branches of industry and trade. The week therefore closes, as the last week did, with domestic business unusually dull for the season, measured by clearing-house exchanges 5.0 per cent. smaller than last year and 15.5 per cent. smaller than in the same week of 1892, the last year of full business at this season.

Confidence in the Stock Market.

There is evidence of greater confidence in the stock market, which began to appear on Monday. The average of sixty most active railroad stocks had fallen to $40.85 per share, a decline of over 7 per cent. for the week, against 45.09 at the lowest point after the Venezuelan difficulty last December, $41.71 at the lowest point in 1893, and $41.54 at the lowest point in 1884, so that prices were actually the lowest in seventeen and one-half years, since the first month after specie resumption. Trust stocks had also declined $2.78 for the week. There was some selling by foreign holders, but a far more important factor was the general feeling of capitalists and investors here that it might not yet be the best time to buy. Men of more confidence put up prices a little on Tuesday, and still more on Thursday, so that the week closed with an advance averaging 95 cents per share for railroads and $1.32 for trusts. Many men have the idea that stocks are a purchase as soon as political doubts are removed, but are not agreed as to the thing needed to remove those doubts.

Outlook of Crops.

The government crop report for August was so gloomy that a great rise in prices would have followed if it had been entirely credited. In fact, wheat rose about half a cent, but again declined throughout the week, closing only a fraction higher for the week. Corn declined throughout the week, closing over a cent lower. Cotton advanced a sixteenth because of continued reports of injury. It is wise to remember that the government accounts were based on returns prior to the fearful spell of heat, and hence may be more nearly correct than they were when prepared. But official and unofficial estimates of great decrease in wheat yield are confronted with a movement from the farms of 3,560,741 bushels for the week, against 2,295,242 last year, and it scarcely seems reasonable to believe that 20,700,000 bushels would have been marketed since July 1 this year, agrinst 11,625,262 last year, if the yield had been smaller with the price 9 cents lower than a year ago. Atlantic exports, flour included, 1,409,780 bushels, against 889,301 last year, are not enough to count for the difference. No one now questions the probability of a very large yield of corn. But the advance of cotton to 8.12 cents caused large selling and a reaction, although a turn upwards on Friday took the price to 8.19 with moderate trading.

Iron and Boots and Shoes.

Iron production was reduced 20,764 tons weekly in July, and has been further reduced since August 1, while unsold stocks increased 26,192 tons in July. The stoppage of a large share of the Connelsville coke works and of many lake iron mines is fair indication that the two combinations do not believe anything could be gained by reducing the prices of materials, and the main difficulty is obviously the extreme narrowness of demand for finished products, which is so small that most transactions are at some concessions even from the current low prices. The boot and shoe industry is approaching the end of orders at hand, and gradual advances in the prices asked tend to the restriction of new orders which appears in other industries also, but shipments from the east thus far in August are 10 per cent. smaller than last year in number of cases. Leather is scarcely changed in price, many of the tanneries having ceased operations, but hides are 6 per cent. lower for the week and have declined 17.43 per cent. within the last five weeks. The woolen manufacture makes little change, with not more than a third of the machinery now running, and the demand for goods does not improve, although prices of some important grades have been further reduced.

The Rahway advocate says that "Ernest R. Ackerman of Plainfield will beenthusiastically supported by Union County Republicans for presidential elector from this congressional district." Two years ago Mr. Ackerman was prominently spoken of as the Republican candidates for congress, but withdrew his name early in the campaign. He is a highly respected gentleman, a thorough Republican, and it is eminently proper that he should be spoken of as a probable elector. He would add strength and credit to the ticket.—Elizabeth Journal.

One of the big schemes of the future will probably be the syndicating of all the trolley interests of the State. There are yet several links necessary to complete the chain of electric lines between Jersey City and Cape May, but each summer witnesses the welding of a new loop and the grasping of contributary road franchises. Probably $100,0 0,000 in capital will be invested in such a pool, and about that time it will be necessary for the Legislature to step in to protect the farmers from absolute seizure of their lands.—New York Press.

With these and others, it is important, whether at home, at the seashore or in the country, that some thought be given to diet, and as further assistance to Nature, a good building up medicine like Hood's Sarsaparilla had best be resorted to. GUIANA'S BOVIANDERS.

Origin and Social Customs of a Remarkable Race.

They Inhabit the Disputed Territory Between Venezuela and British Guiana—Curious Admixture of Civilization and Primitive Savagery.

[Special Kingston (Jamaica) Letter.]

The Guiana boundary dispute between Great Britain and Venezuela has attracted considerable attention to the wild and practically unknown country about which it arose. For months past the press of the United States has teemed with more or less descriptive articles in which the word "Boviander" frequently occurs. It seems to be quite freely used without definition, on the assumption that the general reader understands the appellation. In point of fact, however, nine out of ten people in the states are at a loss to know whether it means a bushman, a boatman, a guide or a trailer—for it might mean either of these. In reality the word implies either, according as used, but means neither.

The Boviander of Guiana are a distinct race of half-breeds, descended from the intermarriage of the original Dutch colonists with the Indian women of former generations. There are also black Boviander, descended from the intermarriage of Indian braves with runaway slave women, who fled to the wilderness in the days of slavery; but these are not nearly so numerous as the white class, by whom they are looked down on. These people inhabit the wide and indefinite region now known as the disputed territory, lying between the Orinoco and Essequibo, and maintain the freest relations with the native Indians on one side and the negroes of the British colony on the other. They are spread over the whole country, but their chief settlements are nearer to the English than the Venezuelan side.

In color the Boviander of Dutch extraction are a light brown-yellow, somewhat fairer than mulattoes, and with the European cast of features far more strongly developed. They are well formed, and, for the most part, handsome. The black class are of a dirty reddish black, flat featured and ugly. In habit and manner, the white is tidy, clean, pleasant and attractive; the black slovenly, foul, sycophantic and repulsive. Their language is English, but so full of Indian and Dutch idioms and variations as to be a sort of Volapuk.

The customs of the Boviander, like his language, are an admixture of primitive savagery and civilization. In him socially as well as ethnologically the European and the native Indian meet; and it is often difficult to tell where the one ends and the other begins. Formerly the Bovianders lived their peculiar life pretty much to themselves, being but infrequently disturbed by wandering explorers. With the opening up of their country consequent upon the discovery of gold, they have been brought more into immediate touch with civilization, and the dozen or so of years that have elapsed have wrought quite an interesting change.

Let us visit the Boviander and have a passing glimpse of him in his home beyond the first line of the cataracts—which forms the natural boundary between the colony proper and its backwoods. What we wish to see is how he combines his inheritance of primitive customs with the new ideas of civilized life that he has imbibed, and nothing could be more apt to the purpose than a little experience of my own.

Bunting was to provide us with boatmen to go up the river, but on arriving at his settlement a delay occurred. Chloe, his daughter, was to be married, and all outstanding engagements must await the event. Now Bunting was a Boviander, and the groom elect was a white man of local celebrity, a Mr. Gordon, of Glasgow. Apart from its annoyance the incident was a very interesting affair. We were fortunate to be in the nick of time to witness a full dress (wedding dress) rehearsal, too. As we approached the Bunting homestead Miss Chloe emerged onto the balcony radiant in the best up-to-date wedding costume, fresh from the Georgetown milliners. She was a tall, slender and very pretty girl, and appeared in sharp contrast with her present surroundings. As she came forth to exhibit herself there was a rush of Bovianders, Indians and negroes.

What a to-do there was! Such a shouting and hand clapping! The pace was set by an old negro granny, fat and jovial, and a younger negro wench, who accompanied the bride from her chamber and danced around her whilst the naked Indians looked on in stolid astonishment. The wedding procession was about to start for the mission, a few miles up the river. Whilst the bride retired to doff her finery and prepare for the trip, Bunting explained that he could not attend to us till next day, so we decided to submit to the inevitable and attend at the function.

The hymeneal procession started, consisting of a huge freight bateau, square as a packing case, but comfortably seated for the occasion, and half a dozen Indian canoes into which the guests overflowed from the state barge. Each boat carried a flag, and the bateau had two. The scene was pleasing as it was novel, and not too brilliant to outmatch the vivid sunshine that beat on the glassy river's ruddy tide and the bewildering greens, crimson, white, purple and blue of the wild foliage and flowers along the steep banks. Shouts and song and laughter made the air tremble and woke the woodland echoes. The bride and groom sat together, and so far from resenting the personal remarks made about them freely joined in the jokes and laughter. The procession momently grew. Every descending canoe we passed joined it on the occupants hearing what was up. At each accession the blushing bride would clap her little hands and cry out in pleased welcome and—yes, and kiss the groom. A wedding is rare on the river, and poor Chloe had no precedents, only the dictates of her heart; so judge her mildly.

The little chapel was radiant with flags and flowers and palm leaves, but the novelty of the scene lay in the people. After dressing up for the ceremony, the negro and Boviander women were something to look at. What with the unaccustomed boots and corsets, they could but walk in limps and breathe in gasps—but they were fashionably attired, and that was the point. They smiled, were admired by the men, and what more was to be wished?

There followed the wedding feast, and such a feast as it was. The forests had been ransacked by Bunting's Indian relations. Of fried, boiled, roasted and stewed, there was no end; the meats of deer, labba, acouri, parrots and other bush fowls steamed along with all sorts of fish from the river. Of fruit there were oranges, mangoes, pineapples and a lot else. Crowning all, on the bridal table, stood the mighty wedding cake specially ordered from Georgetown, and flanked with glass decanters containing wine, and a dozen or so of cheap porcelain dishes and plates of assorted patterns. The wine was served in tumblers, cups, pans, calabashes, etc., and the bride's health was formally drunk. All hands then fell to feasting, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon at the head of the middle table, Bunting and wife at the foot. Those who could not find room at the tables squatted on the floor. A crowd of other guests did likewise outside. Plates were scarce, and knives and forks scarcer; but there was plenty of banana bush and no lack of fingers. So the feast went on without a hitch.

The hitches—plenty of them, too—came later, after the half-dozen demijohns of rum began to circulate. The Indians were the first to be affected. A wild war-dance broke up the festal groupings, and thenceforward it was every man for himself. Gordon wisely cleared away with his bride, wishing to catch the falling tide and the Georgetown steamer. The orgy that followed baffles description. The curious mixture of savagery and civilization, of wedding gowns and nakedness, decanters and calabashes, plates and plantain leaves, toasts and swearings, got stirred to the dregs, and babbled up into a pandemonium. Then we saw the Boviander at his worst—and that is pretty bad.

I will not conveniently say, "let us draw a veil over that orgy." I see no reason to do so; the fact, honestly admitted, is that when it got to the pass of drawn knives, flourished clubs and flying stones, my companions and I determined that discretion was the better part of curiosity as well as valor—and we made tracks for the mission station. Returning to the settlement after dawn, we met a gold diggers' supply canoe, deeply laden, adrift on the current with the crew fast asleep. They had been among the volunteer wedding guests, and had been able to make a morning start—and no more. The cataracts were a mile or two below.

POLITICS IN MEXICO.

President Diaz Reelected for Another Term of Four Years.

In the excitement and confusion attendant upon the preliminaries of the presidential campaign in this country it may be entirely overlooked that the neighboring republic of Mexico has just finished her persidential election in a quiet and orderly manner and has triumphantly reelected Gen. Diaz.

The successful candidate is undoubtedly the ablest statesman in Mexico and one of her most remarkable men in every way, under whose past administrations that country has enjoyed comparative peace and a large share of prosperity. His political career has been a remarkable one. He was first elected to the presidency in 1877 upon a platform in which he inserted a plank making the president ineligible for reelection. The campaign was an exciting one, but he was successful by a handsome majority. In 1880 he retired and Gen. Gonzales, who had been secretary of war in his cabinet, was elected. Gen. Diaz taking the position of president of the judicial council. In 1884 he was once more elected and the constitution was so amended as to give him the right of succession. Under this provision he was elected in 1888 and in 1892 and now again in 1896.

Since Mexico achieved her independence she has had many governments, but her constitutional presidents have been as follows: Gen. Comonfort, 1857-'58; Don Benito Juarez, of Indian birth, 1858-'72; Don Sebastian Lerdo de Tejada, 1872 to 1876; Gen. Diaz (provisional), 1876; Gen. Mendez (substitute), 1876; Gen. Diaz, 1877-'80; Gen. Gonzales, 1880-'84, and Gen. Diaz, 1884, still in office, his new term expiring in 1900. Gen. Diaz rules a country of 751,700 square miles, divided into 27 states, two territories and a federal district, with an assessed value of $496,072,358 and an estimated population of 11,632,924. He will be inaugurated December 1 and will be assisted in government by seven secretaries—foreign affairs, home affairs, justice and public instruction, colonization, industry and commerce, treasury and public credit, war and the navy, and communication and public works. He has an army of about 27,000 men and a total fighting strength of about 160,000 men. The naval interests are protected by two unarmored vessels and three small gunboats. Of all the rulers of Mexico not one has advanced her interests or developed her resources more thoroughly than Porfirio Diaz.

TORNADO-PROOF HOUSE.

Revolves on a Pivot and Fires a Bomb Into the Storm.

The tornado-proof house is the latest. The house revolves on a pivot. At the back of it is a huge weather vane, fixed in such a manner that the dwelling must always face the wind. In fact, the whole structure turns with the wind, so that it would unnecessarily present its front to any "cyclone twister" that might happen to come along.

Out of a sort of porthole in the front of the house looks a cannon. This, says the New York Journal, is the most essential feature of the contrivance, inasmuch as the gun is loaded with an explosive bomb. When the revolving storm cloud strikes the dwelling the latter turns to face it, and the bomb is automatically discharged into the bowels of the twister, scattering its electrical energy and destroying it. The inventor states that he got his idea from the practice of firing guns from ships at waterspouts which approach dangerously near.

The Sky and the Weather.

The color of the sky at particular times affords a wonderfully good guide to the meteorological conditions to be expected within the coming 24 hours. Not only does a rosy sunset presage good weather and a ruddy sunset bad weather, but there are other tints which speak with equal clearness and accuracy. A bright yellow sky in the evening indicates wind; a pale yellow, rain. If in the morning the sky is of a neutral gray color the indications for a good day may be considered favorable. Generally speaking, it may be said that any deep or unusual hue betokens either wind or rain in summer, or both wind and snow in winter.

Proper Care of the Hands.

Frequent vigorous rubbing of the hands will promote the circulation and keep the skin in good condition. Care should be taken of the nails, too—they should be soaked in hot water occasionally and kept neatly trimmed.

MUSIC AND LETTERS.

English popular songs are at present heard a great deal in Paris cafes.

M. Sardou is writing a play for Henry Irving upon a subject chosen by the actor.

Coppee and Widor's ballet, "La Korrigane," has reached its 100th performance at the Paris grand opera.

An expurgated edition of "Tom Jones" is in course of preparation by Mrs. J. M. Fielding, the wife of the novelist's great-grandson.

Prof. Huxley's "Life and Letters," which his son, Leonard Huxley, is now arranging, will appear about two years from the present time.

Loretto litanies cannot be traced beyond the 15th century and did not originate at the shrine, but were carried there by pilgrims. Such is the conclusion, after careful examination, of Father Sauren, of Cologne.

CYCLING.

Mr. Goschen, the secretary of war, has followed Mr. Balfour's example and taken to the bicycle.

A speed of a mile in 58 seconds is claimed for a motor cycle exhibited at the Imperial institute, London.

The dean of Rochester says that in his opinion the pleasure of cycling as compared to the harm is as Niagara to a lemonade.

At a recent bull fight in Madrid the matadore was mounted on a bicycle. The animal made a dash at him, the matadore failed to turn quickly enough, and wheel and rider were tossed high in the air. The rider was only slightly hurt, but the wheel was utterly wrecked it's awfully hard on velvety skins. A beautiful skin is a maiden's most valuable possession. With it she can scorn glorious hair and Grecian features, and still be a charming girl.

We keep all the helps to beauty. Powder—perfume—lotions for sunburn and freckles—everything a girl could possibly need to make her prettier—and just now—when these helps are needed most, the prices are the smallest.

Delicate Dress Goods.

Some gowns are so dainty in the weave, so delicate in tint that they seem to soil by being looked at—one or two wearings making them unpresentable. NOT USELESS. We make a specialty of cleaning fine fabrics, the more delicate the material, the better the results. Sometimes an accident will ruin a gown, without injuring the texture. We dye them then, sometimes we get a prettier effect than the original color. Fine goods stand redyeing. The finer the material the better the new color. We charge so little for cleaning or dyeing, that even if you are in doubt as to the result, it's worth while to experiment. Want a new evening gown for a dollar or two? Laundry drivers will receive your work.

A BLOW TO HAZING

The President's Emphatic Declaration on the Practice.

MEAN AND COWARDLY, HE DECLARES

Severe Punishment Necessary for Its Prevention—Memorandum of the Chief Executive in Approving the Dismissal of Two West Point Cadets.

Washington, Aug. 15.—The president in dimissing cadets Giles Bishop, jr., and H. S. Commager from the military academy at West Point seizes the opportunity to express his contempt for hazing in forcible language. These cadets were tried by court martial last month for making "plebes" stand on one foot in a painful attitude while they were otherwise tormented and harrassed. One boy was compelled to go through the "full bend leg exercise" of the drill regulations, while holding Indian clubs aloft, according to the findings. In approving the sentence of Bishop the president wrote: The offense of maltreating and abusing new cadets by upper classmen is so mean and cowardly and so opposed to every trait that should characterize a gentleman and a true soldier, that severe punishment should be necessary to its prevention. If, however, punishment must be resorted to effect a discontinuance after this disgraceful practice, I can do no less than to resist all appeals for clemency. The endorsement on the Commager case was as follows: I am determined in all cases of this description, when the proof is clear, to refuse relief to those cadets who, in violation of a wholesome regulation of the military academy, indulge in the brutal and cowardly treatment to beginners', commonly called "hazing." GROVER CLEVELAND.

Accidentally Shot and Killed.

Waterville, Me., Aug. 15.—News reaches this city of an accidental shooting at Unity, whereby Benjamin Bartlett lost his life. Benjamin Bartlett, and three or four companions all from Massachusetts, were camping out at Unity lake and the party was in a boat when rain commenced. One member of the party had a gun and in trying to put it under a coat to protect it, the weapon was accidently discharged, the load striking Bartlett, who lived an hour.

Injunction Against a Railroad Company.

Norwalk, Conn., Aug. 15.—Bridgeport attorneys, representing David Bradley Compo, who claims to own the entire water front known as Compo beach and Cedar point, have served papers on the Westport & Saugatuck Street Railroad company restraining their contractors from continuing the Compo Beach branch further than the highway which abruptly ends on a rise above the sea. The papers are returnable to the superior court the first Tuesday in September.

Pan-American Congress.

Mexico, Aug. 15.—The sessions of the Pan-American congress have begun here, although most of the strong countries have declined to send delegates. This congress was called at the instigation of Ecuador, and that republic is represented, as are also Salvador, Costa Rica, Guatemala and Honduras. Sessions are held daily at the national palace and are private, being presided over by Lewis Carbo of Ecuador.

NANSEN EXPEDITION

Considerable Information Gained by the Arctic Explorer.

LACK OF DOGS THE ONE OBSTACLE

Why He Was Compelled To Give Up the Journey to the Pole—Spent the Winter at Franz Josef Land—A Surprise for the Explorer.

Vardoe, Norway, Aug. 15.—Dr. Nansen, whose return from the Arctic regions was announced yesterday, says that the Fram drifted with the ice in a westerly direction to 84 degrees, and he expects that the vessel will eventually arrive at Spitzbergen. He adds that wherever they penetrated they found the ice broken. Large patches of water were also found 3,800 metres deep. Below the depth of 190 metres the water was appreciably warmer, probably owing to the Gulf stream. Rocky scars, of which the explorers had no previous knowledge, prevented entrance into the Olenek river for days. In consequence of the scarcity of dogs with the expedition, Dr. Nansen was compelled to turn back at 85 degrees, 15 minutes. He says that if he had been provided with a sufficient number of dogs and canoes the pole would have been reached. The land voyoge was most arduous, but extremely valuable scientific results were obtained. In the autumn of 1895 Dr. Nansen reached the north coast of Franz Josef Land and built a stone house in which he lived the whole winter. The Jackson-Farnsworth expedition arrived at Franz Josef Land during the following spring. Jackson met Dr. Nansen in June on the ice floes of cape Flora. Dr. Nansen was surprised at the presence of explorers on Franz Josef Land, as he himself had been living in a hut quite close to one of Jackson's stations for a long time.

Fed Dog to Dog.

Dr. Nansen says that during the winter when there was no bears' flesh to feed to the dogs he killed the weakest dogs and fed them to the others until the whole pack was killed. He and Lieutenant Hansen started on May 19 to try to reach Spitzbergen. After traveling for six weeks on snowshoes, dragging sledges partly over land and partly over sea ice, they reached the quarters occupied by F. G. Jackson of the Windward expedition. The members of this expedition were found to be healthy and Dr. Nansen and his companion remained with them for six weeks until the steamer Windward arrived with supplies for Jackson's party. When the steamer started on her homeward voyage Dr. Nansen and Lieutenant Hansen accompanied her to this place.

SPORTS

SATURDAY, August 15. Sun rises 5:9 a. m., sets 7:7 p. m. Lanterns must be lighted between 8:8 p. m. and 4:7 a. m.

Cyclists desiring to join the League o American Wheelmen will be furnished with application blanks and necessary information by addressing the Cycling Department of the Daily Press.

CYCLING COMMENT.

Thomas Brantingham, the well-known lover of sports, has purchased a new wheel.

A. W. W. Evans, the crack long distance bicycle rider of New Brunswick, has started for Dallas, Texas, where he will stop at the Windsor Hotel.

Tunis Carey and James Buckle rode their wheels to Philadelphia yesterday returning in the evening by train. Mr. Buckle rode a Jersey, and likes it very much.

Burt Jacobus had an ugly fall at the L. A. W. division races held at Paterson, running off on the turn, smashing his front wheel, but escaped without injury. F. W. L. Fullerton, formerly of this city, also ran over, but neither himself nor wheel was injured.

Wheelmen will benefit greatly by a new road which is about to be constructed between Asbury Park and Long Branch. A contract for building a stone road 4.85 miles long on what is known as Norwood avenue and Deal road, was let last night for $40,504. Work was begun today.

Mrs. S.A. Cruikshank, of Watchung and Belvidere avenues, was seen on the streets this morning with a new and novel idea in bicycling. There was nothing unusual about the bicycle but the overhead canopy was pronounced a great improvement and will doubtless soon come into general use.

On the last bulletin of Chairman Gideon, of the L. A. W. Racing Board, there appeared the announcement that Linford Lefferson, of Ocean Grove, had been suspended for sixty days, on occount of making a false entry in the recent Flushing meet. Lefferson was suspended, but he proved to the satisfaction of Mr. Gideon that he was innocent, and the suspension was revoked. Lefferson has often ridden at the Crescent Oval and is a personal friend of W. M. McCutchen, Plainfield's crack rider.

The next chief consul of the New Jersey Division, L. A. W., may be Robert Gentle, who is the present incumbent of the office. Mr. Gentle has made of the very best officials ever in charge of the division, and there are numerous clubs that are demanding of him to run again for the chief consulship, and if he can be prevailed upon to permit the use of his name by the nominating committee there is no doubt that he will succeed himself for another term. No better man could be selected for the high honor.

Edward B. Waite, of West Newton, Mass., was in town over last night, a guest at Fred Caspar's Hotel. About three weeks ago he started out on his wheel for Washington, D. C., where he arrived in a trifle less then six days, stopping over at several places on the way. After a visit with friends in Washington and making a general observation of the city and Government buildings. He reached this city about 9 o'clock last evening on his homeward trip. He left early this morning for Hackensack, and expects to reach his home on or before Tuesday.

It is likely that the coming winter will see double the number of indoor clubs organized. Bicycle riding will become as much of an indoor amusement as dancing has been. It is a fact that many who have been devoted to dancing and found the greatest pleasure in it have forsaken it for the bicycle. There are on foot plans for doubling the present number of bicycle academies the coming fall. Assurances have been given the proprietors of these proposed academies of the support of enough patrons to assure success. Tandem riding, which has been so popular this season, will be indulged in for indoor riding.

During the last week of warm weather the bicycle has been used largely as a means of keeping cool. For the time being the rider seems well repaid for his trouble, but he does not think on the after results which are almost sure to follow. The extra exertion has caused a diminution of the physical force of the rider, and the extra speed at which he has been going has gotten the body into a heated condition, which is only apparent when the rider has stopped to rest. It is then that the bad effects are likely to result, for with the body thus charged the sudden change will, unless the body is well protected by woolen undergarments, result in a severe cold. Aside from this, there is almost certain to follow a feeling of lost energy and expended strength which will not be easily gotten rid of.

LAWN TENNIS.

Plainfield will not be represented at the national championship tennis tournament at Newport this year. A. P. Simmonds is suffering from a sprain and C. F. Walz and F. K. Fish, Jr., are both out of condition. Thomas U. Smith and Henry V. Rider are both putting up a strong game and would have stood some show with the lesser cracks.

WITH ROD AND GUN.

Thomas Shurley, George W. Scribner and William Cadmus, went fishing at Sewaren yesterday.

AROUND THE BASES.

The Asbury Park baseball team has disbanded for lack of patronage.

Resolutions of Condolence.

At a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Dime Savings Institution of Plainfield, N. J., held at its banking room on the thirteenth day of August, 1896, to take action on the death of Elias R. Pope, one of its directors, the following preamble and resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Whereas, It has pleased our Heavenly Father in his all-wise providence to remove from our number by death so suddenly, our beloved friend, co-director and officer, Elias R. Pope, who from the organization of this institution in the year 1868, has so ably and efficiently filled the office of Secretary and Treasurer, and thereby aided and assisted his co-directors in watching over and protecting the affairs of this institution, it seems but proper and fitting that we should put upon record in remembrance of him and his faithful service with us as such director and officer suitable expressions of our regard for him, and of condolence with his bereaved family: therefore be it

Resolved, That we hereby record our appreciation of his faithful and efficient service as director and officer of this institution during his full term of service with us.

Resolved, That we hereby tender to his bereaved widow and family our heartfelt sympathy in this their deep affliction in the taking from them the devoted husband and father so suddenly, in the prime of manhood, while planning for usefulness and devotion to his family and friends, and service to the community in which he has lived so long and served so faithfully.

Resolved, That we do hereby bear testimony to his efficient and upright service as a citizen, in the discharge of his duties in the several positions of trust and responsibility to which he has been called to fill by his fellow citizens, by appointment and election; that while his fellow co-laborers were seeking rest and recreation at the mountains, seaside and in Europe, he was always found at his post of duty and service, surely it may be said of him that he has laid down his life for his friends.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be entered in full on the minutes of this institution and a copy thereof forwarded to his family and published in the city papers.

Congratulations for The Daily Press.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—We congratulate you upon the progressiveness shown by your bright and newsy sheet. We have had the pleasure of reading it since a large party of your townspeople have been making things lively at Point Breeze Camp on Lake Wentworth, four miles from this village. Mr. Roome, one of the party, very kindly gives us his copy after he has read it. We are not yet certain which has the most hustle—the campers or The Daily Press. Wishing you the continued success which your paper must command, we are, in closing,

Choose the Wrong Tree.

A colored emulator of George Washington appeared in the city court this morning. His name was Phillip Johnston and he selected a peach tree instead of a cherry tree, however, and used his knife as he didn't have a hatchet handy. The tree was the property of Mrs. Martha Jones, of the "Crystal Palace," or Dunlap's Row, and overhung Johnston's property. The judge suspended sentence with a warning.

Unraveled the Skein.

City Judge DeMeza had a snarl to unravel this morning in court, when the case of Thomas Marley was tried. Marley was charged with striking Spencer Clickner by the latter's mother. It came out in the trial that Clickner had first struck Marley's daughter Mary. The Judge laid the blame for the trouble on Clickner and dismissed the charge against Marley.

That Catarrh is a Local Affection of the membrane of the nose, throat, etc., is a fact established by physicians, and this authority should carry more weight than assertions of incompetent parties, who claim that catarrh is a blood affection, in order to make a market for their compound. Applied directly to the inflamed membrane, it restores it to its healthy condition, affording quick relief and a cure after short continuance.

CROWNED WITH HONOR.

The Great Presbyterian, Rev. Chas. L. Thompson, D. D., of New York.

What Paine's Celery Compound Has Done for the Eloquent Preacher.

From no one class of men has Paine's celery compound received more unstinted praise for its wonderful powers of making the sick to be well again than from ministers of the gospel in every denomination.

Rev. Father Ouelet, Rev. Dr. Meek, the editor of the "Central Methodist," Rev. Dr. Baird, Rev. W. J. White, D. D., of the Georgia Baptist, are among the hosts of clergymen who have gratefully published, that their experience might be of benefit to others, the ever true story of how this greatest of all remedies makes people well, building up the shattered nerves, enriching the thin blood and rooting out disease.

Rev. Charles L. Thompson, D. D., pastor of the Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church in New York city, is a man crowned with honor. Before going to the celebrated church where he now preaches in New York he served in prominent pulpits in Cincinnati, Chicago, Pittsburg and Kansas City. He has written much and well on themes of public interest, presided over the Centennial General Assembly in Philadelphia, and has been often a commissioner and chairman of leading committees, and an exceptionally forcible debater in all the church courts.

His large charity has made him a welcome representative of his church to other churches and to his brethren of other lands.

Dr. Thompson is a prodigious worker. He is one of the many thousands who have discovered what Paine's celery compound does for those who are worn-out by labor, who are suffering from some stage of nervous exhaustion, and who require a health-giving remedy that will speedily replenish the system with proper nutriment.

Writing from New York on June 23, Dr Thompson said:

"I think to the use of Paine's celery compound is due the fact that after a winter of exhausting work I have been able to carry my duties through the enervating springtime with unusual ease and comfort."

To the multitude who suffer from the enervating effects of the warm weather in this climate, this plain straightforward statement from so eminent and fearless a clergyman should be heeded.

Paine's celery compound has put an end to an enormous amount of sickness and disease.

It began at the very outset of its splendid career to cure men and women of kidney troubles, liver complaint and nervous prostration. Its speedy and lasting cures of all these nerve and blood disorders were not slow in spreading its reputation through every State in the country. Physicians everywhere greeted the great remedy as the most enlightened, most skillful means that could be employed for invigorating the "run-down" system.

Thousands of wholly disinterested men and women saw their neighbors and townspeople made well by Paine's celery compound.

This epoch-making discovery in medicine, due to the patience, thoroughness and zeal of the great Dartmouth College scientist, stands today unquestioned as the greatest brain and nerve strengthener and restorer the world possesses.

LAST SATURDAY'S BALL GAME A WRETCHED EXHIBITION.

The Home Team Not in It With the Murray Hill Boys—A Large Crowd Was Disappointed—How it Happened.

The uncertainty of baseball was never more clearly shown then on Saturday afternoon when the Y. M. C. A. team crossed bats with the Murray Hill team of New York. One week ago the Plainfield baseball loving public were given a suberb exhibition of the National game when the N. J. A. C., visited this city. Last Saturday fate sought the other extreme, and as a result one of the most wretched and heart-rending games was witnessed by an unusually large crowd, which was attracted by the game of a week ago. Enthusiasm was at ebb and a more thoroughly disappointed crowd it would be hard to find anywhere. From the start to the finish the Y. M. C. A. boys were clearly out-played, and in fact they were not in it. The Murray Hill team is composed of some of the best semi-professional players to be found in this section of the country, and they certainly gave the home team one of the worst drubbings they ever got.

During the game they suceeeded in getting three hits off of Graham, whose pitching was the feature of the contest. Burt pitched his usual good game, but his support was wretched, and it could not be expected that he could win the game alone. In the sixth inning MacLaughlin was put in the box, Burt in right field, Schenck on first base and Symons in left field. With this change the visitors failed to score during the balance of the game.

As will be noted by the score the home team made eleven errors, and they were all inexcusable ones. In the first place it would be wise judgment to take Sansom off of second base and put him in the field where he formerly played. Another advisable change would be to place Schenck on first base, as he plays that position with the utmost certainty and nothing escapes him. With these changes the team would no doubt be doubly as strong, as the other players fill their positions well. In Saturday's contest the whole team was demoralized, and nothing under the sun could have prevented the landslide after the decline was started. The visiting team played a very strong game. Their batting and fielding was remarkable, though only eight hits were secured off of Burt and one off of MacLaughlin. O'Gorman who played in left field won hearty applause for making several phenomenal catches. A feature of the game was the work of the umpire, James Brown. On several occasions he favored the visitors, but on the whole his decisions gave satsifaction. It is to be hoped that the home team will not give another such exhibition. If they do, a notable decrease in the attendance will result.

Next Saturday the Elizabeth Athletic Club team will play a return game in this city against the home team, and no doubt a good game will be witnessed as the previous game between these two teams was close and exciting.

Below is the full score of Saturday's game:

Union County's Record for the Year a Large One.

In order to be able to vote at the coming election all aliens in this county must file their applications with the county clerk by Sept. 15th. The number of applications this year has been far in excess of any previous year. The clerk's office will be kept open to-morrow and Friday nights, and all persons wishing to cast a vote should see to it that their applications are made. Last Friday night about 15 applications were received, and a table for the year proves very interesting, showing, as it does, the various foreigners who have foresworn allegiance to their respective mother countries. There are two sorts of papers issued; one to those who came to this country when under 18, and the other to those who were of age when they reached here. The table follows:

OBITUARY.

James Francis Pearson.

James Francis Peason, one of Plainfield's most highly respected citizens, died Saturday at his late residence on Clinton avenue, at the age of sixty years. He had sterling qualities and was very much beloved by a very large circle of friends and acquaintances. He scorned to wrong his fellowmen, was true to all his obligations moral and legal, was fair to the strong and helpful to the weak, was manly, faithful, honest and upright.

He was for many years a book and job printer in the city of New York, and carried on the business up to the time of his death. Mr. Pearson was a man who possessed the entire confidence of all who knew him in business matters as well as in his social relations. He faithfully discharged all the duties of a good citizen and was a very estimable Christian gentlemen. He was also extremely kind hearted and genial, so that his society was much enjoyed by his friends, whilst his enemies, if he had any, could say nothing to his injury.

Mr. Pearson leaves an aged mother, one daughter and four brothers to mourn his loss.

A Poor Peach Crop.

Harry Campbell, of the firm of Clifton & Campbell, reports from Maryland and Delaware that the peach crop will not be up to the expectations of growers. The warm weather forced the growth and made all ripen at once. Parties wanting to can this fruit may find it advantageous to do so now. Daily shipments arrive almost every morning.

Disturbing The Salvation Army.

Complaint has been made by Constable George Rockafellow against Orrin Holmes for raising a disturbance at the Salvation Army barracks. He will come up for trial before City Judge DeMeza on Saturday morning.

Volunteer Meetings Well Attended.

There was a large attendance at the American Volunteer meetings yesterday. Major Trumbull, staff bandmaster at the New York headquarters, was present with his cornet and assisted at the meetings.

A Triple Charge.

James Moran will come up for trial in the city court next Saturday on the charge of kicking young Hudson Morris, throwing him into the street and being disorderly on Plainfield avenue.

"Boys will be boys," but you can't afford to lose any of them. Be ready for the green apple season by having DeWitt's Colic and Cholera Cure in the house. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

BURNED TO THE GROUND

BARNS AND MILL OF THE EPHRAIM VAIL ESTATE DESTROYED.

A Bolt of Lightning Struck One Barn And All Were Soon Wrapped in Flames—There Was No Insurance.

Another thunderstorm visited this section last evening, and although the lightning did not seem severe in Plainfield, it managed to do considerable damage on the outskirts of the town.

A bolt of lightning struck one of the large barns of the Ephraim Vail estate on Greenbrook road, about a mile from Dunellen, now belonging to Abram Vail, of East Third street, and occupied by John Case and family. In a few moments the barn was all ablaze, the flames soon spread to the other two barns and the cider mill adjoining and, in an hour all that remained was a heap of smoking ruins from which the flames fitfully rose and fell.

Mr. Case, his sons and farm-hands succeeded in saving all all the wagons and live stock except two horses. The latter were supposed to have been burned to death, but were afterwards found in a neighboring lane in a badly burned condition, but still alive. There was quite a quantity of hay in the barns and the structures burned like tinder illuminating the country for miles around. The reflection of the fire was seen in the borough and it appeared so near that an alarm was sent in from Box 152, at the corner of Linden avenue and Grove street. The hose cart and firemen responded and went toward the fire as far as the water mains extended. Then another alarm was sent in from Box 154, at the corner of Rockview avenue and Rockview terrace, to bring out the steamer. The adventurous spirits meanwhile investigated and found that the fire was beyond the borough limits so that the department returned without waiting for the arrival of the engine.

The Dunellen fire department started to respond to the fire but it was beyond the limits of that borough also and the very muddy condition of the roads made the way almost impassible. No effort was made to extinguish the flames but only to save the surrounding buildings Wet blankets were used and, despite the sparks that filled the air, the house and an open wagonshed escaped the ravages of the flames.

The house itself has quite a history. It was the first two story frame building to be erected between New Brunswick Landing and the Blue Mountains. It was built in 1774, and during the Revolutionary War, the lower floor was often occupied by the British soldiers, who would take possession late at night and leave early in the morning, before the family appeared.

It is rather difficult to estimate the loss, but those who should know estimate it at between $2,000 and $3,000. The cider mill, with its press and all the other apparatus, was a total wreck. Mr. Case had no insurance on stock or property, although he has been planning to for some time.

A large tree opposite the house was also struck by lightning.

Burned by Moulten Iron.

Patrick Lyons, an employe in the foundry at Pond's, was crossing the floor in the foundry with a ladle of moulten iron on Friday, preparatory to making a pouring, when he stumbled and fell, allowing the hot iron to be thrown about like water. Some of the hot metal struck him on the face, burning the flesh badly and singeing off his eyelashes. The wounds were dressed by the shop surgeon.

Struck by Lightning.

The large chimney on the residence of Dr. W. E. Stelle, of Park avenue, was struck by lightning during the severe storm of last Friday morning The chimney has a very broad top and one corner of it was shattered by the bolt. No other damage was done to the house.

Knows a Good Thing.

C. H. Lippincott, formerly of this city, but now of West Kinney street, Newark, has not lost interest in his old home. He writes The Daily Press: "Since I have moved out of Plainfield I miss your paper very much, and would like to have you mail it to me."

Will Attend the State Convention.

N. H. Saxton, J. D. Anderson, I. N. Wyckoff and Charles F. Stephens will represent the local camp of the Patriotic Order Sons of America at the State convention to be held at Perth Amboy on Wednesday.

The Operation Was Successful.

Rose Marron, of the borough, who was taken to the hospital suffering with appendicitis, is very much improved. An operation was performed and the chances of her recovery are excellent.

TROUBLE ON THE AVENUE

J. M. SMALLEY'S BUGGY AND J. D. M'CLINTOCK'S WHEEL COLLIDE.

A Law Suit and a City Court Case Resulted, and the Latter Was Tried this Morning—The Decision Was Reserved

One of the most important cases that the City Judge has been called upon to decide came up in Judge DeMeza's court this morning. Local horsemen and cyclists were much interested in the result as an important question was to be settled. The case was against Jedediah M. Smalley, one of the popular Somerset street butchers, Smalley Brothers, for fast and reckless driving.

Sometime ago on an evening, Smalley was out driving with a friend and was going south on Park avenue when he met Mr. McClintock and Ex-Judge W. A. Coddington, the latter two on their wheels at the corner of North avenue. The testimony of several of the witnesses, who saw the affair, was that Smalley was driving on the left of the street at a rapid pace when the two cyclists came along. They attempted to go to the right but there was not sufficient space between the carriage and the curb to allow them to pass so they turned to the left. Then, the witnesses claim, Smalley ran into the wheelmen. Smalley says that McClintock turned directly into Smalley's buggy.

At any rate, McClintock's wheel was wrecked and he was badly bruised and cut. Sergeant Kiely and Roundsman Frederickson were standing near and saw the whole affair. A complaint was immediately made against Smalley for fast driving while McClintock started a suit against him in Justice Newcorn's court for $50.

Both cases were to come up today, but the one in Justice Newcorn's court was adjourned for one week.

In the other case it seemed to be a question of the veracity of the witnesses. Mr. Smalley and his companion declared that they were not driving fast or recklessly, while Mr. McClintock, ex-Judge Coddington, Sergeant Kiely, Roundsman Frederickson and Jacob Jones thought the opposite. Judge DeMeza reserved his decision.

SUING FOR DAMAGES.

Geoghen's Corn Field Was Cut Into Building Lots.

The case of Geoghen against Cadmus was opened this morning at 10 o'clock before Justice Mattison and a twelve men jury in the reading room of Boyce's hotel on Somerset street. Lawyer Murphy represented the plaintiff and Walter Hetfield the defendant. The case was adjourned at noon and re-opened at two o'clock.

L. R. Blackford, D. D. Smalley, Frank Jones, J. J. Kliner, J. J. Kline, Chas. Sprigg, J. Giddis, A. G. Perry, J. Vaughn, Jacob Gaub, W. P. VanHorn, and J. W. VanHorn composed the jury. The case is one where the plaintiff claims $200 damages to his property near Cadmus's mill. His ground was planted with corn etc., and since then the land was cut up for building lots, and upon that fact he claims $200.

Visiting Firemen.

J. Hardgrove, Andrew J. Hopper and Thomas Sellic, all members of the Irvington Fire Department were inspecting the fire department headquarters on East Second street when the alarm was sent in at 1:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon, and got a good insight into the workings of Plainfield's model department. The visitors were exceedingly well pleased with the work and the quick manner in which the members responded to the call. Before leaving the visitors signified their intention to ask the Irvington authorities for a similar service.

Justice Newcorn's Court.

The following cases are being considered in Justice Newcorn's court: Watts et ux., against Miller, adjourned to Sept. 7th; Miller against Watts et ux., adjourned to August 24th; McVey against Johnson, VanWinkle against Johnson, McClintock against Smalley, adjourned for one week; Johnson against Hoffman, discontinued. Summons has been issued in the case of Shafkey against Warman, returnable August 24th.

An Unlucky Step.

Conductor Huxley, of the street railway, and his wife, returned Saturday evening from a week's vacation spent at Albany. While walking down West Front street Mr. Huxley stepped on a round stone which threw him down. As a result he received a slight cut on the head, but the injury is not a serious one.

Arthur E. Crone, of the City National Bank, has returned to his duties after a week's outing in the Catskill Mountains.

DEATH OF A GOOD WOMAN.

Mrs. Sophia L. Wood Passes Away at Belmar After a Long Illness.

Mrs. Sophia L. Wood, formerly of Madison avenue, this city, died at Belmar yesterday after an illness lasting several months. Mrs. Wood went to the shore in the hopes that she would recover her health, but instead she rapidly grew worse.

The decedent was a lifelong member of the First Baptist church and was a faithful attendant. Five children survive her. They are Miss Louise Wood, Miss Alice Wood, Miss Lucia Wood, Garrett Wood and Charles Wood. Mrs. Wood was the widow of the late George W. Wood, of Brooklyn.

The body was brought to Plainfield today and the funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon from 615 Central avenue at 3 o'clock.

A Substantial Token.

Rev. James Groves, pastor of the Mount Zion A. M. E. church of this city, delivered his farewell sermon, previous to his departure for a two-week's vacation in Pennsylvania and Atlantic county, New Jersey, last evening. At the close of the service, the pastor was presented with a substantial purse of money as a token of esteem in which he is held by his congregation. Rev. Mr. Groves started on his vacation this morning.

Rev. Mr. Kelly Leaves.

Rev. M. B. Kelly and family returned to Alfred, N. Y., Saturday evening after spending four months in this city. Rev. Mr. Kelly has been preaching in the Seventh Day Baptist church in this city during the absence of Rev. A. H. Lewis, D. D, on his missionary trip to the West and now that the latter has returned to his charge, Mr. Kelly has left Plainfield. He has been boarding on West Fifth street.

A Former Plainfielder Married.

The marriage of Charles P. Gelhaar and Miss Gertrude Marie Sharp, both of Jersey City, is announced. The wedding took place last Wednesday at the home of the bride. Many Plainfield friends will remember Mr. Gelhaar, who formerly resided in this city. The bride and groom are now enjoying their honeymoon at "The Neptune," Asbury Park.

A Dangerous Place.

Complaint is made of a certain piece of sidewalk on West Second street near the engine house, where persons frequently stumble and fall on account of the uneveness of the surface. Saturday night one young woman stumbled and fell head-long on the sidewalk, but very fortunately she escaped with only a few slight bruises.

Want New Helmets.

Some of the North Plainfield police officers are wondering and asking questions why the Borough Council don't equip its officers with white gloves and light helmets. They say the heavy winter helmets, which they are now wearing, are cumbersome for this season of the year.

An Unlucky Slip.

L. S. Dunavan, of East Second street, while trying to jump on No. 2's hose wagon yesterday afternoon, when the latter was going to the fire on Rahway road, slipped and sustained a painful cut on the knee. He pluckily remained on the wagon and did good work at the fire.

Begging on the Streets.

Roundsman Mattox found Mary Luke soliciting money from the store keepers on Park avenue Saturday afternoon and put a sudden stop to it. She promised to stop at once and hurried away so the officer did not lock her up.

If you have ever seen a little child in the agony of summer complaint, you can realize the danger of the trouble and appreciate the value of instantaneons relief always afforded by DeWitt's Colic & Cholera Cure. For dysentery and diarrœa it is a reliable remedy. We could not afford to recommend this as a cure unless it were a cure. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

THE CHEMICAL AT WORK

IT COMPLETELY PROVES ITS USEFULNESS AT TWO FIRES.

A Small Fire on North Front Street Saturday Evening—Residence on Rahway Road Just Escapes Destruction Sunday.

After a long period of quiet, Plainfield's fire department was suddenly roused into action by two fires within twenty-four hours.

One alarm came in Saturday evening about 8:30 o'clock from Box 15, which is located at the corner of East Second and Washington streets and the other yesterday afternoon about 12:30 o'clock from Box 29, at the corner of Watchung and Woodland avenues.

There was the regular Saturday night crowd on the streets last Saturday night when the sonorous tones of the fire-alarm whistle sounded an alarm from Box 15. There was a general exodus in the direction of the box from which the fire seekers were directed to North Front street. North Front street is a short narrow street opening at one end into Westervelt avenue and running parallel to East Front street. The fire was in a double house just off of Westervelt avenue and, in less time than it takes to tell it, the latter thoroughfare was crowded with the fire apparatus and the carriages and bicycles of curious spectators. The house is the property of Mr. Marcley, of New street. The side, where the conflagration was, was occupied by Mrs. Bird and family, and the other side was rented by Mr. Frank, whose mysterious disappearance was exclusively told in The Daily Press some time ago.

The blaze was a small one and was quickly extinguished by a stream from the chemical engine, the damage amounting to about $10. The cause of the fire was quite remarkable, however.

Mrs. Bird keeps a dog that is in the habit of sleeping on the table spread. When the spread is not removed, the dog pulls it off himself. Last night the family went out, leaving the lamp on the table and the dog in the room. From the appearance of things at the arrival of the firemen, it was evident that the dog had attempted to secure his bed and upset the lamp on the floor. The carpet and wood work were ignited but were only slightly burned.

The alarm was sent in by a lad named Armstrong, who lives in the Voehl flats on East Front street. He saw the blaze and, after making sure it was a fire, ran to the box.

The fire, Sunday afternoon, promised to be a destructive one and, had not the chemical engine worked so effective the loss would have been considerable. The alarm was sent in from box 29, but the house, where the fire was, was about a half mile beyond on the Rahway road, just at the top of the hill and only a few hundred yards inside the city limits. It was the recently purchased residence of Edward E. Pray. Only on Saturday, Mr. Pray and family had started on their summer outing, leaving the house in the charge of a trusty couple.

Yesterday afternoon, just as the preparations for dinner were being started, the house gradually began to fill with smoke. Finding the back stairs all aflame, the woman hurried to the residence of N. P. T. Finch, on Belvidere avenue, to get a fire alarm key. Her husband remained, doing his best to extinguish the flames with a garden hose. The pipe from the kitchen range passes under the back stairs to connect with a chimney and the fire is supposed to have started there from an overheated chimney.

The flames rapidly spread through the partitions and by the time the firemen arrived after a run of about two miles, the interior of the walls were all ignited while the flames had broken through the walls in several places. The house was filled with smoke which made ingress impossible. After the windows had been broken open and some of the smoke allowed to escape, ready hands were soon at work bearing out the furniture and valuables.

Two streams from the chemical engine were used and the contents of nearly four tanks of the combined gas and water, less than two hundred gallons in all, finally completely extinguished all the fire. It took almost an hour to do it, however, and the small amount of water used in that time is very remarkable. Had the regular streams of water been used it would have been necessary to completely flood the house to put out the fire in the walls and floors besides making it necessary to tear down a great deal of plastering and lathing. It may be remarked that 500 gallons of water are thrown by the ordinary stream every minute. The loss was only about $400 covered by insurance, and almost all of the furniture, including a brand new piano were saved.

The fire department deserve great credit for the very efficient work they did and for their judgment in only using the chemical engine, thereby probably reducing the loss by nearly $1000. The piano was a valuable one and would have been ruined had the water been turned on it.

Boston, Aug. 17.—Henry Barfield, formerly a postoffice employe at Liverpool, England, was arrested on the arrival of the steamship Pavonia at East Boston wharf yesterday on the charge of embezzling £400 from the Liverpool postoffice. The United States marshal had a warrant and extradition from England for the man's arrest. Barfield confessed to the British vice-consul and turned over $1,700 in cash. On the manifest his name appeared as John Bowell and his age was given as 28 years. He will be arraigned before the United States court to-day and will be given a hearing on the extradition papers. It is said that Vice-Consul Keating is not desirous of pushing the complaint as long as he has received the greater part of the money. Wilmington, Del., Aug. 17.—At 1 o'clock in the morning James Jones Bell, a colored man, reported to a police officer that he had seen murder committed on a freight train on the Philadelphia, Reading & Baltimore railroad on a bridge over the Gunpowder river. He said he and another colored man on their way to Philadelphia were robbed of their clothes by two tramps on the train. Bell's companion protested against the treatment, and when the train reached the bridge he was thrown off by the men who robbed him. The two men, Bell said, then left the train. The case was investigated, and a dispatch was received by Chief of Police Dolan that the body of a colored man had been found on the bridge, thus corroborating Bell's story. The body had been run over by a train.

Bronsart von Schellendorf and has appointed Gen. von Gossler, commander of the Hessian division, in his place as minister of war. The newspapers here ascribe the resignation of Gen. von Schellendorf, not to the army reform question, but to recent personal changes made in the army in opposition to his proposals. The Reichsanzeiger publishes a letter from Emperor William appointing Gen. von Schellendorf an imperial aide-de.camp, and thanking him for his services in the war ministry. His majesty expresses the hope that he will soon be able to avail himself of Gen. von Schellendorf's valuable knowledge in his capacity of aide-de-camp.

CLEVER SAYINGS OF COL. NORTH

He Wanted Some New Words for His Vocabulary.

The late Col. North, the nitrate king, had a ready, if somewhat rough, style of wit peculiar to himself. The trap in which he was seated being on one occasion blocked in a crowded thoroughfare in immediate juxtaposition to a costermonger's cart laden with vegetables, the coachman, finding that the horse was about to help himself to the cabbages, would have backed the animal out of harm's way.

"Let him graze," said the colonel; "I want to hear the man swear!" The costermonger, turning his head around at this moment, the colonel's wish was promptly gratified by an exceptionally choice and extensive selection of expletives. "Bravo!" said North, as he threw the man a coin that would have more than bought the whole cargo of vegetables. "I thought I was pretty well educated in your line myself, but hang me if you haven't taught me four new adjectives."

North, although fond of pictures, hated what one calls "doing galleries." Once, being pressed to go and see a picture after Rubens, he quickly replied: "After Rubens! Why, surely, Rubens was the brute they were after last year when you dragged me in here. Haven't they caught the old cuss yet?" The colonel loved children, but was not wildly keen on kissing babies miscellaneously. Once, being implored by a handsome lady to kiss an exceptionally unwholesome-looking infant, of which the mother stated herself to be the living image, "Well, here goes for the image," said North, and he forthwith imprinted a sounding kiss on the fair mother's cheek.—London World.

Has London Reached Full Growth?

The result of the recent census shows that during the last five years the population has increased somewhat less rapidly than it did in the previous ten, 1881-1891. The number of people turned out to be some 15,000 below the estimate formed on the basis of 1891. The difference is small, but important, as it shows that the previous fall in the rate of increase is maintained. The population is growing at a less and less rapid pace. At the beginning of the century it used to increase by more than 20 per cent. in the ten years between successive censuses; in 1881-1891 that rate had fallen to 10.4 per cent., the lowest on record; and now it is still less. The movement is not part of a general decline; it is peculiar to London, and seems to indicate that the huge overgrowth of the metropolis has begun to cure itself. No town can go on growing indefinitely, and even London—monstrous as it is—has not fulfilled the expectations of earlier statisticians. For the four years 1871-74 the average birth rate was 35.2; for the four years 1891-94 it was only 30.9. There has been a gradual and almost continuous fall from year to year, which has not been counterbalanced by the simultaneous but slighter fall in the death rate from 22.7 to 19.9. Fewer people die in proportion to the population, but still fewer are born. This is explained by the increasing disinclination to marry. The marriage rates for the two periods contrasted are 19.6 and 17.3 respectively.—St. James Gazette.

That

Tired Feeling is exceedingly common and dangerously significant. It is a warning which must be heeded, or, as with the express which fails to regard the danger signal, disaster must follow. It is a sure indication of thin, weak, impure blood. It is certain admonition that the blood is not properly feeding the nerves, tissues and organs of the body. Weak, nervous, men and women are found everywhere. Men strive too hard to "keep their business up," women work too much "on their nerves," all have too little sleep, there is excessive drain on strength and nervous energy, and all complain of that tired

By purifying and vitalizing the blood, Hood's Sarsaparilla furnishes abundant supply of nourishment for every nerve, organ and tissue of the body. Keep Up Your Scott's Emulsion in Summer-time

What are your resources for the summer? Have you an abundance of health stowed away for the long, hot, depleting days, or does summer find you low in vitality, run down, losing flesh, and weak? Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil will give you the proper reserve force, because it builds up the system on a solid foundation. A tonic may stimulate; Scott's Emulsion not only "boosts," it sustains.

It is a wise precaution always to have at least a small bottle of Scott's Emulsion in the house. Unopened, it will keep indefinitely. Tightly corked, after using, kept in a cool place, it will remain sweet for weeks.

NATIONAL POPULISTS

Arrival of the Advance Guard at Washington.

THE VICE-PRESIDENTIAL SITUATION

Secretary Edgerton Says the National Committee Has the Power of Confirming or Annulling Mr. Watson's Nomination—Bryan's Notification.

Washington, Aug. 17.—The advance guard of the national populist committee which is called to meet in Washington, has arrived here in the persons of J. A. Edgerton, secretary and member from Nebraska, and Committeeman Reed of Georgia. Mr. Edgerton, who is secretary of both the national and executive committees has located at the Shoreham and expects to remain in this city throughout the campaign. "It has not been determined where national headquarters will be established," said Secretary Edgerton this morning. "The committee will settle that question at their meeting to-morrow. The location will not depend on the action of the democratic committee and the populists may make still a different selection. Senator Butler and myself will be in charge of the headquarter when established and the active work of the campaign will at once be taken up. So far as I know the meeting of the committee will be devoted entirely to the transaction of routine business. It is impossible for me to say what will be done regarding the vice-presidential question. The national committee has plenary power in the matter of confirming or annulling Mr. Watson's nomination, but no discussion will be had as to whether this power should be exercised one way or the other until the meeting, if then. The notification of Mr. Bryan rests entirely with the committee appointed for that purpose, of which Senator Allen is chairman. I presume that he will be notified in some way and in some way signify his acceptance, but as to how or when or where, I have no idea. The special committee on notification will determine that matter for themselves and the national committee will not interfere. I think Mr. Bryan's speech in New York is the strongest presentation of the political situation that has ever been given. It is statesmanlike, strong, logical and of such character that no objection can be urged against it. It contains no unfortunate phases that might be calculated to shock some people. It will make an excellent campaign document, and that is the purpose for which it is intended. It will grow stronger and stronger with rereading."

Codfish in Great Supply.

St. Johns, N. F., Aug. 17.—Enormous quantities of codfish continue to be taken on the southwest coast, especially on that part of it between St. Johns and the peninsula of Burin. The residents of Trespass bay say that they never before saw the fish so plentiful. Stages, stores and houses are filled, while the beach in all directions is piled with fish. Thirteen schooners belonging to the Grand banks brought 20,000 quintals of fish.

Cecil Rhodes to Testify.

London, Aug. 17.—The secretary of state for the colonies will invite Cecil Rhodes to testify before the parliamentary committee appointed to inquire into the administration of the British South Africa company and into the origin of the circumstances of the incursion into the Transvaal by an armed force. Mr. Rhodes will probably be the first witness.

Claims Valuable Lands.

FLEEING FROM CUBA

Yellow Jack and Smallpox Frighten the Spaniards.

PANIC IN THE RANKS OF THE ARMY

Unacclimated Officials Seeking Leaves of Absence To Return to Spain—A Number of Officers Have Already Departed for Home.

New York, Aug. 17.—A dispatch to the Herald from Havana, via Jacksonville, says: The rapid spread of yellow fever and small pox is causing a veritable panic in the army ranks and unacclimated officials are all endeavoring to get away to Spain for a brief period in order to avoid the possible fatal consequences of remaining here during during the next six weeks. Lieut.-Gen. Ochando and Barges, two staff officers, two colonels, three lieutenant-colonels, two majors, six captains and two naval commanders have returned to Spain, and Capt.-Gen. Weyler is reported to have petitions from nearly a thousand others in active service, giving various excuses to support their claim for leave of absence from the island. Emigration continues, not Cubans alone being driven from the island. Four hundred and seventy-nine Spanish families left various Cuban ports during the week for the Canary islands and Central and South American republics.

CATHOLIC CHURCH BURNED.

St. Mary's Star of the Sea at Beverly, Mass., Almost Destroyed.

Beverly, Mass., Aug. 17.—St. Mary's Star of the Sea church (catholic) was almost entirely destroyed by fire yesterday. When a portion of the roof dropped in the rush of hot air overpowered three firemen. They were Henry M. Smith, Lewis A. Foss and Charles Taylor, all members of engine No. 1. Taylor escaped without serious injury, but Foss had an arm broken in three places, besides suffering bruises on the body. Smith sustained a broken wrist. The socrce of the fire is somewhat of a mystery, although two candles were left burning in the rear of the church and it is possible that the fire may have caught from these. The altar vestments were saved, but the silver altar furnishings are in the safe in the ruins. The total loss on the building and contents will probably exceed $30,000; insurance, $9,600.

The New Salvation Army.

Washington, Aug. 17.—Staff captain Blanche Cox of the Salvation army has entered upon a new style of work, to be conducted by the "Woman's Cavalry Brigade." The members of the brigade, seven in all, will make a two months' trip through Maryland, the Virginias and Dleaware in a coach, provided with all the necessary accessories to the army's peculiar style of meetings. They will stop first at Washington Grove, where they will meet Mr. and Mrs. Booth-Tucker, the new commander of the army in the United States, who will conduct the meeting to-day and dedicate the coach. A trip of more than a thousand miles has been planned to cover the cities and towns where the army has not been planted.

New York Tailors' Strike.

New York, Aug. 17.—Meyer Schoenfeld, the leader of the striking tailors, stated that the strike would probably be ended by to-morrow. Everything was quiet around the strikers' headquarters this morning. There were no meetings of any kind held, and apparently nothing more remains to be done except to await the action of the contractors who have not signed the agreement.

Senator Teller Endorsed.

Denver, Col., Aug. 17. — County conventions of the democratic party were held throughout the state Saturday, and in nearly every instance Senator Teller was endorsed and the support of the party was pledged to assist in his re-election next winter. Congressmen Shefroth, republican, and Bell, populist, were also endorsed by several counties.

Fair Tonight and Tuesday: Slightly Cooler.

At 2 o'Clock Leggett's Thermometer Registered 84 Degrees.

In no way can the punishment be made to fit the crime better than by nominating James E. Martine, the Plainfield Farmer-Orator, as the Democratic candidate for Senator in Union County. James is an enthusiastic believer in Free Trade, Free Silver and Free Racetracks. And then defeat doesn't canker his soul as it does some men; he is used to such experiences.—New York Tribune.

Be just—we have heard Mr. Martine repeatedly say that he was opposed to race track and gambling; that he had never made a bet in his life, and had never been on a race track, other than at a county fair, in his life. Mr. Martine's character and morals are known and respected by all people and parties in this city.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Edward Thorn, of East Second street, is recovering from a severe illness.

Geo. Hoffman, of Somerville, was the guest of Plainfield friends on Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry VanName, of Elmwood place, returned Saturday evening after an extended trip through New York State.

Mrs. Ira Vail, and grandson, Ira Vail, of Elmwood place, returned Saturday evening from New Brunswick, where they visited relatives.

Clifford M. Crane, of West Eighth street, and Benjamin O. Bowers, Jr., of Franklin place, left Saturday to spend their two-weeks vacation at Asbury Park.

E. H. Fields, of West Seventh street, started for Richfield Springs, N. Y., Saturday, where he will join his parents who are summering there. He will be absent two weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. LaRue, of New Brunswick, were guests yesterday of Mrs. LaRue's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Thorn, of East Second street. Mrs. LaRue will remain in Plainfield for two weeks. Mr. LaRue returned home this morning.

Mrs. Rhodie Nash, of this place, was taken in the night with cramping pains, and the next day diarrhoea set in. She took half a bottle of blackberry cordial but got no relief. She then sent to me to see if I had anything that would help her. I sent her a bottle of Chamberlin's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy, and the first dose relieved her. Another of our neighbors had been sick for about a week and had tried different remedies for diarrhœa but kept getting worse. I sent him this same remedy. Only four doses of it were required to cure him. He says he owes his recovery to this wonderful remedy.— Mrs. Mary Sibley, Sidney, Mich. For sale by T. S. Armstrong, Druggist.

WASHINGTON IN MARBLE

A Short History of Horatio Greenough's Statue.

Critics and Connoisseurs Consider It Inartistic and Ridiculous, But the People Seem to Like It.

[Special Washington Letter.]

On the grand plaza extending along the east front of the Capitol building directly opposite the central grand marble staircase is the Greenough statue of Washington. Visitors study it as a work of art, or carelessly pass it by without giving it a thought beyond the fleeting moment occupied in casual survey.

The statue is meritorious, but there is much of demerit in it to the eye of an experienced art connoisseur. As a matter of fact, there is little artistic merit in the statues thus far erected here, and there is less artistic merit in the paintings which hang upon the walls of the Capitol building. The large paintings in the rotunda, representing the landing of the pilgrims, the discovery of the Mississippi, the signing of the declaration of independence and the surrender of Cornwallis are not works of art, but daubs.

But the Greenough statue has a history. It is sculptured from soft Italian marble, and is mounted on a granite pedestal eight feet high. The statue is ten feet in height, and represents the father of his country as a Jupiter Tonans in sitting posture. The figure is naked to the waist, and thence a Roman toga falls gracefully, covering the legs and knees, exposing the feet bound in sandals of most ancient pattern. The right arm is elevated, the index finger pointing to the meridian, and the right hand holds a sheathed sword. Art critics commend the artist for the likeness of Washington, for the head is modeled after the painting and molding of Houdon, the great French master of the last century. But the conception of Washington in a Roman toga, with sandals on his feet, is regarded generally as a historical anachronism which ought never to have been perpetrated. The work is also subjected to severe criticism for the further development of the Roman idea, in that on the left side of the dais there is a bass relief of Apollo, the sun god, driving his chariot steeds across the heavens, while on the right side there is a representation of Hercules strangling the serpents.

Critics also point to the marble figures of an Indian warrior and Christopher Columbus on the sides of the seat, thus typifying Washington in Roman garb with mythical gods and demigods, with the discoverer of the fifteenth century and the aboriginal American of the seventeenth century. Altogether, the combination of artistic work is deserving of the destructive criticisms which have been passed upon it.

Donn Piatt, when publishing his free-lance paper called the Sunday Capital referred to the statue caustically, saying: "Poor George Washington sits out in front of the capitol without any clothing in all sorts of weather, while a full suit of his clothes is locked up in a glass case in the patent office."

The artist had a hard time of it, and the delays which occurred between the conception of the design, its acceptance by the government, the meager appropriations and its final unveiling, almost drove the sculptor insane. When completed the statue was subjected to violent criticism by the men of that day and at the same time received encomiums from artists of renown, some of them comparing it favorably with the masterpieces of Athens and Rome.

On August 7, 1783, the continental congress, in session at Philadelphia, passed a resolution authorizing the erection of "a bronze equestrian statue of Gen. Washington at the place where the residence of the congress shall be established, to express in durable form the deep gratitude of the nation for his triumphant conduct of the revolution." That was the original inception of the Greenough statue. During the lifetime of Washington nothing further was done. But Washington died December 14, 1799, and nine days thereafter, on December 13, 1799, the American congress passed a resolution ordering "that a marble monument be erected by the United States in the capitol at the city of Washington, that the family of Gen. Washington be requested to permit his body to be deposited under it, and that the monument be so designed as to commemorate the great events of his military and political life."

President John Adams communicated this resolution to the widow, Martha Washington, and she replied: "Taught by that great example which I have always had before me, never to oppose my private wishes to the public will, I must consent to the request made by congress, which you have had the goodness to transmit to me, and in doing this I need not, I cannot, say what a sacrifice of individual feeling I make to a sense of public duty." But it was developed subsequently that Martha Washington understood that her remains were to be interred beside those of her illustrious husband, and, in accordance with that idea, she directed that a leaden coffin precisely similar to that of her husband should inclose her body. When it was ascertained that the intention of congress was that only the remains of Washington should be interred in the national capital, her compliance was withdrawn. Therefore the body of Washington was never brought to this city, but was interred at Mount Vernon, side by side with that of his wife. The Washington heirs were represented by George Washington Parke Custis, who said: "They were lovely and pleasant in their lives, and in their deaths they were not divided."

George Washington was in his grave 33 years and a new generation came upon the scene of life before any further action was taken concerning the erection of a suitable monument to his memory. Those who have wondered that nothing has been done by congress for the erection of a suitable monument to the memory of Gen. Grant at Riverside park, need not marvel when they learn that so many years passed before anything tangible was done in memory of the Father of His Country. In 1832, 49 years after the passage of the first resolution by the continental congress, an appropriation of $5,000 was made for the beginning of a contract with a skillful artist for the construction and erection of a statue to be placed in the rotunda of the capitol. Edward Everett, from the committee on the library, made a report recommending the employment of Horatio Greenough, of Boston, and he was finally given the contract for the work, which he estimated would cost $20,000. President Andrew Jackson signed the contract, and it was specified that the head should be modeled after the Houdin cast.

In 1834 Greenough went to Florence, Italy, and there, after much travel and incessant study, began work upon his model. He worked steadily and carefully, and in 1840, after six years of painstaking effort, the work was completed. In 1841, after numerous vexatious delays, the statue was transported to America in the American ship Sea, of Norfolk, after the vessel had been altered so as to admit the bulky, boxed figure through its hatchway. No ordinary sailing vessel of that period would admit the statue in its hold, and there was not a ship in our navy which could transport it. There was considerable correspondence between Greenough and the secretary of the navy on this subject. Finally the Sea was chartered for $3,500 to bring the statue to Washington, with the privilege of stopping at other ports than Leghorn, for additional cargo. The anxiety of the artist to display this statue in the national capital without delay was such, however, that out of his own private funds he paid the commander of the Sea $1,500 to speed straight to Washington city with his precious burden. Consequently, on July 31, 1841, the Sea anchored at the navy yard in the Potomac river, and preparations were immediately commenced for the erection of the statue in the rotunda of the capitol. The sum of $3,000 was spent for a pedestal and $2,000 more was expended in the removal of the statue from the ship to the rotunda.

Nobody liked the statue after it was placed in position. It filled the center of the rotunda, the light upon it was unsatisfactory, and finally, at an expense of $3,000, it was removed to the position which it now occupies on the east front of the capitol, and was surrounded by an iron railing. Twenty years ago, however, the railing was removed, and there it stands an object of admiration and of criticism. Concerning its merits, each observer must judge for himself.

Ten years ago it was discovered that the frost and rain had caused the back of the statue to crack. The soft Italian marble could not withstand the vicissitudes of outdoor life. In 1889, by request of the senate committee on the library, the architect of the capitol was authorized to erect a temporary shelter, and since that time, in winter months, the statue is covered by a movable frame house, and the disintegration of the marble has ceased. Early in July the house was removed, and the statue is now exposed to public view by day and by night. Greenough, the artist, during his lifetime repeatedly urged congress to erect over and about it a pavilion for its protection; but congress never does anything right, until compelled to by stress of circumstances; and hence the pavilion has never been erected, and is not likely to be for years to come.

Concerning the criticisms made by critics of his own day, the artist wrote a memorial to congress, saying: "The designs of Frederick II., with his huge walking stick and preposterous queue; Louis XVI., with his redundant periwig, cumbrous robes and stilted shoes, were applauded by contemporaneous artists. The effect of those designs to-day is irrepressible laughter. I have been thereby influenced to avoid putting up in high places of this republic a colossal copy of an uncouth costume, which has already passed into disuse."

OUR COUNTRY COUSINS.

How the Model Guest Conducts Herself When Visiting Them.

This is the season of the year when the city folk look about for a place in which to spend the summer vacation. We hear the mountains calling to us, and the seashore extending us an invitation, and then others of us write to our country cousins, and in return for the brief visit they paid us last winter we announce ourselves ready to sojourn with them indefinitely. These country cousins are rather impressed with our grandeur, and nothing they have is too good for us. The best room is thrown open for our benefit, and the sunshine is allowed to pour in on the best brussels carpet and haircloth furniture. The neighbors give tea parties for us, and the wealth of the larder is spread out before us. They serve six o'clock supper, and the menu isn't at all like the meal we have been in the habit of having at that hour in the city. They have sauce and biscuit and spice cake and tea, and fill in the odd spaces on the table with plates of cottage cheese and cookies and fresh butter right from the churn that very morning. Those of us who are fortunate enough to have this kind of a summer come back to the city refreshed in body and spirit. The crickets and the katydids do not make the same sort of music that we find at the summer resorts, but they lull us to sleep rather early in the night, so that we are ready to respond to the cock's crow in the early morning. But the farm wife is up about her work long before we know it is day. She has done a day's work before sunrise, maybe, and even lazy old Sol peeps in at the kitchen door at her with a blush of crimson on his guilty face. Simple country living affords a great rest for overweary nerves, and those of us who have country cousins had better rejoice in the fortunate inheritance, and leave our city latchstring on the outside of the door for them during the winter season, when they come to town to see the sights.

The etiquette of visiting would fill a book, if it were set down in black and white. A hospitable New York woman who entertains a good many people during the course of the year tells me that there are but a very few of her list of guests who meet the requirements of the guest.

The model guest is one who comes when she is invited and goes home at the expiration of the time specified in the invitation. She makes her own bed, keeps order in her room and is all ready when the maid announces that the meal is served. I believe, in addition to these excellences, that she brings her own soap and scissors and comb and brush, and that, in case she does not do this, she, at least, on departure, refrains from appropriating any of the articles mentioned. The model guest busies herself with a bit of attractive needlework, which she afterwards presents to the hostess. She makes friends with the dog and cat, and she tells stories to the children, and admires the family baby and praises the cooking, and never forgets a little fee to the servants. She never intrudes herself during the household working hours, but settles herself in a snug corner with a book, and has the best kind of a time. Sometimes she dusts around a little, just for exercise, and she claims only the privilege of being one of the family. She knows how to express appreciation in a way that puts spurs in everyone's good endeavors, and she goes home while everybody is very fond of her and regrets her.

The model guest in the country anticipates a thousand ways in which she can help. Sometimes she churns just for the novelty, and when the country cousin washes dishes she wipes them for her. The model guest is a regular angel in the family, and she is always engaged for visits months in advance. It is all on account of her unselfishness and ready sympathy, and because she has the power of adapting herself to modes of life that belong to others rather than to herself, and finds every situation fraught with human interest.—N. Y. Recorder.

He Knew the Story.

On neutral ground they met, the man from Kentucky and the one from Ohio. It was in the middle of the Newport bridge, and they shook hands and looked through the railing at the river below them.

"I heard a good story to-day," said the Ohioan.

"Something about a Kentuckian's dislike for water, I suppose," said the Blue Grass chap, with a tired look in his face.

"No, about a Texas race. Fellow that saw it said he never saw such running done in his life. It was a foot race between a cowboy and a college graduate. They got together at a saloon down in the southern part of the state and ran to another saloon five miles away. The college boy beat the cowboy hands down, and—"

"And you told the man who told you," interrupted the Kentuckian, "that you could not believe the story because saloons in Texas aren't that far apart, eh? Yes, that was a good story when you and I were young."

Then the Kentuckian meandered Ohioward, while the man from the Buckeye state couldn't seem to get the satisfaction out of his cigar that he did before. — Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

Clark Howell a Popular Candidate for the Vice Presidency.

Clark Howell, who is now being mentioned as the vice presidential candidate on the democratic ticket, is a newspaper man of national reputation. He is the leader of the free silver democrats in Georgia, Alabama and South Carolina, and has done more to advance the cause of the white metal in the south than any other member of the party. To business men he is well known through his efforts to make the Atlanta fair an undoubted success and his strenuous endeavors to break the commercial barriers between the south and the northwest. He is young, and, though physically small, is an intellectual giant. He was born in Barnwell district, South Carolina, September 21, 1863. He is of revolutionary stock, the Welsh Howells, who immigrated to North Carolina in 1750, having furnished several brave soldiers in the war of independence. Mr. Howell was taught in the public schools of Atlanta and graduated from the University of Georgia in 1883. As soon as he left the university he served an apprenticeship on the New York Times as a reporter and afterward became the telegraph editor of the Philadelphia Press. From there he went to the Atlanta Constitution, on which paper he has been the guiding star since the death of Henry W. Grady. Mr. Howell first became night editor and then assistant managing editor under the great Grady. After the latter's death he became managing editor, and has occupied that position since then. But outside of his newspaper work he gained a reputation in the south for being a wise and astute legislator. He made rapid strides toward fame. He was nominated for the Georgia legislature before he had attained his majority and was elected a few days after his birthday. He was reelected in 1888 and 1890. He was chosen for speaker of the house for 1890-91, being the youngest man to hold that important place in the history of the commonwealth. He was only 28 years old then, and administered his great newspaper and the legislative body of Georgia with consummate ease and skill. As a newspaper man Mr. Howell is a strong and fluent writer, and has shown his journalistic power in the management of the Atlanta Constitution. As a legislator he has the reputation of possessing a wide grasp of public subjects and superb parliamentary skill.

COL. JOSEPH LEFFEL.

The Famous Midget Wants to Be Mayor of Springfield, O.

The announcement that Col. Joe Leffel, the famous midget, of Springfield, O., will be a candidate for mayor next spring, has caused considerable gossip among the republican politicians. The colonel is very popular, and he says he is going into the race to do his best to win. His chances of success are very bright, as he is a hustler, has always taken an active part in politics, and is well informed on how to conduct his own campaign. Col. Leffel is one of the most noted personages in the United States. He has had numerous offers to travel in former days, but always declined to place himself on exhibition. His ambition has been to live and do as other people do, and, with that idea in view, he has conducted various enterprises, and attended to details in the ordinary business ways. At present he is an active business man, being engaged in the fancy poultry and pet animal business. He has been successful financially.

The little gentleman was born in Clark county, September 21, 1833, his parents being pioneers, James P. and Elizabeth Leffel. His father was six feet one inch in his stockings and his mother weighed close to 200 pounds. The colonel was born tiny and grew but little, attaining the height of 46 inches and a weight of about 60 pounds. He married Miss Sarah B. Meade, who is only slightly taller than himself. They have four children, well formed, pretty and normal size. The father is the smallest member of the family. In 1860 Col. Leffel was chosen a city councilman in the fifth ward by the republicans.

Had Hanged Six of Them.

A Georgia justice recently sentenced a man to be hanged. On the lawyer explaining that there was no law which empowered him to pronounce the death sentence, he replied: "That may be, but I've hung six of 'em, jest the same."

Delicate Dress Goods.

Some gowns are so dainty in the weave, so delicate in tint, that they seem to soil by being looked at—one or two wearings making them unpresentable, NOT USELESS. We make a specialty of cleaning fine fabrics, the more delicate the material, the better the results. Sometimes an accident will ruin a gown, without injuring the texture. We dye them then, sometimes we get a prettier effect than the original color. Fine goods stand redyeing. The finer the material the better the new color. We charge so little for cleaning or dyeing, that even if you are in doubt as to the result, it's worth while to experiment. Want a new evening gown for a dollar or two? Laundry drivers will receive your work.

ARMY AND NAVY ECONOMIES.

Sentences of Prisoners Reduced Because of the Expenses of Keeping Them.

Washington, Aug. 17. — Unusual economies seem to be exercised now by militia and naval officials. Last week Assistant Secretary McAdoo of the navy remitted eleven months of the year's imprisonment which was imposed upon Machinist Dunphy of the ram Katahdin, dismissal to follow, on the ground that it was too expensive to keep him in prison that long. General orders just issued by Gen. Otis in command of the department of the Columbia seem to show that the same policy is to be followed in the army. Two soldiers were sentenced to dismissal following a year's imprisonment, for desertion. Reviewing the report of the court martial, Gen. Otis approves the sentence after reducing the term of imprisonment six months. Similar remission of punishment is also made by Gen. Forsythe, department of California. Orders from the same headquarters relating to the transfer of horses and mules from one post to another require the transfers to be made without cost for transportation. The following orders have been issued by the president: To the present schedule of punishments for enlisted men under act of congress approved September 27, 1890, and announced in executive order of March 20, 1895, as promulgated in general ordered No. 16 of 1865 from the headquarters of the army, is added: "First class privates of engineers and ordnance may be reduced to second-class privates of those corps respectively, in all cases where for like offenses on the part of non-commissioned officers their reduction in grade is now authorized."

Maj.-Gen. Miles has promulgated the following: "By direction of the secretary of war the issue of full-dress uniform to hospital stewards, acting hospital stewards and privates of the hospital corps, will be discontinued and an equivalent allowed in money value of white cotton duck clothing will be made instead." The First infantry has been concentrated in full force at the presidio of San Francisco and is now marching to Santa Cruz, where it will arrive on the 20th inst. for a month's instruction in "evolutions of the regiment."

THE BROOKLYN DOCK DISASTER

Testimony at the Investigation Will Probably Be Ended This Evening.

New York, Aug. 17.—The investigation into the causes of the recent dry dock disaster at the Brooklyn navy yard was continued Saturday in the court martial room. Several mino officers attached to the bureau of yards and docks were examined and their testimony did not differ from the testimony given the day previous by their superior officers. It is expected that the investigation will be ended this evening when the findings will be forwarded to Assistant Secretary McAdoo at Washington, who will decide whether or not a court martial will be necessary, and it is expected that one or two high officials will be placed on trial.

New York, Aug. 17.—Mrs. Eunice Beecher, widow of the famous pastor of Plymouth church, Brooklyn, has been seriously ill for a week at her home in that city. Mrs. Beecher is nearly 84 years old, but is active in miad and remarkably active in body for a woman of her age. Dr. W. E. Searle, who was Henry Ward Beecher's physician, was sent for and Mrs. Beecher has been under his care ever since. When he called this morning he found his distinguished patient much improved and cheerful over her rapid convalescence.

GOSSIP FROM BERLIN

Discussing the Expected Visit of the Emperor of Russia.

JEALOUS OF PARIS AND VIENNA

Fears That He May Be Slighted in the German Capital—The Subject Discussed by the Press and in Cafes—Communications Between the Cabinets.

Berlin, Aug. 17.—The question which is now agitating the minds of the inhabitants of the German capital is, will the czar come to Berlin. Up to this time it has merely been "officially" announced that the czar and czarina will be the guests of the emperor at Breslau and Goertitz, but as Vienna and Paris will be the scenes of elaborate receptions to the Russian autocrat and his consort the Berliners are jealously anxious lest the czar and czarina should be slighted here. The Berlin and provincial newspapers are variously discussing the question, and the matter is the subject of much argument in the cafes and other public places. Some of the newspapers in the course of their articles point out the advantages of Breslau as the scene of the reception of the czar in Germany, while the others assume a pessimistic tone and declare their belief that it is the intention of the Russian emperor to come here, but to give to his visits an aspect of more importance as compared with his visits to the Austrian and the French capitals. This thing has aroused the leaders of the official circles, as evinced by an article in the Cologne Gazette which not only sharply rebukes the grumblers, but is seemingly intended to give positive intimation to the public that it is not the intention of Nicholas II. to visit the city of Berlin at all and has not been from the first. The paper makes the announcement to this effect, however, and the whole matter probably awaits the definite decision of the czar.

The Arrangements About Concluded.

There has been a prolonged series of communications between the German and Russian cabinets in reference to the sequence of visits proposed by the czar, and it is generally presumed that full and final arrangements have been concluded. Some time ago a tentative communication from a Russian source suggested that the czar should make visits to Vienna, Munich and Darmstadt, prior to his meeting the kaiser, but this programme was in no way acceptable to Emperor William, who set the diplomatic machinery to work to effect the changes which he desired made in the czar's itineracy. The result of the efforts of diplomacy was that the Russian cabinet maintained their contention that Vienna must take precedence over the German capital, inasmuch as Emperor Francis Joseph's was the older imperial court, Berlin coming next. This view of the matter was acquiesced in by the emperor and, according to the existing arrangements, the czar will start from Krasnoe-Sele on August 24, accompanied by Prince Lobanoff-Rostovsky, the Russian minister of foreign affairs; Gen. Count Vorontzoff-Dashkoff, chief of the ministry of the imperial house and imperial domains, and six other attendants of exalted rank. The customary extreme precautions will be taken in the matter of guarding the railroads over which the imperial party will pass and in protecting his majesty at other points along the route.

How the Czar Will Be Received.

Upon the arrival of the czar at Vienna he will be received at the station by Emperor Francis Joseph in person, who will conduct the Russian emperor to the Hofburg palace. The programme for the entertainment of the czar in Vienna includes a grand state performance of "Nanon" at the Imperial Opera house and a concert at the Hofburg palace on the following day. Before finally leaving Austria the czar will pay a visit to the ex-queen of Hanover and Duke and Duchess of Cumberland at Gmunden. The czar and czarina will arrive at Breslau on September 5, and the German emperor and empress with a brilliant assemblage of princes and other notabilities will greet them at the station, where a guard of honor consisting of the Emperor Alexander of Russia's grendiers, of which the Czar Nicholas II. is the chief, will await them. This regiment together with the second regiment of dragoon guards, of which her majesty, the czarina, is the chief, has been ordered to Breslau especially for the occasion. In addition to these troops 14,000 veterans will form a double line through which the czar and czarina and their suites will pass upon leaving the station. The two days of the visit of the Russian emperor and empress to Breslau will be largely taken up by military reviews and parades, in the course of which the czar and czarina will lead their respective regiments past the kaiser. A gala performance will be given in the theatre in honor of the visitors on the evening of September 6.

COMRADE MATTOX FAINTS AWAY.

Old War Troubles Cause Unconsciousness While Working at Yesterday's Fire.

W. R. Mattox, of Webster place, performed valuable work at the fire yesterday afternoon at the home of E. E. Pray, and as a result is nearly prostrated today. The intense heat brought on a trouble which Mr. Mattox experiences every year. When Mr. Mattox was in the army he received one day inside of four hours a bayonet wound in the arm, a gunshot wound in the knee and another severe injury, also a sunstroke. While working at the fire he was overcome and fainted away. Kind friends looked after him and S. A. Cruikshand put his horses and carriage into service and had Mr. Mattox removed to his home. Today he is feeling very weak, though he is able to be out.

SUMMER COMPLAINT.

A Paper of Interest to Mothers Watching the Health of Their Babies.

Rather more than 15 per cent. of all who are born into this world leave it within a year, and more than 25 per cent. before they have reached their third anniversary. These deaths occurring with such relative frequency in the warmer months have given rise to a germ summer complaint, which, in its most typical form, is a cholera; in other words, an inflammation of the small intestines, whose conspicuous symptom is colliquative diarrhea. Except from the frequency and severity of this disease—or, rather, group of diseases—in the case of young children there is nothing to justify the special use of the term "cholera infantum," since it is nothing but cholera nostrum occurring in infants.

The wise physician suspects the stomach in every case of intestinal catarrh or indigestion. Not that there is necessarily or even frequent or antecedent organic lesion of the stomach, but because the most common and most tangible source of intestinal disorders is the entrance of a fermenting mass of improperly prepared chyme.

Cholera infantum is due to bacteria, but not to any specific bacterium. Fenton B. Turck, of Chicago believes that he has demonstrated at least half a dozen kinds that will produce lactic acid fermentation alone. A dozen or more germs are found in the mouth at all times, while the intestine teems with the bacillus coli communi and a number of other varieties. Except that the antiseptic action of hydrochloric acid renders the stomach reasonably sterile during the height of digestion, the entire alimentary canal is a long culture tube from the time when the new-born baby inspires, screams and swallows till the organic matter of the body has been destroyed by decay or fire. Hence, the rapid development of saprophytes and other germs, the consequent irritation of the mucous membrane of the small intestines—and very likely of that of the stomach and colon as well—and the poisoning of the entire system through the absorption of ptomaines and leucomaines indicate not a total change from the normal condition, but merely a heightened degree of bacterial activity.

Bad sanitation, and especially crowded and imperfectly ventilated and poorly drained apartments, have long been recognized as prolific sources of cholera infantum. The disease, therefore, is essentially one of cities, and preeminently of the slums. There must be considered not so much the absolute population of a city as the density of its population, the absence of breathing space in the shape of yards and parks, the existence of a contaminated water supply, and the lack of sufficient control of tenement architecture, of food and milk supplies, and of garbage collections. It is impossible to select any one factor of slum life as a sole or principal predisposing cause of cholera infantum. It may be that the parents, debilitated by poverty, hard work, poor food or disease, or by all combined, have brought forth children predestined to a physical damnation. It may be that the child is weakened, not so much by heredity as by confinement in the stifling atmosphere of a room that is at once kitchen, parlor and chamber, or by recent contact with contagious disease, or that has directly irritated its stomach by delving in the swill tub or by drinking the dregs from a beer glass. Whether breast-fed or bottle-fed, it must be remembered that the baby's draughts of milk are meals, and that they must be taken regularly. Ordinary cleanliness must be observed with regard to the child's mouth and the source of nourishment. In the case of bottle-fed children partial sterilization should be insisted upon. Milk fully sterilized by boiling, however, loses much of its nutritive power. The long tube of the nursing bottle has slain its thousands, and must give way to the simple nipple fitting over the top of the bottle.

Much can be done to diminish infant mortality if the obstetrician will bear in mind that he has not completed his duty until he has instituted a regimen for the child which shall include cleanliness, proper clothing—neither too warm, too cold nor too tight—proper exercise and outdoor life, and, most important of all, regular feeding. After some experience with babies who have been subjected to such a regimen, whether at the breast or on the bottle, we feel justified in declaring that cholera infantum is largely a preventable disease.—Medical and Surgical Reporter.

The Newest Gowns.

The craze for blue and white has extended to muslin gowns. The latest and most chic show blue figures in white grounds and are profusely trimmed with lace.

The deep corselet waist band and the short bolero are features of many chic gowns and have the merit of being almost universally becoming.

A novelty in sleeves shows diaphanous material unlined from the elbow to the wrist. Above it is made bouffant and is caught together in the center of the arm at the top.

Daring combinations of color seem to multiply as the season advances. A light transparent gray linen is made up over apple-green and finished with pink belt and collar.

Pique appears to be the one formidable rival to grass linen. Not only is it employed for the making of whole gowns, but it makes also revers, capes and collars for silk gowns and is encircled by trimmings of real Irish crochet.—Chicago News.

A Face Refresher.

To refresh the face when tired and weary after a day's outing or traveling, it is a mistake to plunge the face into cold water, which really acts as an irritant, whereas tepid water produces quite a contrary effect. After washing off the dust on face and ears, a little buttermilk, or, failing that, rose-water, dabbed on will heal and whiten the skin and take away all feeling of irritation.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

JOINT DEBATE ON FINANCE.

Congressman Fowler and J. E. Martine to Talk at Packer's Island.

There promises to be lots of fun at Packer's Island, near Flemington, Wednesday and Thursday. The Hunterdon county farmers will hold their annual picnic and the principal event is a debate between Congressman Fowler, of Elizabeth, and James E. Martine, the farmer orator of Plainfield, Union county.

Congressman Fowler will champion the cause of sound money, while Farmer Martine, a silverite, will try to demolish the Elizabeth man's arguments.

Mr. Martine wants to be the Democratic Congressional nominee in the Eighth District against Congressman Fowler and relies upon the showing he will make in this combat on finance to distance all rivals for the honor.

A special car on the Lehigh Valley Railroad will probably be chartered by the Union county supporters of the debaters.—New York World.

Congressman Fowler will not meet James E. Martine on the platform. He leaves on Wednesday to accept the invitation extended to him to stump the west for McKinley and Hobart. He will spend two weeks in Wisconsin and two more in Indiana, speaking in various parts of these two States. Mr Martine will be there, however, to meet whoever is pitted against him.

DEATH OF CHARLES T. GUNAGAN.

He Had Been Ill For Sometime and Has Been Growing Weaker.

Charles T. Gunagan died at his home, No 189 North avenue, between one and two o'clock this morning, in the 48th year of his age. He had been ailing for a long time from cerosus of the liver, and for sometime past his life was despaired of. He leaves a widow but no children.

Decedent came here from Doylestown, Pa., about a year ago, and took up his residence on North avenue, where the family have since lived. Mr. Gunagan held a lucrative position with Wunderlick Bros. of Philadelphia. In April last he was admitted to the Philadelphia Hospital suffering from what was at first supposed to be a slight ailment. Two weeks ago he came home and was imediately taken to his bed, which he never left and died as above stated.

Funeral services will be held at Doylestown on Thursday, where the body will be taken for burial in the family plot.

Up In The Catskills.

A letter to Geo. L. VanEmburgh, from Rev. Cornelius Schenck, who is in the Catskill mountains, at Spruceton, N. Y., tells of the terrible heat last week, it being the hottest weather on record in that locality. The letter reports Mr. and Mrs. Schenck and children well, and also says that at the present time they are sleeping under blankets and enjoying the cool bracing mountain air.

At Jed Smalley's Trial.

At the trial of Jedediah Smalley for reckless driving that came up in the city court yesterday, as was told in the Daily Press, ex-Councilman Walter L. Hetfield acted as counsel for Smalley, while in the absence of Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh, Nelson Runyon represented the city.

—Surveyors staked out the grade on Mercer avenue, between Duer and Grove streets, this morning, preparatory to its being macadamized by Borough Street Commissioner Emmons.

IN THE LOCAL COURTS.

LOTS OF JUSTICE IN THE CITY AND THE BOROUGH.

Several Men Were Disorderly, One Was Charged With Threatening to Kill—Judgement in Geoghahan-Cadmus Case.

There was only one case in the city court this morning. A young man named Harle was charged by Isaac Runyon with calling him unpleasant names in McVey's restaurant yesterday. Harle acknowledged that he had been applying impolite epithets to Runyon but said that the latter had been circulatating wrong reports about him. Judge DeMeza suspended sentence.

E. K. Allen, proprietor of the "Look-out-on-the-mountains," was arrested by Marshal Hansen yesterday afternoon. He was charged with being drunk and disorderly on Saturday last, also with using indecent language to Marshal Whitely. When arrainged before Justice Crosley this morning the latter fined the prisoner $20, but afterward reduced it to $5. The fine was paid.

In the case of Geoghahan against Cadmus, which was tried yesterday before Justice Mattison and a twelvemen jury, a verdict was reached about 7 o'clock last evening. The case was given to the jury at 5 o'clock and when they returned they gave the plaintiff $100, which was one half the amount claimed. Lawyer Murray handled the case very ably for the plaintiff and Lawyer Hetfield made a close fight for the defendant. Following is the jury:

L. R. Blackford, D. D. Smalley, Frank Jones, J. J. Kliner, J. J. Kline, Chas. Sprigg, J. Giddis, A. G. Perry, J. Vaughn, Jacob Gaub, W. P. VanHorn and J. W. Van Horn.

George Shay, of Fanwood, was arraigned before Justice Newcorn last evening for examination on the complaint of Mary McDermitt, who charged that the former threatened to kill her. Justice Newcorn dismissed the case and placed Shay under $100 to keep the peace. The evidence was not sufficient to hold him. On another complaint of Mary McDermitt, the Justice examined John and Bridget Brick on a similar charge. The evidence was also lacking in this case, but the defendants were held in $100 bonds to keep the peace. Judge DeMeza represented the defendants.

The following summons have been issued by Justice Newcorn: Hand against Daume; Sherman against Kennedy; Sherman against Parson; Sherman et ux against Laster; returnable Aaugust 25th. Sherman against J. R. Hartpence; White against Coddinton; returnable August 24th. The case of Griffen against Reed has been adjourned to September 5th.

Patrick Deskin was arrested Saturday night and fined $1 by Judge DeMeza for riding his bicycle without a light.

Sub-divided Classes.

The regular meeting of the Primary Teachers' Union, was held yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Frank Jones conducted the devotional exercises, and Miss Runyon taught the lesson, the subject of which was "Sub divided Classes." An interesting discussion of the topic followed.

A Successful Dance.

The German Beneficial Society gave a dance in the Gesang Turn Verein Hall last evening, which was largely attended and a great success. An orchestra in charge of Frank Conde furnished the music. This evening the society will give an entertainment to be followed by dancing.

Martine Invited to Speak.

A Bryan and Sewall Democratic club will be organized at Neshanic, N. J., next Saturday evening. Farmer Orator J. E. Martine has been invited to speak.

Illegal Train Riders.

Paul Bannon, James Pauli and Robert McCane were arrested Saturday for riding on freight trains. Sentence was suspended yesterday morning.

License Transferred.

In the Somerset county court at Somerville yesterday the license of Jacob Hipp, of North Plainfield, was transferred to John H. Graceley.

THROWN FROM A VEHICLE

MISS ARNOLD AND MRS. MARSH MEET WITH A SERIOUS ACCIDENT.

They Were Out Riding in Miss Arnold's Dog Cart When the Pony Became Frightened at an Object in the Road.

A narrow escape from fatal injury occurred yesterday afternoon on Manning avenue just east of Westervelt avenue. Miss Nellie Arnold, accompanied by her grandmother, Mrs. Marsh, who is well advanced in years, were enjoying a ride in the former's dog cart, to which was attached her pony. The pony has always been very gentle and easy to drive. Some one had left a box in the gutter on Westervelt avenue which frightened the pony. Before Miss Arnold could get control of the animal he made a quick circular turn in the road.

Both Mrs. Marsh and Miss Arnold were thrown out and the horse started off with the cart. Mr. Bailey, of West Fifth street, was nearby and attempted to catch the animal but failed and the latter ran up an embankment. The shafts were detached from the cart, and the horse ran down Manning avenue to Somerset street and through the latter street to the barn on Chatham street. The broken shafts had cut the animal's leg severely.

The accident happened nearly opposite the home of Mrs. Andrew Kenney, and she appeared at once and assisted Mrs. Marsh to her home, where the best aid was given. Mrs. Marsh was unconscious for sometime and did not come to until after she was taken home. Her body is considerably bruised and she received several deep scratches and cuts on the face.

Dr. J. T. Fritts was sent for and gave proper treatment. He learned that no bones were broken, which is very fortunate. Miss Arnold escaped with a few bruises. This morning Mrs. Marsh is improved, though she is unable to move about much. Mr. and Mrs. Arnold feel very grateful to Mrs. Kenney for the kind assistance rendered.

AN OPEN AIR CONCERT.

Edward Martin's Quartette and Orchestra Give a Successful One.

The first of a series of open air concerts which bid fair to attract considerable attention was held in the vacant lot opposite the Cycle Academy on Watchung avenue, last evening, and fully five hundred people gathered on the green, the sidewalk, in the street and on nearby piazzas to listen to the sweet strains of Prof. Edward Martin's crack colored quartette and orchestra. And for an hour or more the crowd stayed right there, for they were well pleased with the sweet music which was both vocal and instrumental. The Martin Bros. quartette was simply 'out of sight," so to speak, and the other members of the company acquitted themselves admirably.

The opening part consisted of a minstrel show, with songs, witty sayings etc., interspersed with orchestral music. On the whole the entertainment was a pronounced success, and it is to be hoped that the quartette will again favor the puplic with one of their open air concerts.

Resolutions of Condolence.

At a meeting of the Exempt Firemen's Association of Plainfield, held August 15th, 1896, the following resolutions of condolence were unanimously adopted on the death of Elias P. Pope.

Whereas, It has pleased our Heavenly Father in His all-wise providence to remove by death one of our beloved members, brother and friend, Elias R. Pope, one who always took a deep interest in the welfare and prosperity of our association; one who was always ready with wise counsel and valuable aid, and who did all this most willingly and cheerfully. Therefore, we desire here to place on record a full expression of our great loss, and for our lasting regard for him and his memory; and be it

Resolved, That we hereby tender to his bereaved widow and stricken family the assurance of our warmest regard and tender sympathy in their bereavement, under a blow so sudden that our faith in the divine love can say "Thy will be done."

Resolved, That this preamble and resolution be placed in full upon the minutes of our association, and that a copy be forwarded to the family, and to the city papers for publication.

A Valuable Find.

Charles Conover, of the Hook and Ladder Truck, found a valuable and gold watch and chain at the Pray fire on Netherwood hill Sunday afternoon. He turned the same over to First Assistant-Chief James Martin and he gave them to the owner who was delighted to get the lost articles.

A Change in Roberts' Stable.

A portion of the front of Roberts' livery stable is undergoing a change. Chas. Doane, the contractor, is arranging the driveway into a store, which will be occupied by Eli Odam, who is now across the street. The entrance and exit will now be from West Second street.

A Real One.

William Jones, a real old-fashioned tramp, was sent down to Elizabeth in the city court yesterday morning. He had been begging on South avenue.

LOOKING FOR HIS BROTHER.

Otto Went West and His Brother Never Heard From Him.

Ewald Otto, of Netherwood, is in a quandary to know what has become of his brother, Hermann, who came to this country from Zuriskav, Germany, ten years ago and went to the far west to build up a fortune and fame.

So far as the brother can learn, Hermann, after arriving in New York, took a train to the west and located at LosAngeles, in Southern California, but not a direct word has been received from him since his arrival there. Three letters were, however, written back to Germany, and in due course of time were forwarded to this country. In one of the letters it was stated that Hermann had married and was doing nicely, but no mention was made of his brother here.

Ewald is employed about the H. O. Hermance mansion at Netherwood, and he is very anxious to hear from his long lost brother, whom he fears may be dead ere this.

On the Mountain.

Among the recent arrivals at the Mountain Park Inn are: Dr. and Mrs. Ray, Dr. Ethel Brown, J. Southard, J. McKane, H. B. Dorrance, Stuart Hart, H. D. Brown, New York; Mrs. and Mrs. Veitch, Howard Spelmon, Brooklyn; Dr. Joseph Young, Miss Grace Durand, H. B. Durand, Mr. and Mrs. Snyder, Newark; Mr. and Mrs. Shotwell, Hempstead, L. I.; C R. Strong, R. U. Strong, Major Kenney, John P. Street, William F. Myer, W. T. Parker, J. W. Parker, New Brunswick; George P. Van Vliet, Poughkeepsie, N. Y.; George W. Tuttle, Bernardsville; Frank W. Bergen, Elizabeth; Mr. and Mrs. Walter McGee, J. M. Titsworth, Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Miller, A. B. Beers, Plainfield.

That's Right.

September 5 promises to be a great day for Plainfield. On that day a bicycle carnival will be held, and the preparations are intending to make it a truly great and historic event. The general committee in charge of the carnival, which is composed of a number of the representative wheelmen and business men of this city, was organized over a week ago. It is performing its work effectively and an elaborote programme is being laid out. Plainfield will probably have more people within its borders on the day of the carnival than ever before in its history.—New York World.

The Report Unfounded.

A report was sent from Elizabeth, says the Elizabeth Leader, and published in one of the New York papers, that Messrs. John D. Crimmins and B. M. Shanley were here looking for a trolley route to Plainfield. John W. Whelan, who was reported to be with the gentlemen, informs a Leader reporter that the report is untrue. Messrs. Crimmins and Shanley were here several weeks ago, and at that time gave up all idea of a connection with Plainfield. The road will never be built on the south side of the track.

Almost Too Late.

A sister-in-law of the late Maurice Fitzgerald, whose funeral took place from St. Mary's church yesterday morning, was delayed in reaching here from Asbury Park in time to attend the obsequies. She reached St Mary's cemetery just before the body was lowered into the grave, and at her request the coffin lid was lifted and she was given a last look at her brother-in-law as he lay shrouded in death.

Cruising on the Shrewsbury.

Carroll L. Runyon, of East Ninth street, A. Willis West, of Crescent avenue, and Clarence L. Lines, of Dunellen, returned last Saturday night from a week's cruise on the Shrewsbury river in the cat boat "Smole." They met with sundry exciting adventures, including several duckings. They encountered some rough weather near Seabright but passed through it successfully.

Drilling the Knights Templar.

A regular communication of Trinity Commandary, No. 17, K. T., was held in the Babcock building, last evening, and there was a good attendance of the members. Thirty of the members turned out for the drill, under command of Sir Knight N. Y. Dungan, of Somerville. Mr. Dungan is Prosecutor of the Court of Common Pleas in Somerset county.

A Good Thing.

A petition is being circulated by W. W. Coriell for the purpose of having the town clock repaired and kept in good running order. The petition was cordially received and a very large number of people have signed it. The paper will be presented to the City Council at its next meeting and it is sincerely hoped that the clock, which is now a disgrace to the town, may be so fixed that it will be a benefit.

GOLD DEMOCRATS MEET.

CALL A STATE CONVENTION IN TRENTON FOR AUGUST 26TH.

A Provisional State Committee Named—Delegates to be Sent to the Gold Democratic Convention at Indianapolis

The gold Democrats of New Jersey held a meeting yesterday in Taylor's Hotel, Jersey City. Ex-Senator Henry D. Winton of Bergen county presided and Francis D. Pollock of Summit acted as Secretary. Ex-Judge John B. Green of Union county, Chairman of the Executive Committee, reported that a Provisional State Committee had been selected. Some of the counties were not represented, as the Executive Committee had been careful not to appoint anybody without first obtaining his consent to serve and his assurance that he was in sympathy with the movement. The Provisional Committeemen, so far as they have been selected, are: Bergen county, A. DeRound, H. D. Winton; Burlington county, J. S. Adams, W. D. Alloway; Essex county, Col. James E. Fleming, Hamilton Wallis; Hudson County, Dr. L. J. Gordon, Otto Crouse; Hunterdon county, W. H. Apgar; Mercer county, Gen. G. D. W. Vroom, John F. Blackwell; Middlesex county, George Neilson, James Parker; Monmouth county, John Hone, Henry S. Little; Morris county, Henry H. Yeamans, Paul Revere; Passaic county, William B. Gourley; Somerset county, James J. Bergen; Sussex county, John Morford, Samuel E. Smith; Union county, A. B. Carleton, S. M. Williams; Warren county, Charles F. Rittenhouse. At large—E. P. Meaney, Essex; W. B. Willis, Burlington; Dr. John A. McGill, Hudson; J. Howard Carrow, Camden.

The committee was empowered to fill vacancies, and to increase its number if deemed expedient. The report suggested that the Provisional Committee be empowered to call a convention, to be held in Newark on Thursday, August 27, to elect delegates to the National Convention to be held in Indianapolis on September 2. Alderman Righter of Newark thought there would be some danger of the silver men capturing the State Convention if it was held in Newark, and he suggested that the Provisional Committee be empowered to name the delegates to the National Convention. He made a motion to that effect, but it was voted down.

The Provisional Committee organized by electing ex-Senator Winton Chairman, and A. B. Carleton Secretary. The committee named August 26 and Trenton as the time and place for holding the State Convention to elect delegates to the National Convention. The Committee will meet again in Taylor's Hotel on Saturday next.

That Very Remarkable Club.

After doing all the attractions in Asbury Park in a week, the "Private Club of Three" returned to this city last Sunday evening to settle down to business once more. This remarkable club is composed of Meredith Dryden, Fred H. Freeman and Albert Woltmann. A week ago last Sunday they left here on their wheels, rode down to Asbury Park and there stopped at the Hotel Albemarle. There was a progressive euchre party at the hotel on the second night, Monday, that they were there and they considerably astonished the would be euchre players by carrying off all the honors, Woltmann winning first prize and Freeman second. Had there been another, Dryden would have undoubtedly won it. After a week of gayety that quite astonished the staid Asbury Parkites the club brought it to an end, Saturday night by getting up a subscription dance that was the event of the season. The young men returned each about ten pounds lighter in weight.

The Craig Brothers Doing Well.

Many young people in this city will doubtless be glad to know that George and Will Craig, formerly of North Plainfield, are doing remarkably well in the Southwest. George is on a ranch near Graham, Texas, raising cattle for the Chicago and St. Louis markets, and Will has gone to the Pacific Slope. A letter just received by Alexander Shotwell, for many years a druggist and practicing pharmacist here, so announces.

Valuable Real Estate at Auction.

William N. Pangborn, the auctioneer will sell at public auction at Blimm's Hotel parlors, on Somerset street, tomorrow, the very desirable French roof house with barn at 123 Duer street near Linden avenue. The lot has a frontage of fifty feet by one hundred and twenty-five feet in depth, and the house contains nine rooms and a basement, with water on all floors. The place is a desirable one, and will positively be sold to the highest bidder without reserve.

BRYAN AT RED HOOK

He Tells of Some of His Plans for the Future.

LETTER OF ACCEPTANCE FIRST

On His Way to New England He Will Speak at Brooklyn, and on His Return He Will Deliver Another Address in New York.

Upper Red Hook, N. Y., Aug. 18.—Here in this little Dutchess county village, six miles from the nearest station on the New York Central railroad, nearly two miles from a branch road of the Philadelphia & Reading, and away from the busy whirl of politics, William J. Bryan has established himself for a week or ten days of quiet to enable him to compose his letter of acceptance. Mr. and Mrs. Bryan are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Perrine. Mrs. Perrine was Mrs. Bryan's teacher at the Female academy in Jacksonville, Ill., the town where the democratic candidate also received the principal part of his education. The candidate and his wife reached Barrytown last evening by train from Poughkeepsie with Mr. and Mrs. Perrine and T. Cutright, Mr. Bryan's secretary, drove six miles through a beautiful farming country to the home of Mr. Perrine. The Perrine residence is a pretty frame structure, right in the village and adjacent to the general store kept by the nominee's host. Hugh J. Brady, chairman of the St. Louis central committee and a member of the Bryan and Sewall committee on ratification, met Mr. Bryan by accident on the steamer Albany and had dinner with him. Mr. Brady says that Mr. Bryan told him that he will speak in St. Louis between the 10th and 15th of September. In answer to repeated inquiries as to whether he would make reply to the speech to be delivered tonight by Hon. Bourke Cockran, Mr. Bryan said: "Mr. Cockran and I discussed both the silver question and the income tax while in congress. If he advances any new arguments they can go to the country along with my speech of last week. I shall not return to New York until the latter part of September, when I expect to speak briefly in Brooklyn on my way to New England, and in New York on my way from New England." Mr. Bryan's attention was called to several errors that appeared in the printed copy of his Madison Square garden speech. He gave out the following corrections: Near the beginning of the speech the word "property" should be changed to "poverty" so that the quotation from Lincoln will read: "No men living are more worthy to be trusted than those who toil up from poverty.". Near the end of the paragraph beginning "It cannot be successfully claimed," the word "not" should be inserted after "must" so as to read: "The influence of this great nation must not be thrown upon the side of gold," etc. Concerning Senator Thurston's statement in his letter to Senator Stewart, published yesterday, that Mr. Bryan had been charged with being in the pay of silver mine owners, Mr. Bryan said that he had denied this statement on several occasions, and that a denial would be made at an early day.

SPAIN AND THE UNITED STATES.

The Liability of this Country for Filibustering Expeditions.

London, Aug. 18.—The newspapers refer at length to Spain's bill for damages against the United States, as the result of the fitting out of filibustering expeditions, destined for Cuba, in American ports, and citing the decision arrived at in the case of the Alabama, one paper says: "The United States' acceptance of the Geneva award makes it absolutely impossible for them to repudiate their liability under the present circumstances with any show or reason or justice."

Big Ice-Bergs Sighted.

St. Johns, N. F., Aug. 18.—The Allen line steamer Assyrian from Liverpool reports four immense icebergs 150 miles off the coast in the track of ocean shipping. Six American fishermen were landed here during the past two days. They lost their vessels on the Great Banks, and were adrift from four to seven days without food or water. The brigantine Galatea has brought in a boat from the banks which is believed to belong to a French vessel which foundered, as the Galatea passed a lot of wreckage.

Gold Reserve Continues Downward.

Washington, Aug. 18.—The treasury gold reserve at the opening of business to-day stood at $105,113,702. Yesterday's withdrawals were $50,800. The decline of over $1,000,000 since Saturday is due to the fact that $1,000,000 was withdrawn in San Francisco last week and only taken out yesterday. Daily "withdrawals" as given out at the treasury, means withdrawals of gold at New York only.

LI HUNG CHANG'S VISIT.

Ex-Secretary Fosters Knows But Little of the Plans for His Entertainment.

New York, Aug. 18.—Ex-secretary of state John W. Foster of Indiana was at the Fifth Avenue hotel in this city last evening enroute to Saratoga to attend the meeting of the American Bar association. In regard to the proposed reception to be tendered to Li Hung Chang, the Chinese viceroy, upon the occasion of that distinguished gentleman's visit to this country, Mr. Foster said: The viceroy comes to this country as the nation's guest, and, of course, the government authorities will have full charge of the details of his reception. I can give you but little information on this subject. I know that the president has appointed Gen. Ruger to make the necessary arrangements for a suitable reception and he will probably be able to make public the programme in a few days. I also understand that Assistant Secretary of State Rockhill will represent the state department at the reception. President Cleveland will be on hand to receive the nation's guest, but just what will constitute the ceremonies I am not in a position to state. The subject of a private banquet to be tendered to Li Hung Chang by a number of the residents of this city is now being discussed, I believe, and the matter will probably assume definite shape in a day or two Three former ministers to China are now living in or around New York. They are John Russell Young, George F. Seward and John E. Ward. These and other gentlemen who have resided at times in China are anxious to honor the viceroy and contribute towards his reception and entertainment."

ONLY SOCIAL CALLS.

Three Members of the Cabinet Visit the President at Gray Gables.

Buzzards Bay, Mass., Aug. 18.—Attorney General Harmon, it seems, was at Gray Gables Sunday for a few hours, returning Sunday night, accompanied by Secretary Lamont. Mr. Harmon generally calls every year during the season on the president and family, and it happened he was here at the same time as Secretary Lamont. There was no official business that called him here, it is stated. Possibly the president touched upon some matters of public interest, but what they were it is impossible to ascertain. It was not a prearranged meeting, notwithstanding previous reports. It is also stated that Secretary Carlisle was there Sunday, but only remained a short time. Secretary Olney, however, was not of the party.

DR. NANSEN'S RETURN.

The Explorer Now on the Way to Christiania.

Vardoe, Norway, Aug. 18.—Dr. Nansen left here yesterday on his way to Christiania. He says that the meeting between himself and Jackson, the English explorer, was the result of the barking of the dogs. The Norwegian and his companion were exploring one day when they heard barking, and, following the sounds, to their amazement, discovered Jackson's camp. Vardoe has been decorated in honor of the return to Dr. Nansen.

Exhibition Baseball Game.

Geneva, N. Y., Aug. 18.—The Cincinnati National league baseball team played the Geneva team here yesterday afternoon. In the first four innings the former gave a fine exhibition of league work. Then they let up and in the eighth inning allowed the Genevas to make two runs, the score at the finish standing 2 to 9, in favor of the Cincinnatis. Dwyer, a Geneva boy, on taking his place in the box for the visitors was accorded an ovation and was presented with a beautiful vase boquet.

Placed in Irons at Sea.

Philadelphia, Aug. 18.—Capt. Purdy of the British bark Artisan, from Manilla, was compelled to put seaman Frank Jones in irons on the passage for mutinous conduct, he having threatened to burn the ship and attempted to take the lives of officers and crew.

Barred from the Mails.

Washington, Aug. 18.—The postoffice department has issued fraud orders against the German Mead company of Bay City, Mich., prohibiting it from further use of the mails.

THE SEASON'S GLOVES.

Dressy Accessories to the Toilets of Fashionable Ladies.

A woman should always be well gloved and well shod. She cannot be too careful in her selection of either gloves or shoes. For walking, traveling and general outing wear, four hook or button gloves are correct in glace or pique kid, the latter being heavier than the usual dressed kid. These are in tan, brown and gray shades. Chamois gloves in white are very stylish for wear with cotton or pique costumes, and as they wash and clean easily and are not expensive. These chamois gloves come in four hook or button length and in the longer mousquetaire style with three hooks. Such is the popularity of these gloves that several retail merchants displayed them as early as March for the summer season. The bicycle gloves are legion; some have extra heavy palms, others large buttons that are closed by pressing over a knob, but the most practical are of chevrette, a heavy skin, stitched with saddlers' silk and having four large hooks. These are preferred in tan, brown and the reddish or English tan. Black gloves are well favored in Paris with light toilettes trimmed in black, but here they are chiefly noticed with mourning gowns, or with evening gowns of black and some brilliant contrast. White and ficelle, very pale straw and suede are the fashionable evening colors for full dress, with pearl-gray, lavender and pale tan following. White glace and suede gloves in four hooks or buttons, plain or stitched on the back with black, are worn for visiting, concerts, driving, etc. There is much favor shown to such gloves in white glace or dressed kid with hook fastenings. A buttoned glove should always be fastened with a glove-buttoner. Dressed kid is more worn than suede, though the latter is never out of style. After white the tan and brown shades are favored. Cheap gloves will not wear, fit nor look as well as the better grades, though purchasers often expect wonders from a glove costing but a dollar. Put gloves on carefully, to keep them in shape, and remove by turning the wrist over the fingers. Always air them before putting away, and keep a little sachet powder in your glove-box.—Ladies' Home Journal.

THE LIVING-ROOM.

Into It the Sunshine Should Always Have Free Access.

It is a matter of satisfaction that the old-fashioned parlor—shut up the greater portion of the year and protected from the sunshine and fresh air and every cheerful element that makes life worth living—is fast disappearing. There is not one family, where once there were ten, who maintains this gloomy state apartment. The cheerful living room, where the sunshine is allowed to come in at the window, and where a low fire usually burns on the hearth to ventilate as well as heat the room, has taken its place. There is no fear of the sunshine fading the carpet, for the stiff, gaudy-patterned Brussels, where impossible cupids were represented as strewing the ground with roses of every shade of the rainbow, is not used, but a sensible hardwood floor, finished in wax or shellac, takes its place, and the pretty rug on the floor and the hangings at the windows are dyed in indigo or with madder red dyes, which are sunproof. The old-time brass firedogs are polished so bright that they reflect the glow of the open fire, and the blooming plants in the sunny southern window fill the room with fragrance and cheerfulness. There is an ample center table, covered with books and newspapers, to hold the evening lamp, and around this table the family gathers in the evening for reading or other recreation. The family piano stands in a convenient corner, instead of being shut up in a cold, formal parlor, and is ready to discourse excellent music under the skilled hand. The books are in low cases around the room, where one can reach them. There are plenty of cushioned chairs and an ample lounge, with many pillows, for weary people.

The room is kept in perfect order by being dusted and put to rights the first thing every morning, and it is always ready during the day for the reception of callers. The papers and magazines are regularly looked over every day and the new ones are put in place of the old, to be convenient to the father's hand in the evening.—N. Y. Tribune.

The Art Of Buying Well

is the secret of success, domestic happiness and comfort, where your coal supply is concerned. No thoughtful man would buy coal just because it is cheap. A considerate man thinks of those who have to use it, and endeavors to save them trouble and annoyance by seeking quality. We have the combination of the best coal mined, and the very lowest prices.

ST. PETER'S EVE.

Pope Leo Goes to Pray at the Tomb of the Chief Apostle.

From time immemorial the well containing the marble staircase which leads down to the tomb of St. Peter has been called the "Confession." The word, I believe, is properly applied to the altar-rail, from the ancient practice of repeating there the General Confession immediately after receiving the communion, a custom now somewhat modified. But I may be wrong in giving this derivation. Indeed, a marble balustrade follows the horseshoe shape of the well, and upon it are placed 95 gilded lamps, which burn perpetually. There is said to be no special significance in the number, and they produce very little effect by daylight.

But on the eve of St. Peter's day, and perhaps at some other seasons, the pope has been known to come down to the church by the secret staircase leading into the Chapel of the Sacrament, to pray at the apostle's tomb. On such occasions a few great candlesticks with wax torches are placed on the floor of the church, two and two, between the chapel and the confession. The pope, attended only by a few chamberlains and noble guards, and dressed in the customary white cassock, passes swiftly along in the dim light and descends the steps of the gilded gate beneath the high altar. A marble pope kneels there too, Pius VI., of the Braschi family, his stone draperies less white than Pope Leo's cassock, his marble face scarcely whiter than the living pontiff's alabaster features.

Those are sights which few are privileged to see. There is a sort of centralization of mystery, if one may couple such words, in the private pilgrimage of the head of the church to the tomb of the chief apostle, by night, on the eve of the day which tradition has kept as the anniversary of St. Peter's martyrdom from the earliest times. The whole Catholic world, if it might, would follow Leo XIII. down those marble steps, and 200,000,000 voices would repeat the prayer he says alone.

Many and solemn scenes have been acted out by night in the vast gloom of the enormous church, and if events do not actually leave an essence of themselves in places, as some have believed, yet the knowledge that they have happened where we stand and recall them has a mysterious power to thrill the heart.—Martin Crawford, in Century.

INFLUENCE OF GLASS ON WINE.

A Singular and Almost Incredible Story About Bottles.

Probably 99 persons out of every 100, taken at random, would ridicule the idea that the quality of the glass of which a bottle may be made can have any influence on the taste or keeping qualities of its contents. And yet that it does do so we have the best of evidence. We are not alluding to the influence of light shining through flasks and its action on the substance contained, but the direct chemical reaction occurring within the glass and the material within the flask.

Very recently the following case occurred in France: A wealthy retired merchant bought a lot of very costly and rare wine in casks, samples of the wine from each cask being given him by the wine merchant. The wine was delivered, and the new owner proceeded to have it racked off and bottled. Some time afterwards some of the wine was brought to the table, and on tasting it the host detected a strange, unpleasant taste, which was also noticed by the guests. A fresh bottle was found to be similarly affected, and bottle after bottle was opened with the same result. An examination of the stock in the cellar developed the fact that every bottle of the recent purchase was spoiled. A suit was brought against the wine merchant, who declared that he had delivered the article exactly according to the samples furnished. On examining these latter they were found in excellent condition.

It is unnecessary to go into details, but during the course of the action of the law some of the bottles were produced in court, when it was found that the glass had become opaque. The bottles were handed over to a chemist, along with one of the lot purchased for bottling the wine, which had never been used. This is what the chemist found in the glass of the unused bottle: Silicic acid 52.4, potash and soda 4.4, lime 32.1, argillaceous matter, iron, etc., 11.1. In the examination of the bottles that had been used, while the silicic acid and argillaceous material remained constant, or nearly so, the lime, potash and soda were very much diminished, and it was made evident that they had passed into the solution, forming compounds with the acid ingredients of the wine, decomposing the latter and rendering it unfit to drink.—National Druggist.

PLANTS AT NIAGARA.

Studies of a Botanist Around the Great Cataract.

Many Varieties of Flowers Are Found in the Scant Soil of the Rocky Region—The Hand of Man Not Necessary.

Nature never fails to give us her overtones when she plays her great symphonies, any more than do the great composers. We cannot fail to catch the softening and mellowing thus lent to the musical strain, for hearing is involuntary, but we must so often be taught to see what is right before us, and our teachers are so few, that we not infrequently miss all but the most dazzling part of the outdoor picture. The devotee of field science is never more aware of this than on visiting Niagara Falls. Standing a fortnight ago on Prospect Point, perhaps the most striking scenic spot in the world I leaned over the edge of the sheer and partly overhanging wall and looked down, not at the great sheet of water, but at the rocks that continue the gorge northward.

There is often scarcely a handful of soil to the square foot, and sometimes apparently none at all on the face of the great precipice, yet it is clothed with wild plants almost from top to bottom. So hidden are they by the perpendicular wall and the artificial coping above it that many of them are hard to make out, but new discoveries are made at every change of position. The columbine, Aquilegia Canadensis, loves the spot so well that its bright red blossoms appear sometimes after they have disappeared from gardens. The plant is the most venturesome and hardy of any there, and appears in a rock crevice where nothing else but the bare wall is seen. It is difficult to understand how it subsists or even clings to the wall, but it is content and holds out no hands for sustenance except to the humid air. One or two wild roses are there, and the wild gooseberry sends up sturdy stems near the top of the wall. A Spiraea, probably tomentosa, is at home, and golden rods, Rhus toxicodendron and probably Rhus ralicans, as it is everywhere about the falls, and Ampelopsis quinquefolia. Creepers are rampant, hardly less so than in the woods on Goat island, where the wild grape attains great size and runs freely over the tops of quite tall trees. The wild grape on the edge of the gorge was just setting its crop and showed a luxuriance of bunches that would charm a vineyardist. Bittersweet and Solanum Dulcamara are also there. These vines do not venture far down the wall, as they need soil, but they are in the spirit of the place, and are seen rising from its base and sometimes making their way far up the moist surface, while the Aquilegia and some smaller greenery that it is hard to make out in the distance crop out of every seam and ridge and terrace from base to summit.

It is this acceptance of the wild spirit of Niagara that makes its flora so acceptable. The soil is naturally thin and sterile, so that the effort to turn the river bank on the mainland into a cultivated park is so far indifferently successful, and the ambitious evergreens that were planted on Bath island are all gone. But this makes no difference with the wild plants; they flourish everywhere and are as indifferent to the soil as any but actual air plants can be.

The wildest of our native plants do not yield naturally to cultivation, because they demand atmospheric conditions that cannot be transplanted with them. The result is that they linger awhile out of their native element and then disappear. Let Niagara pretty generally alone and it will never want for flora that is appropriate to it. There is very doubtful need of the forest tree nursery that is made to disfigure a part of Goat island, or the thicket of snowberry, Symphoricarpus racemosus, that begins to shut in the drive from Bath island.—Garden and Forest.

KANT'S WINDLASSES.

The Singular Demonstration of the German Philosopher.

Kant, the German metaphysician, was a singular being. The English writer Thomas de Quincy made close observation of Kant's personal peculiarities and frequently dwelt upon one of them with intense amusement.

Kant, amongst other studies in the art of taking care of himself, avoided ordinary gaiters. He permitted no ligature to be placed on any part of his body, fearing to hinder in the slightest degree the circulation of the blood.

He found it necessary at the same time to keep up his stockings. Accordingly he had loops attached to them, and outside each hip he wore a contrivance which may be called a box windlass. These affairs somewhat resembled an angler's reel with a spring, which secured the line at any given point.

Behold Kant then expounding his philosophy to a select circle of disciples. Like the famous counsel who could not state his arguments without twisting a bit of twine, Kant worked the windlasses as he talked.

The idea of this grotesque fancy so tickled de Quincy that he often lingered on the odd sight it must have been to observe the master "paying out the cable" or hauling in "the slack" by aid of this curious machinery!—Youth's Companion.

The Passing Honeymoon.

He—Why, we've got a cricket in the house! Isn't it cheerful?

She—Yes. And so intelligent. Hear him talking about the furniture. How distinctly he says: "Cheap! cheap!"

However, as she had been that day on a visit to her sister, whose husband was getting $18 a week, while her own dear new hubby got but $14, perhaps her discontent was excusable.—Indianapolis Journal.

ABIGAIL DODGE DEAD

Passed Away From the Stroke of Paralysis of Sunday Morning.

WAS UNCONSCIOUS TO THE END

Few Women Better Known in the Literary World Than "Gail Hamilton"—Some of Her Most Popular Works.

Wenham, Mass., Aug. 18.—"Gail Hamilton," Mary Abigail Dodge, died at 8:55 o'clock last night, without regaining consciousness since she was stricken Sunday morning with paralysis while seated at breakfast.

Few women were as well known in the literary world as Mary Abigail Dodge. Besides her writings, she was kept in the public eye by her championship of the interests of women. The fact that she was a cousin of James G. Blaine's wife and spent so much of her life at Washington added to her celebrity. "Gail" is simply an abbreviation of Abigail, and the name Hamilton she took from the Massachusetts town in which she was born in 1830. Her first experience was as a school teacher. She was an instructor in the Institute for Physical Science in Hartford for several years, beginning in 1851. From Hartford she went to Washington as instructor of the children of Dr. Gamaliel Bailey, the anti-slavery agitator. He was the editor of the National Era and she contributed a great many articles to it. Among her best known works are "Twelve Miles for a Lemon," "Skirmishes and Sketches," "Gala Days" and "Sermons to the Clergy." She had been ailing on and off for a number of years. Until the last illness her most serious attack was in May, 1895, when while stopping with Mrs. Blaine she was stricken with paralysis. After her recovery from sickness last September Miss Dodge wrote a paper on how it feels to be dead. The paper was entitled, "In the Valley of the Shadow of Death," and was read in church in Hamilton by Miss Dodge herself. When she felt her consciousness departing in a room in the Blaine mansion in Washington, Miss Dodge says she strove with all her might to reach a sofa as she felt that her friends would be doubly horrified upon opening the door to find her lying dead on the floor. She fell before reaching the sofa, but although she was unable to move or speak, she imagined that she was still awake and listening to the voice of one of her brothers who had died a year before, but whom she imagined to be present at the time. She had an unconquerable desire to ask him whether she was really in the world of the dead, but her tongue refused her bidding. She could not utter a word. Miss Dodge concluded her paper by advising her friends to have no fear of death as her experience at that time taught her that it must be a blessing.

COCKRAN'S SPEECH

Arrangements for the Sound Money Meeting in New York To-night.

A LARGE GATHERING IS PROMISED

A Reply to Wm. J. Bryan's Address Accepting the Nomination—Many States Will Be Represented—Mr. Cockran To Speak Elsewhere.

New York, Aug. 18.—Preparations for the Madison Square garden meeting to-night at which Bourke Cockran will reply to William J. Bryan's address accepting the nomination in the same place last Wednesday were practically completed this morning. The meeting was arranged by the democratic gold league, whose headquarters are at No. 15 Twenty-fourth street. Applications for tickets continue to pour in, and indications point to a big meeting. The large floor space in the center of the garden has been filled with temporary seats. In this enclosure there will be 8,000 chairs They will not be numbered or reserved and will be open to those holding general admission tickets. It will be a case of first come first served. The Madison avenue doors will be open at 6 o'clock to persons holding the white admission tickets and those who come first will get the best seats on the floor. Those in charge say that every possible precaution will be taken to prevent crowding and confusion and that there will be no clubbing and blundering by the police this time. At the headquarters of the democratic honest money league it was said this morning that the list of vice-presidents for the meeting was growing every hour. It is expected that every state in the union will be represented in the list. It was also announced today that after his speech in Madison Square garden Mr. Cockran would make an extended tour speaking for the cause of sound money in Maryland, Virginia, Ohio, Michigan, Illinois and Indiana. There has been no change in the programme already published. Perry Belmont will preside, and, it is said, will take good care to consume little time in making the remarks which convention requires of a chairman upon assuming his position.

HANNA'S MOVEMENTS.

He Will Leave Cleveland To-night for the Eastern Headquarters.

New York, Aug. 18.—Chairman Hanna of the republican national committee will not reach headquarters until to-morrow morning. Secretary Osborne received a dispatch from him this morning in which he said that he would remain in Cleveland to-day and leave for New York to-night. In a letter Chairman Hanna reports an enormous demand from the people of the west for literature on the financial question This demand will be supplied by the Chicago headquarters. It is announced that a ninth member of the executive committee will not be appointed in order to avoid friction in New York and Missouri, where there are factional fights.

Allison To Stump Iowa.

Chicago, Aug. 18.—Senator Allison came to national republican headquarters yesterday afternoon from the seashore, prepared to take an active part in the campaign in his home state and elsewhere. He said he would not do much campaign work outside of Iowa, and added: "I shall be very much surprised if we fail to carry Iowa. The general situation is favorable, but there is hard work ahead to make sure of victory. I don't anticipate much difficulty on account of fusion in Iowa. Fusion between democrats and populists is no novelty with us, but their united strength has not been enough to wrest the state from the republiaana." The national committee has established a bureau of information and education for the colored race at headquarters with F. L. Barnett, a Chicago attorney, in charge. Special literature and speakers of the race will form part of the campaign work.

National Republican Clubs.

Chicago, Aug. 18.—An elaborate political banquet is to be one of the features of the convention of National Republican league clubs at Milwaukee next week. It will be held at the Hotel Pfister, the second day, Wednesday, and seats will be arranged for 400 persons. The chief speaker will be Senator Sherman. A new candidate for president of the league has come to the front, "Father" Gleason of New York, called so because he was one of the founders of the organization. He is popular and very widely known.

YOUR TIRED STOMACH.

"I have, no appetite," you say, "and the little I do eat does me no good. At first it feels cold and dead in my stomach and by and by I have aches and pains that sometimes go to my chest and back. I feel weak, low spirited and out of sorts all over. I fancy the demon of dyspepsia has got me." That's the way you talk and no wonder But wait a moment. Let us reason together. Perhaps thus far your stomach is merely tired. You have been eating too much, eating the wrong things, and irregularly. You have given it too much to do, and like all living things, when over worked, it stops at length from sheer exhaustion. There may not be an actually diseased condition as yet. Still it is nature's warning, and you must heed it or worse will follow. "But I must eat or starve," you say. True enough, but safety usually lies in middle courses. Here is one for you. You don't need drastic purges or exciting stimuiants. Your condition is one easily relieved if we go about it gently and sensibly. The tired stomach won't work under whip and spur. It has probaly had too much of that already. What you require is something that is at once a food and a digester of food. Such an article is the Shaker Digestive Cordial discovered and prepared by the Shaker Community of Mt. Lebanon, N. Y. Taken right after eating, so as to mix with the food, it does the stomach's work for it, gives it the advantage of further rest, strengthens you in a natural way, and soon enables the stomach to do full duty. There is nothing else like this simple, safe, certain and palatable remedy. Yet the Shakers respect your doubts, and authorize druggists to sell a trial bottle for ten cents.

Running On Time.

As illuttrating the degree of efficiency to which the present management of the B. & O. R. R. has brougat its motive power equipment and esprit de corps of the operation staff, we call attention to the fact that during the months of April, May and June the passenger trains and fast freight trains have almost invariably arrived at their respective destinations on schedule time. The very few exceptions to the general rule were due to causes inseparable from railway operation, and against which no forethought can wholly guard. It may be safely said that during the period named no road in America, comparable in magnitude to the B. & O., can surpass its record for punctuality in train movement.

It Is to Be Held on the Cranford River Next Saturday Evening.

Plainfielders who attended the grand Venetian carnival at Cranford last year have very pleasant memories of the event and will be glad to learn that on Saturday evening another of those delightful events will take place on the Cranford river. Yesterday the committees began work in stretching the miles of wire along the river banks in order to decorate with Chinese lanterns. About 20,000 lanterns, of different sizes and colors, will be strung between the dam and Beadle's bridge. Two bands of music have been engaged, and one music stand will be erected near the Casino and the other near the Eastman street bridge. Between 100 and 200 pleasure boats and canoes will take part in the river procession, and it is expected that the carnival will be a great success.

Several parties are already planning to go to Cranford that evening, but they should remember to invite everyone they see to attend Plainfield's grand Daylight Carnival and Bicycle Parade on Saturday, September 5th.

A Change in Management of Plainfield's Only Theatre.

Messrs. Rich & Maeder, of New York, lessees of Music Hall, beg to announce that they have secured the services of Messrs. Ball and Willey to represent them as local managers for the season of 1896-7. Both Messrs. Ball and Willey have had a large experience in the theatrical business and are thoroughly familiar with this line of work, and if push and energy count for anything, Messrs. Ball and Willey should surely be successful. The preliminary season of Music Hall opens August 27th with Rich & Maeder's magnificent production of "The Cotton Spinner," by Scott Marble, for the first time on any stage. "The Cotton Spinner" is Mr. Marble's masterpiece, and time and money has not been spared to make this production a grand success.

A very strong line of attractions have been secured for the coming season, including the opera "Rob Roy," Prof. Herrmann, "Vanity Fair," Nellie McHenry, Wm. Barry in "The Rising Generation," Morrison in "Faust," Hoyt's "Texas Steer," "Sowing the Wind," Denman Thompson's "Old Homestead" and many others. BASEBALL BOYS IN BLUE.

The Record and Personnel of the Famous Fort Schuyler Nine.

The Indian Fighters at the Bat—The Soldier Champions Have Never Yet Been Beaten by a Team in Their Class.

[COPYRIGHT, 1896.]

Right where the glaciers of the ice age scraped and heaped up one of their big lateral moraines, and where to this day what is left of it, a tongue of land jutting out to meet a similar tongue from the Long Island shore, shows the mighty force of the plow which left such furrows, grim old Fort Schuyler stands on guard at the eastern gate of the metropolis.

Fort Schuyler, naturally, is full of soldiers, some veterans who have tried fighting, and others strapping young fellows who would as soon try it as eat any day. Their business is to be ready to fight and so they fuss around all day and much of the night with drills and sentry-go and other duties. When they're not busy in such soldierly ways, they play ball, not pretend to play it, but really play it, as certain other soldiers from other forts have found out to their sorrow.

The Fort Schuyler nine is famous among military men between Eastport and the Golden Gate. Every man on it with one exception is a soldier and the team has never been beaten by any soldier nine from the near-by forts.

Most of the members come from down east, where baseball has entirely superseded the study of Plato and Emerson, and have pitched and batted from their earliest years. Some of them have seen service as Indian fighters in the west and some are quite recent additions to Uncle Sam's army, but the veterans who brought their knapsacks safe home from the Indian country and the untried "recruits" yet get together in great shape on the diamond. At last accounts they had played 14 games, of which 12 resulted in victories. The other two—well, they were played with civilians who don't have to do sentry-go and play ball all the time if they feel like it. Some of the 12 victories were over amateur teams, too. One of the games of which the teams is proudest, although a defeat, is that played with the Fordham college crack nine, when the collegians won by a score of only eight to seven.

The Fort Schuyler team is uniformed and has an umpire, John Welsh, a ten-year veteran who's brave enough for even an umpire's trying duties. It has a mascot, too, in the person of Ordnance Sergt. Laffler's son, a youngster whose soulful rooting has won many a hard-fought field. The Fort Schuyler boys have been beaten, but only on those occasions which, owing to circumstances over which we had no control, Master Tracy Laffler failed to grace with his presence.

The captain and catcher of the team is J. McMahon, who is of course called "Mac." Mac joined the army four years ago and took a memorable trip to Chicago when President Cleveland and Gov. Altgeld had their historic differences of opinion regarding the proper course of treatment of the Pullman strike. He is a young man yet, and hails from Meriden, Conn., where he learned to play ball with the famous Resolutes, of the Plated city. He is perfect behind the bat, a sure thrower and a heavy sticker, and he is popular with the players because of his mild and equable temper.

The pitcher, William Mekin, made his mark with the Orioles, of Baltimore, six years ago, before a patriotic impulse impelled him to serve with the colors we all love better than even the league pennant. Mekin saw service in the "ghost dance" campaign in the Sioux country and can throw a ball as straight and swift as a Sioux arrow, though he usually prefers to throw them crooked and swift. He is 26 years old.

Joe Kirk, who stamps around first base, is a Boston lad, 27 years old but only a yearling in the army.

Thomas Thomas, the second baseman, has been ten months in the nine and the service, but he has played ball ever since he was knee high to a gun. He was born in Scranton, Pa., 22 years ago and played in professional teams, including the Rivals, of Scranton, and the Resolutes, of Meriden.

A third ex-Meriden boy is William Welsh, a short stop who'd do credit to a professional nine. He served only at Fort Schulyer; before his enlistment he played with the Resolutes.

Meriden boy No. 4 is William Bower. Bower has a good eye. He cannot only impel the twistedest curved ball with a dynamic swat of the hickory, but he is one of the crack riflemen of the post.

John W. Lynch, center fielder, hails from a fighting family in Providence, R. I. His greatgrandfather was in the revolution, his father in the civil war and himself, though only 23, has been several years a soldier.

James Duffy, late of Pawtucket, R. I., is stationed in right field. Duffey made a civilian baseball record with the Banner Boys, the crack team of New England.

The only civilian on the team is E. Z. Parker, who plays third base. He is also secretary of the club and is the only one on the nine who is paid for his services. Parker is every inch a ball player. His associates have dubbed him "Easy" because of his good nature. He made his first record as a ball tosser while a member of the Kingston (N. Y.) club of the old Eastern league. He led all other players at that time both in the field and at the bat. He is 27 years old and is a born New Yorker. Parker's latest move has been to issue a sweeping challenge open to all army or non-army clubs, barring professional, to play a series for the championship and a trophy.

Manager Ed. J. Meagher has been a soldier for many years, and a good one, too. While stationed in western posts he took part in some of the fiercest coke and coal mining strikes in the Coeur d'Alene region and always acquitted himself nobly. Meagher is an old-time ball player and knows a thing or two about handling players. He was born in Worcester, Mass., where they know a thing or two about baseball, but has been in the army so long that he is a veteran among the boys and knows just where to look for good material.

It may be whispered that several other government posts near New York possess fine baseball nines, and that they are growing better all the time under the spur of competition, and the natural desire of wresting from the Fort Schuyler boys their boasted supremacy. But it is going to be a hard matter for the rivals of the Westchester braves to oust them from the military championship, as so many of them had the best kind of professional and semi-professional training before they ever became soldiers at all.

For that matter, it's no new thing for baseball men to become soldiers. It's a matter of grave historical record that when the civil war broke out a big proportion of the baseball clubs in the north became the rallying point for recruits and suddenly swelled into military companies bound for the front.

OWEN LANGDON.

IN EARLY DAYS.

Pioneer Difficulties in Fitting a House with Windows.

In the early days of America window glass, being expensive, was often carried a long distance with great care. The story is told of a settler who built a log house, and, after moving his family in, went to Gorhamtown to purchase 12 lights of 7x9 glass for the two small windows. This was well tied in a large handkerchief, and he started on his return.

He selected even places for his feet at every step, and avoided all possible obstacles; thus he moved slowly homeward. All went well until he reached his own dooryard. As he approached the house he saw his wife standing in the doorway, and shouted:

"Well, Sally, I've got my glass home!"

Alas! his attention had been diverted; he caught his foot in a small bush by the path and fell headlong. Quick as thought he raised his hand high to shield the glass, but it came down with full swing upon a flat stone and was broken into fragments. Then and there he registered a vow that he would never look through glass in that house, and he kept his word.

"If I'd fell half-way to Gorhamtown," he said, "I wouldn't ha' keered; but it seemed too everlasting bad to go down and smash it right off agin my own door!"—Youth's Companion.

An Atmospheric Phenomenon.

An atmospheric phenomenon, reminding one somewhat of the story of Gideon's fleece, is vouched for by the newspapers of Montreal, Can. It is often dry under trees when the rest of the ground is wet, but the Canadian scribes aver that on a recent morning the ground was dry everywhere except under the trees. Rain seemed to fall through the branches of the latter. An explanation is given to the effect that during the previous night a cold wind had chilled the trees, that afterward a hot wave of moist air had passed over them without touching the ground and had deposited its heavy moisture upon them and the morning sun had caused the drops to fall from the branches. Where a tree was sheltered by houses hardly a drop of rain was found beneath it.

EDISON'S NEW LIGHT.

Something About the Developments of Recent Weeks.

By the Use of Fluorescent Substances the Wizard Has Produced a Lamp That Gives Out Little Heat But Brilliant Light.

Edison's new white light, which he has called the fluorescent lamp, is about ready for the market. In form it is similar to the incandescent lamp now in use, but in principle it is vastly different. There is a glass globe from which a part of the air inside has been extracted, but there is no absolute vacuum. Unlike the electric lamp, the whole globe glows with a pure white light of marvelous illuminating power.

This powerful light comes from a metallic crystal known as "tungstate," which is a metal as heavy as gold. In Germany it is known under the name of "tungstein." The illuminating property, says the St. Louis Republic, is due to a peculiar attribute of the tungstate crystal itself.

The fact that these crystals glow when slightly rubbed was known to the wizard of Menlo Park, and he set to work to use that property in the interest of science. The crystals are fused into a glass globe by heating the glass until it is soft. It then absorbs the tungstate crystals and holds them firmly when it cools.

Mr. Edison says that he could get the best results when using the crystals on the sides of the globe. Two wires enter the globe at one end, but do not meet. By means of an induction current generated in a faradic battery the molecules of the wires are thrown into motion and the impulse thus given travels along the wires until it reaches the ends inserted into the globe. This molecular impulse is communicated to the molecules of air in the globe. In turn the air molecules are driven with almost inconceivable rapidity against the crystals of tungstate welded into the inner walls of the glass. The impact causes the crystals to glow. The glow caused by a single blow of these air molecules is, of course, very slight, but multiplied thousands of times and the blows repeated continuously at an enormously rapid rate, they produce the new white light.

Every wire contains a latent electrical force. This line of force is distributed in every direction, but when an electrical impulse is imparted to the wire, although it may not develop into a current of electricity, the lines of force are all turned in one direction. They no longer run in all directions, but are parallel to the long axis of the wire. The wire is then ready to receive a current.

One molecule communicates its movements to another until the initial impulse given by the induced current travels along the entire length of the wire, and is caught up by the air molecules in the globe. It is the same as if a row of billiard balls are placed in a row. A blow is struck at one end of the row and all the balls will remain unmoved except the ball at the extreme other end. The ball will be driven away at a considerable rate of speed. The force of the blow was received by the first ball, communicated to the next, and so on, until it shot the last ball away from the rest. This is the process that takes place in the globe and produces the light.

In explaining this process Edison declared that he was himself surprised when he found that the intense white light given off by the tungstate was not accompanied by a corresponding degree of heat. The incandescent lamp transforms 95 per cent. of the electrical force into heat, and only five per cent. is turned into light. This is a tremendous loss from a commercial point of view. The new lamp is absolutely free from heat. That was ascertained beyond peradventure with the most delicate instruments. This establishes the fact that nearly the whole force used in the new lamp is employed in producing light. Edison does not explain the why and wherefore; he simply accepts it as a fact.

The high amount of electricity required in the incandescent lamp to overcome the tremendous loss of electrical energy, and which is turned into heat, is not needed here. This means an astounding cheapness in lighting and a consequent commercial gain. The new lamp will last as long as the globe lasts. It does not have to be refilled with expensive films, and it furnishes the best light that has yet been produced.

A two-candle new lamp gives out to the eye almost twice the illuminating effect that a two-candle incandescent lamp does. This is explained on the ground that the light is more pleasing to the eye than the incandescent lamp. It is a pure white light, the whitest light known. The globe looks like ground glass and is all aglow. The curvature of the globe serves to intensify the light by deflecting the flying molecules of air from one crystal to another until the initial force is exhausted.

There are fluorescent substances even better than tungstate, but Edison is not yet prepared to make them known. If his experiments are as successful with those as they have been with tungstate there is no limit to the intensity and beauty of the light.

A NARROW MARGIN.

Story of a Man Who Stood on a Slippery Place and Was Saved.

"Were you ever suspected of murder?" inquired a government official of a reporter.

"Never," responded the reporter, as calmly as if questions of that character were his daily food.

"Well, I was once, and if you have any feelings at all you need never want to be."

The reporter nodded for the official to proceed and the official proceeded.

"When I was about 20 or thereabouts," he said, "I was a hard case. I don't know why, because my family were decent people and had some money; but somehow I flew the track and before I had attained my majority I was a gambler, a drunkard, and generally a tough character, though up to the time of which I am about to tell I had never been in the hands of the law. Living in my neighborhood was a man whom I hadn't much use for, and it was known we were not friends, though we were on speaking terms and had some business relations. Our town was about three miles from the railroad station, and one November evening just about sunset, as I was coming to town afoot, I met him walking to the station.

"He stopped me, much to my surprise, and asked me if I had any money, because if I had he would sell me his watch for almost nothing, as he was going to the city unexpectedly and needed cash. As it happened I had two ten-dollar bills and three fives, which I received from the station agent not an hour before, and as the man's watch was a good gold one I thought I had a chance to turn an honest penny—something I didn't do very often. So I opened negotiations. Several persons we knew passed us as we were dickering, and at last I went on home with the watch and he went to the station with $25, including a $10 bill with the station agent's name on it, in red ink, which had caused a part of our delay in the trade, as he didn't want it and I insisted that he take it.

"As it turned out he had a reason for not wanting it and I can't say why I was so anxious for him to take it. Well, next day the man's dead body was found in the woods quite near the station, and a mile from where we had met and made our trade, and it was evident that he had been robbed, for his pockets were turned inside out and everything taken. My connection with the matter did not strike me until the day after, and I was arrested on suspicion. I was so badly rattled by the shock of an arrest on such a charge that I made my case worse by talking, and when the man's watch was found on me and it was known that I had been treating the crowd the night of the murder, I hadn't any show at all.

"Of course I protested my innocence and told my story, but people took it with little grace, for my character was known, and after an examining trial I was jailed without bail. What I suffered nobody except myself can know, and before a week had passed I had made up my mind to commit suicide and end the whole thing. I am sure I would have done so, but providence had something else in store for me, and sent it by a stranger. This man was arrested as drunk and disorderly ten days after my arrest, and when he was searched in the station house a $10 bill was found on him bearing the station agent's name.

"The officer who searched him was a friend of mine, and as soon as he got his hands on the bill he thought he had found a way out of my difficulties, and went after my lawyer. Then they saw the station agent, and he identified the bill as the only one he had ever put his name on, and remembered that I had jokingly asked him what to do to make it good. The next move was to make a few inquiries of the stranger as to how he came into possession of the money. This was done by waiting until next morning when he was sober, and charging him directly with the murder. It was so sudden that he weakened on the spot, as most murderers will, and the result was that I was saved. Saved in more senses than one, too," concluded the official, "for from that day I lived a new life, and thank God I have never fallen into evil ways since, and that was 30 years ago."

"How do you explain the notion to have the station agent's signature on the bill and your insisting on the man taking it?" inquired the writer.

"God moves in a mysterious way His wonders to perform," was the reverent reply.

"And the man who did not want to take the marked bill?"

"He was running away from justice. He had spent every dollar of a fund belonging to an orphan and had been called to an accounting."—Washington Star.

Delicate Dress Goods.

Some gowns are so dainty in the weave, so delicate in tint, that they seem to soil by being looked at—one or two wearings making them unpresentable, NOT USELESS. We make a specialty of cleaning fine fabrics, the more delicate the material, the better the results. Sometimes an accident will ruin a gown, without injuring the texture. We dye them then, sometimes we get a prettier effect than the original color. Fine goods stand redyeing. The finer the material the better the new color. We charge so little for cleaning or dyeing, that even if you are in doubt as to the result, it's worth while to experiment. Want a new evening gown for a dollar or two? Laundry drivers will receive your work.

GOLD DEMOCRATS.

An Address Issued by the National Executive Committee at Chicago.

Chicago, Aug. 18.—A meeting of the national executive committee of the gold democratic party was held at the Palmer house last evening. Chairman Bynum of Indiana presided and all the members were present except Charles F. Tracey of New York, who was detained by party work in the metropolis. The principal business which called the committee together was the preparation and adoption of an address to the democratic voters of the country. A sub-committee was chosen to draft the address. Assurances have been received by the committee that the organizations in the following states, which were not represented at Indianapolis, are sufficiently advanced to make it certain they will have full delegations at the convention: Louisiana, North Dakota, Georgia, Mississippi, Colorado, Wyoming and South Carolina. Nothing has been done in Idaho, Utah or Nevada towards organizing and Mr. Bynum said he did not expect to see those states represented at Indianapolis. The expectation is there will be forty-two states to answer to the roll call on September 2. The committee appointed Walter Kessler of Indianapolis sergeant-at-arms for the convention. He is a young man who graduated from Yale and read law and is now in the stone quarry business. Hugh Wallace, who recently resigned his membership in the national democratic committee from Washington because of the silver plank, called when the committee was in session and was invited inside. Chairman Bynum said to a reporter for the United-Associated Presses: New York is the best city for national campaign headquarters, and I shall work and vote for it. Ours will be a campaign of education, and New York is the producing point for most of the literature. The committee could command more assistance in New York than in Chicago. There are to be so many headquarters here that we will get mixed up.

FURNITURE TRADE IN IRELAND.

Efforts of Foreign Manufacturers To Extend Their Business There.

Washington, Aug. 18.—Consul James B. Taney writes the department of state from Belfast, Ireland, that the Canadians are making great efforts to introduce household and office furniture in all parts of the kingdom. One agent of an Ontario firm within a week took orders for about $9,000 worth of furniture in Belfast, and in Dublin for about $10,000 worth. "If American manufacturers," says Mr. Taney, "desire either to retain or increase their trade they should understand that it will be necessary to give it the most careful attention in directions that are comparatively new to them. Their representatives must be prepared to meet representative manufacturers of other countries who are taking great pains to extend their trade."

DELAWARE SINGLE-TAXERS.

Refusal of the Judge of the Federal Court To Interfere.

Wilmington, Del., Aug. 18.—Judge Wales of the federal court has handed down a decision in the habeas corpus cases of single-taxers James Haggerty and Arthur H. Stephenson, who have been in Dover jail for failing to pay a fine and the costs for the violation of a Dover ordinance. He decided that the committing magistrate had the authority to try Haggerty and remanded him to the custody of the sheriff. Stephenson's term having expired, no decision was rendered in the case.

BRITISH COLUMBIA MINES.

Rapid Increase in the Production of Precious Metal.

Toronto, Aug. 18.—Official returns from British Columbia to the Dominion government show that in 1894 the aggregate value of precious metals mined in the province was $1,000,000; last year the value was $5,038,375, and this year the output will be greater, judging from the three months ended July 15 The estimated value of gold smelted and shipped to July 15 is $1,750.000.

Major McKinley's Colored Callers.

Canton, O., Aug. 18.—Major McKinley's callers to-day included a delegation of several hundred colored citizens of Cleveland. They came from the Forest City by a special train with a band and marched to Major McKinley's residence. They were introduced to Mr. McKinley, who, after their spokesman had concluded his address, made them quite a lengthy speech. Mrs. McKinley has as her guest Mrs. Myron T. Herrick of Cleveland, who will spend a few days at the McKinley residence.

An Irish Prisoner Released.

London, Aug. 18.—Thomas Devany, one of the Irish dynamiters who, in Edinburgh in 1883, was sentenced to penal servitude for life, was released from Portland prison yesterday. Great precautions were taken to prevent his being recognized as it was believed that the Irish and Irish sympathizers might attempt to make a demonstration. Immediately after his release Devany took a train for Glasgow.

Mills on Full Time.

Lawrence, Mass., Aug. 18.—The Washington mills are running on full time this week, practically in all departments. The plant has been running about eight hours per day for about six weeks, previous to which it was shut down for three weeks. The Washington employs about 1,500 hands. The Pacific mills print works has resumed operations after a week's shutdown.

Another Filibustering Expedition Landed in Cuba.

THE CITY OF HOLGUIN CAPTURED

Spanish Convoy Attacked by Insurgents and Only Escape Annihilation by Fleeing—Another Political Prisoner Shot at Matanzas.

Havana, Aug. 18.—The news that Ben Roloff landed an expedition at Las Piedras, coast of Moron, and that Garcia had captured the city of Holguin is true. A hundred Spanish soldiers, who were escorting a convoy from Oanto to Cayamas, Manzanillo, were surrounded by a force of insurgents, who attacked the Spaniards from all sides. The troops sustained heavy losses, much larger than the official figures, which are given as two officers and twenty-one privates killed. The bodies of the dead were left on the field, the troops being compelled to hurriedly retreat to escape annihilation. Rebels attacked the town of Guira de Melena, in the southern part of the province of Havana, and captured it despite a desperate resistance on the part of the Spanish garrison. A number of stores and dwellings were looted and then burned, after which the rebels retired. No mention is made of losses on either side in the official report, which credits the Spaniards with repulsing the rebels, though no explanation is given of the acknowledged fact that the rebels looted and burned stores and dwellings in the heart of the town. Jose Miquel Carrillo was shot at Matanzas yesterday for the crime of rebellion and incendiarism.

Filibusters Landed.

Philadelphia, Aug. 18.—Information has just been received here by the Cuban revolutionary party that an expedition, consisting of seventy-five men and a large quantity of war munitions, was landed in Cuba last Thursday. The expedition originally set out from this country and went to a South American port from whence the landing was made. A number of Americans, including several Philadelphians, are said to have been in the party.

STRICKEN CUBA.

New York Health Officer's Investigation of the Plague Ridden Island.

New York, Aug. 18.—Health officer Alvah H. Doty has returned from Havana, Cuba. He said he had only spent two days in Havana, because he found on arrival that it would be impossible for him to reach either Santiago or Cienfuegos, where there are alarming outbreaks of smallpox. He therefore confined his observations to a close inspection of the conditions prevailing at Havana. He found that there was a great deal of yellow fever and smallpox in the city and surrounding country. The sanitary conditions were terrible. The whole city's sewage was emptied into the bay and the tide was not sufficient to carry it to sea. Consequently the bay was a constant breeder of yellow fever. Two points in particular were noticeably offensive, opposite the Regna docks and in the vicinity of the military hospitals. Dr. Doty states that any vessels arriving here which were loaded at the docks in these places will be subjected to the most rigorous quarantine. There were 300 cases of yellow fever and 100 deaths reported from the military hospital during the two weeks previous to Dr. Doty's visit. He is confident that the condition of the city of Havana is much worse than in ordinary summers, as the presence of such a number of unacclimated soldiers has a very bad effect and also the frequent moving of large bodies of military men from one part of the island to another tends to spread disease.

New York's Quarantine Facilities.

It was Dr. Doty's intention to appoint a resident physician to represent him in each of the three cities of Havana, Cienfuegos and Santiago, and he succeeded in securing an eminent medical man in each one of these cities who will regularly report to him the sanitary condition of the towns they represent and also the progress and effectiveness of such measures as the local authorities may take to prevent the spread of disease. Dr. Doty refused to give the names of his representatives for publication, saying that their usefulness to his department might be impaired thereby. There will be no change made in the manner of inspection of Havana vessels at this port. The health officer is satisfied that the present system of detaining all foreign born passengers from Cuba, who have not become acclimated by a ten years' residence in the island, is the best way to insure against the introduction of yellow fever, while in the case of vessels arriving from those ports which are infected with smallpox, a most rigid examination of all on board will be made and where there is the slightest suspicion of infection the vessel will be detained until the full incubative period of fourteen days shall have elapsed from the time the vessel cleared from the port. With the aid of his newly completed fumigating steamer Dr. Doty feels confident that there will be no introduction of the dread disease into this city. He expresses himself as much gratified with the result of his trip.

CYCLING COMMENT.

John Angleman is one of the latest purchasers of a Hartford wheel from the Eldridge Bicycle Company.

The Victor Wheelmen have changed the date for their twenty-five-mile road race on the Fanwood-Scotch Plains course from Thursday, August 20th to Thursday, September 3d.

"Never too old to learn," so thinks Stiles Parse, of Scotch Plains. Mr. Parse is seventy-nine years of age, and even at his advanced age he is learning to ride a bicycle. Mr. Parse treads the pedals of his new wheel with the agility of a ten-year-old, but he is not yet proficient in the art, and is always accompanied by an instructor.

The highest framed safety in this city has just been received by Otto Arens, of Park avenue. It is a Spalding, built especially for Mr. Arens, with a thirty inch frame and two inch Mexican tires. It has the name of its owner on the top of the frame in gilt letters. Mr. Arens received his new wheel this morning from W. H. Rogers, the agent for the Spalding in this city, and took a trial spin on it, accompanied by his wife on her wheel.

AT THE TRAPS.

The team of the Endeavor Gun Club of Jersey City Heights triumphed over the best shots of the Dunellen Gun Club of Dunellen, in the third and deciding match of a series for a silver trophy that took place on the grounds of the former at Marion Saturday. Each team had previously scored a victory, and much interest was manifested in this match. The shooting on both sides was even until H. Giles faced the traps. He met with hard luck and his poor score of five points lost all chances of winning for the Dunellen aggregation, and they were beaten by a score of 226 to 202 points. The conditions of the match were twelve men to a team, each to fire at twenty-five clay targets, with a thirty-yard rise and fifty-yard boundary, five trap rapid firing system, under the rules of the American Shooting Association. The scores: Endeavor Gun Club of Jersey City Heights—Welles, 18; Edwards, 20; Money, 25; Strader, 15; Ingraham, 20; Fessenden, 15; Carl Von Lengerke, 18; Louis Piercy, 21; Dr. Fletcher, 17; George Piercy, 15; Collins, 20; La Ponnama, 22. Total, 226. Dunellen Gun Club—Barron, 21; Osborne, 17; Runyon, 18; Sisty, 20; C. Giles, 15; Zust, 17; Cramer, 14; H. Giles, 5; Fletcher, 18; Lindsley, 20; Smith, 17; Neaf Apgar, 21. Total, 202.

AROUND THE BASES.

The Bound Brooks crossed bats with the Central Athletic Club of New Brunswick on Saturday, and after an exciting game won by a score of 9 to 8. At the ending of the first part of the ninth inning the score stood 8 to 6 in favor of the Centrals, but the Bound Brooks in their half succeeded in scoring three runs, two after two men were out. Manning and Truax were the battery for the New Brunswicks, while Brampton and Newhouse did the same service for the Bound Brooks.

Nearly Broke His Leg.

William J. Tobin, of West Fourth street, met with a painful accident while at work at Garwood on Saturday afternoon. He was handling heavy timber when one of the solid beams fell, striking him on the right limb near the knee. At first Mr. Tobin thought the limb was fractured, but it was found to be only severely strained and bruised. He is yet quite lame, though able to walk about, and expects to return to his work within a few days.

A President Not Yet Elected.

At a meeting of the First National Bank directors this morning, J. Wesley Johnson, W. R. Codington and Frank S. Runyon were appointed a committee to draft suitable resolutions regarding the death of the late president, E. R. Pope. The question of electing a president was deferred until the full board of directors arrive home.

—The prayer meeting at the Congregational church will take place tomorrow evening as usual.

—The Germania Beneficial Society will give an entertainment and ball in the Saengerbund hall, Somerset street, this evening.

—A regular meeting of the Home Building and Loan Association was held in the Coward building on East Front street last evening, but about the only business transacted was the payment of a small amount of dues, and a small amount of money also sold.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Miss Minnie Zeisz, of Chatham street, has returned from Point Pleasant.

W. E. Day, one of the First National Bank staff, goes to East Mansfield, Mass., tomorrow for a rest from business cares.

Hon. Jacob W. Elseffer, who presided at the demonstration given Wm. Jennings Bryan at Red Hook, N. Y., yesterday, is a cousin of J. E. Martine, of this city.

Sydney R. Titsworth, of West Fifth street, leaves tomorrow for a week's outing at Beach Haven, where he will join Walter B. and J. Vincent Rittenhouse, of East Sixth street, who are sojourning there.

Death of Gail Hamilton.

[Special to The Daily Press.]

Wenham, Mass., August 18—Mary Abigail Dodge, whose pen name was "Gail Hamilton," died last night from paralysis. She was attacked while staying with the Blaines in Washington in May 1895, and she never fully recovered from the shock.

Miss Dodge was a self-made woman. At the age of 21 she was teaching in the Hartford High School. Going to Washington as governess in the family of Dr. Gamaliel Bailey, she began writing for The National Era, of which Dr. Bailey was editor. In 1862 she published her first boook, "Country Living and Country Thinking," and for many years afterward she wrote industriously.

Going to Astonish the Natives.

Charles Hall, one of the genial clerks at Armstrong's pharmacy, started on his vacation today. He temporarily exchanged wheels with Olaf Saugstad, taking the latter's Punnett Companion. He has taken that wheel to Perth Amboy, where he expects to take his young lady friends out riding and astonish the natives of that district. Thursday he will meet Mr. Saugstad at Metuchen and the wheels will be exchanged again. On Saturday Mr. Hall leaves for his home at Fishkill-on-the-Hudson, where he will spend the remainder of his vacation.

In Close Conflict.

Car No. 6, of the street railway, had an exciting experience Sunday night when the lightning struck one of the lightning arresters on a pole near the Dunellen terminus, just as the car passed. The car was in charge of Motorman D. Kane and Conductor William Cockley.

A Baby Christened.

Edward Eskison, of South Second street had a son christened at St. Mary's church Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. The child was christened John Clement Eskison by Rev. Father Murphy.

A Painful Accident.

WOMAN'S RELIEF CORPS.

A Prosperous Auxiliary to the Grand Army of the Republic.

In July, 1883, the Woman's Relief corps was organized by the mothers, wives, daughters and sisters of union soldiers of the civil war as an auxiliary to the Grand Army of the Republic. Like the last named, it is divided into departments, of which there are 35, and into smaller divisions, called corps, of which there are 3,141. Its membership was reported, last July, as consisting of 140,305 women "of good moral character and correct deportment, who had not given aid and comfort to the enemies of the union, and believed in the perpetuation of the principles to which the association stands pledged, and who had attained the age of 16 years."

MRS. LIZABETH A. TURNER.

Besides aiding and assisting the grand army, the Woman's Relief corps states its objects as being "to perpetuate the memory of their heroic dead, to extend needful aid to the widows and orphans, to cherish and emulate the deeds of our army nurses, and to inculcate lessons of patriotism and love of country among our children and in the communities in which we live." In the fulfillment of these purposes, says Munsey's Magazine, it has endowed and supported, entirely or in part, homes for destitute mothers and widows of soldiers, and for army nurses; has established industrial training schools for girls; has helped to build memorial halls and monuments, and to secure patriotic teaching in the schools, and the raising of a flag over every school house. In such good causes it has spent, since its organization, more than $1,230,000. It has indeed proved its faith by its works.

The Woman's Relief corps holds its meetings at the same time and place as the grand army. In Louisville, where it assembled last September, Mrs. Lizabeth A. Turner, of Boston, was chosen to the office of national president. Each delegate to these annual conventions receives a bronze medal bearing a portrait of the retiring president. That issued at Louisville, Ky., in 1895, was made from metal of both northern and southern cannon, and showed the face of Mrs. Emma R. Wallace, of Chicago Mrs. Turner's predecessor.

WAGTAIL'S QUEER NEST.

Built Entirely of Watch Springs by the Enterprising Bird.

An enterprising bird over in Soleure, Switzerland, has recently built a nest for itself entirely of steel. This little Swiss town is famous for its watch-making industries, and it is common there to see big piles of broken watch springs in the watch factory yards. These birds knew a good thing when they saw it. They gathered together all the little bits of steel they needed, and then wove them together in a nest in the branch of a nearby tree. The curious, prickly-looking nest attracted attention recently. It was picked up and presented to the village museum.

The metal nest measures four inches in diameter. Inspection shows that it must have taken a long time to put it together. It is evident that the little pieces of steel had to be tied in a great many different positions before they could be made to hold firmly.

The birds have shown wonderful ingenuity in fitting the parts together. The largest piece of metal used was the mainspring of an ordinary watch. A few pieces of grass were used to bind all the pieces together. It would be a tedious undertaking for a man to do it as well.

The curious little metallic nest is very serviceable. The pieces of steel are so firmly fitted together that there was very little danger that they would be loosened by wind or rainstorms. It presents a very uneven appearance on the outside, for it is covered with curious corners and sharp little projections. But all the crevices on the inside have been filled so that the nest's interior is snug, smooth and comfortable.

Convicts Build a Prison.

The state of Montana is about to begin the erection of an additional prison on the grounds of Deer Lodge, on which the penitentiary now stands. The new structure will accommodate 500 convicts. A peculiar fact in connection with the undertaking, says a Helena special to the Chicago Record, is that the prison will be built by convict labor, and that many of the men who will help build it will subsequently become occupants of it. Were it not able to employ convict labor the state would have to go without this additional prison for some time at least, as funds are scarce in the treasury.

MUST LEAVE IT ALONE.

M'VEY OBJECTS TO THE CHANGES IN ROBERTS' STABLE.

He Paid For the Privilege of Using the Entrance and Now Mr. Roberts Would Like to Have It Closed Up.

An unexpected difficulty has arisen between ex Councilman Dan S. Roberts, the veteran North avenue liveryman, and J. H. McVey, whose restaurant on North avenue is well known throughout the State, which has many interesting features.

Mr. Roberts a few years ago sold to Mr. McVey the building on North avenue now occupied by the latter for his restaurant and hotel. The sale also included the right of way through the driveway from North avenue.

During the past few days Mr. Roberts commenced the work of closing up the driveway by putting in a store front. His intention was to arrange the driveway for a store, which he expected to lease to Eli Odam, and have the entrance to his stable from Second street.

Mr. McVey, learning the facts, consulted his lawyer, Assemblyman W. R. Codington, and the result was that an injunction was served on Mr. Roberts, but the work was only stopped temporarily.

In the meantime, Mr. Roberts had papers drawn which gave him the right to close the driveway, and gave Mr. McVey the right to a passage way through the stable office, also through the regular stable entrance from Second street. Mr. Roberts signed the paper, but Mr. McVey was not satisfied and would not sign it today. The latter says that its a question of right, and he purchased the right of way. The outcome of the trouble will be watched with interest. In the meantime the work on the store front is going on.

PRIZES FOR POPULARITY.

They Form a Pleasing Feature of a Successful Entertainment.

The festival of the German Beneficial Society was continued in Saengerbund Hall last evening and the attendance was much larger than on the previous evening. The singing section of the Gesang and Turn Verein was present and opened the programme with a well-rendered selection. This was followed with a most laughable farce in one act entitled "How the Three Musicians Paid Their Bill." Those taking part were Mrs. H. Goelbert, August Wolf, Paul Postler and Otto Kellar. The parts were exceedingly well taken and Mrs. Goelbert was presented with a large and handsome bouquet. Another song by the singing section brought the enterment to a close.

An additional feature was the several contests among the members of the society and their lady friends. The contest for the most popular member of the society was won by Fred Conde and in recognition of the fact he received a valuable gold-headed cane, also a bouquet. Frank Conde was awarded second prize, which was a silver-headed cane. Miss Julia Ruppert was decided upon as the most popular lady, and she received a beautiful gold watch, and Miss Alice Kennedy secured the second prize, a silver watch. The third prize, a toilet set, was presented to Miss Pauline Sutterlein. Miss Ida Falker received a gold pin as fourth prize.

The floor was then cleared and dancing was enjoyed until 3 o'clock this morning. A delegation from New Brunswick was expected but owing to the death of one of their members they failed to put in an appearance. The affair throughout was very successful and the society will reap a good sum as profit.

NOT ENCOURAGING.

The Volunteer Firemen of New York Not Likely to Visit Plainfield.

The executive committee of the Exempt Firemen's Association, together with the board of officers of the fire department, met last evening to consider the advisability of inviting the Volunteer Firemen's Association to this city, Saturday, Sept. 5th. There was only one company represented that would guarantee to help out in the affair. The encouragement was very slight, and it now looks as though the affair will not be a success. The Exempt Association does not feel like assuming the responsibility and no substantial aid has thus far been promised toward helping them out. At present the matter will rest where it is.

A Good Chance.

If the person who stole the three wheels from George Leland's wagon and three more from Wm. J. Nelson's wagon, on West Second street a few nights ago, as told in The Press next day, will only return and leave their name or card they can have the other wheel in each case.

A NORTH CAROLINIAN

HONORED BY JERSEYMEN IN A RIGHT ROYAL MANNER.

J. C. Stanley, a North Carolinian, a Guest at The Netherwood Farm, Entertained by Jerseymen—A Clambake in the Woods

Samuel B. Wheeler, Albert Irving Smalley and August Trust, guests of a warm-hearted Southerner at Wilmington, North Carolina, during a visit at that place with J. C. Stanley, yesterday honored that gentleman with a clambake in the woods at the Netherwood Farm. In the midst of the feast the shower drove the party to the gigantic barn on the farm where Caleb G. Thatcher, he of minstrel fame, made laughter for all. The bake was first-class and the spot was chosen by nature. All the party were nicely feasting when the rain fell in bucketfuls and the scattering was hasty to the nearby barn where under the shelter of mown hay and clover the knot was re-tied between the blue and the gray. Assemblyman "Deacon" Reed, Judge DeMeza, Ex-Judge Coddington, J. C. Stanley, George O. Stevens and Caleb G. Thatcher entertained and made a happy ending of a jolly party with speechmaking and song. The rich Southern dialect of Mr. Stanley, who is a noble, warm-hearted Carolinian, was indeed very pleasing to the ear. He invited the whole party to his seven room home saying it was built of india rubber and would stretch. There was among the party:

A. M. Griffen, Tax Collector Spencer, Street Commissioner Meeker, Councilman Tolles, David Smalley, Conductor William Clark, of Somerville; E. B. Mills, Harry Werner, William Emery, C. George Thatcher, August Trust, A. I. and N. B. Smalley, "Barney" Williams, Bert Livezy, Freeholders Barkalew and Lutkins, of North Plainfield; Zergibel, of Warren; Vreeland, of Franklin; Ballantine, of Bernards; County Engineer Doughty, of Somerville; Judge De Meza, ex-Judge W. A. Coddington, Assemblyman Reed, J. A. Smith, Millard Fillmore Elderten, of The News; George O. Stevens, Dr. Zeglio, J. Hervey Doane and several others.

A JUVENILE INVASION.

Frank Rich Advertises for a Baby, With Awful Consequences.

"The Cotton Spinner," which is the opening attraction at Music Hall Aug. 27th, was the innocent cause of a very amusing incident. In New York last week there was one man who had trouble to burn, and that man was Frank Rich. Mr. Rich is the very wide-awake half of the firm of Rich & Maeder, who are foisting Scott Marble's latest success, "The Cotton Spinner," upon the American world. The cast of characters of "The Cotton Spinner" calls for a baby. Mr. Rich, who is nothing, if not original, conceived the idea of "The Cotton Spinner" as a corporation adopting a baby. Through the medium of a chastely worded advertisement in the Herald, he made known his desire. Mr. Rich is well up in theatrical matters, but he is, or was, until recently, woefully ignorant concerning the alarming extent of the juvenile population of New York. The firm occupies an extensive floor of four large offices. On the morning after Mr. Rich had advertised for the baby these offices were filled to overflowing. Waves of humanity flowed up and down the hall and swept down the stairs. Mr. Rich is firmly convinced that every baby in New York city was packed into those four offices. Some of the infants, evidently under the impression that they were to do a specialty, were piercing the circumambient air with shrill tenor notes. None of them had pitched their selections in the same key, and the result was far from pleasing to the ear. There were some babies of all cults and conditions. Some were black and some were tan, and there was one almond-eyed, Ah Sin, among them. It cost the progressive manager considerable peace of mind and a large amount of perjury to get rid of the infantile stage-struck coterie, and their respective and in many cases determined guardians. Mr. Rich has abandoned the adoption scheme, and is considering the feasibility of having a baby made to order by a well known toy firm down town.

Hustling Painters.

The enterprising Sycamore street painters, Rushton, Hanson & Luthman, are finding lots of business these dull days. They have just completed the outdoor work on the residence of W. Dodd, on West Front street, near Clinton avenue, and they are also fitting up the interior decorations of the Manhattan Hotel, on Somerset street. They have the contracts for the painting of William Claassen's house on Liberty street and the new house of the Sternberg clothing establishment on Central avenue.

LARGEST IN THE COUNTRY

POND TOOL MACHINE CO. JUST COMPLETED AN IMMENSE LATHE.

It Cannot Be Shipped at Present, However, as the Jersey Central Railroad Has No Car That Can Carry It.

The Pond Tool and Machine Company are at present in a most undesirable position, and the Central Railroad Company are not in a position just at this time to help them. For sometime past there has been in course of construction a lathe which is pronounced the largest piece of machinery of the kind in this country. Within the past few days the lathe was completed and it weighs 57,000 pounds. The lathe was made for a firm in Cleveland, Ohio, and of course they are anxiously waiting for it. But until other arrangements are made they will have to wait. The fact is that the Central Railroad Company have not a car upon which they can ship the lathe. Its construction requires that one car be used and the nearest they can come to it is a gondola of thirty-ton capacity, but that will not answer on account of its being partly enclosed. Officials of the railroad company and the Pond Tool and Machine Company have been doing some heavy thinking during the past few days as to how the lathe can be transferred. The only thing left to do is to build a car expressly for the job and that will probably be done before the lathe will be moved.

It is the first instance of the kind in this locality and the railroad company will probably be prepared in the future for all such large orders.

BOUND BROOK CELEBRATES.

The Borough Justice Unsuccessfully Attempts To Stops The Fun.

On last Monday the recently passed bicycle ordinance in Bound Brook went into effect, and accordingly the youthful element arranged for a demonstration to celebrate the event, early in the evening a large number of wheelmen assembled, having their wheels equipped with dinner bells, horns, cowbells, and large lanterns. One had a cowbell a foot in height and calculated to be heard nearly a mile. This bell was the cause of the disturbance, which occurried later in the evening.

Having assembled, the wheelmen in single file took up a line of march, through the streets ringing the bells, and blowing the horns. At about nine o'clock they were stopped on Maine street by the Borough Justice and two marshals, who preceeded to place the enterprising cyclist with the cowbell under arrest.

They were immediately surrounded by a howling mob of wheelmen and their sympathizers, and a riot was imminent. At this point however, a permit signed by the Mayor, which one of the paraders had had the fore thought to procure, was presented to the astonished Justice, who immediately released the prisoner. Then the Justice and his marshals retreated amid the geers of the mob, leaving the town in possession of the wheelmen who paraded till after midnight cheering the borough officials and ringing the bells.

Cycling Through Europe.

Miss Pansy Herring, of East Second street, has received a letter and postal card from her brother, Rev. C. E. Herring, who, with Fred Bettman, is traveling in Europe. He says that both are enjoying the best of health and that they average fifty miles a day on their wheels, over roads which are finer than Park avenue. They will sail from Genoa for home Thursday, September 3d. In the letter Mr. Herring speaks of the many pleasant people that have been met on the trip.

A Plainfield Baby Was There.

In the description of the Asbury Park "baby parade" in The Daily Journal of that city, a Plainfield youngster is described. The Journal says: "Verna Blanche Braker, of Plainfield, had her dress decorated with gold dollars made of gilt paper. Her parents are James and Blanche Braker, who are summering in Asbury Park.

Donations for the Children's Camp.

Donations for the children's camp of the local King's Daughters have been received from the following: Mrs. Hervey B. Newhall, the W. C. T. U., Esther May Lyon six months old, Florence King, Mrs. L. E. Kline, Mrs. Joe Bolsterli, Mrs. F. A. Smith, Mrs. Dickenson, Mrs. Adams, Mrs. W. W. Myers, Miss Martine.

If you have ever seen a little child in the agony of summer complaint, you can realize the danger of the trouble and appreciate the value of instantaneons relief always afforded by DeWitt's Colic & Cholera Cure. For dysentery and diarrocea it is a reliable remedy. We could not afford to recommend this as a cure unless it were a cure. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

A TROLLEY EXTENSION.

STREET RAILWAY CO. PLANNING ONE TO SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

Lawyer Moffett Has Secured Consents on Second Street and Will Now Try for the South Plainfield Trolley Line.

The trolley road from Plainfield to Scotch Plains now looks like an assured fact, although it probably will not be built until next year. Through the energetic efforts of Lawyer Chas. L. Moffett, of this city, more than enough consents have been secured on East Second street, from Park avenue to Leland avenue. Second street does not run any nearer Scotch Plains at present but the company will probably try to open it up all the way to Scotch Plains, and it is said that land owners along the line of the proposed street are much in favor of it.

The Plainfield Street Railway Company has another project in view that will be considerably to Plainfield's advantage, and that is the running of another line from West Fourth street out Plainfield avenue to the South Plainfield station. This will closely connect that outlying district with Plainfield and will also furnish the connecting link with the Lehigh Valley Railroad.

The officials of the street railway company were so well pleased with Mr. Moffett's work on East Second street that they have engaged him to secure a sufficient number of consents on Plainfield avenue, so that the South Plainfield extension may be made as soon as possible. He has been given two months to secure them.

The sentiment of the property owners along the proposed line seems to be in favor of the trolley, although there are, as usual, some objectors. The South Plainfield people will favor it as furnishing rapid transit between the two places, while the storekeepers will probably, as in Dunellen, object to it as carrying much of the local trade to Plainfield.

Another Concert.

The total receipts from the Martine Brothers open air Concert Monday evening amounted to $5.10. This was not very flattering to the managers and especialty to Edward Martin, who advanced some five dollars toward making the affair a success. From a financial point of view, the concert was not a success, but otherwise it was all that could be expected and desired.

But the managers believe in the old time saying that "Nothing ventured is nothing gained," so they are determined to try again and they are already arranging for another open air blow out, two weeks hence on the same spot.

Want a Band Stand.

The members of the Plainfield Cornet Band are somewhat denunciative in the treatment they are receiving. True, it is, the band furnishes good music and the audience is not either obliged or asked to pay one cent for the entertainment. Yet Prof. Guttman and his men think it would be far better to have an elevated stage, so the music could be heard more clearly and distinctly. Such a stage could be hired for $2 a night, and there are plenty of truckmen in this city who would be glad to remove it both ways for a dollar more.

"Count" Van Ness Talks.

"Count" J. K. Van Ness was in town yesterday and gave additional details concerning the new bicycle supply manufacturing company, which the "Count" says is soon to build on land purchased from him. Furthermore, the "Count" says, the buildings are to be heated with steam throughout and they will have all the necessary appliances. "Count" Van-Ness says he doesn't care what people say, he's sold the land all the same.

To Boynton Beach.

The Misses Lizzie and Katie Flanagan, the Misses Lizzie and Nellie Casey and the Misses Sarah and Minnie Sharkey, Miss Annie Kelly and Miss Kittie Flynn, all of this city, started for Boynton Beach in a stage at 7:30 o'clock yesterday morning. The party spent the day there in various ways and they returned home at about 9 o'clock last evening after an enjoyable day.

Result of Telegraphing.

P. J. McAndrews, yardmaster at the freight house, has been effected during the past two years with what is known as operator's paralysis. Mr. McAndrews was formerly night operator at the North avenue station and constant work with his hand produced the disease. Yesterday morning he went to Philadelphia where he will undergo treatment for the trouble.

COLLIDED WITH A POLE.

A PLEASURE PARTY MET WITH A SERIOUS ACCIDENT.

Miss Mary A. Brown, of East Fourth Street, Was of the Party But Escaped Serious Injury—Several Injured.

A very sad ending to a week's vacation occurred at Bristol, Conn., last Sunday. Miss Mary A. Brown, of 404 East Fourth street, together with her sister, Mrs. J. T. Armstrong and son, Howard, of Brooklon, well known in this city went to Bristol Conn., a week ago to visit their brother, B. A. Brown, who has charge of an electrial plant at that place. Last Sunday afternoon, Mr. Brown engaged a three seat wagon and a team of horses for the purpose of driving his guests to Hartford. There were in the party, Mr. and Mrs. B. A. Brown and daughter Elsie Brown, Mrs. Brown's brother, Thomas Raritan, Mrs. J. T. Armstrong, Howard Armstrong and Miss Mary A. Brown. On the way, Mr. Brown noticed that the horses were to near the wagon, and one of them kept striking the wheel with his hoofs, but Mr. Brown, by careful driving, managed to hold the horses in, until Plainville was reached.

They came to a fork in the road and Mr. Brown wanted to keep on the straight road, but before he realized what had happened the team suddenly turned the corner, and at the same time increased their speed. Mr. Brown lost control of the animals and they ran at full speed into a telegraph pole. The horses broke loose from the wagon and got away. Mr. Brown was thrown out of the wagon and went headfirst through a picket fence. His face was scratched severely and he received several bruises. Mrs. Brown followed and her arm was fractured in three places. She was also bruised. On the next seat were Mrs. Armstrong and her son, Howard. She was violently thrown out and sustained a fracture of the limb and collar bone. Her shoulder was also sprained, and it is thought she received internal injuries. Her son was terribly bruised about the body and received an ugly cut in the head. Miss Mary Brown, Elsie Brown and Thomas Raritan were also thrown out but, aside from sundry bruises, their injuries are slight.

Nearby residents saw the accident and at once rushed to the scene where they did all in their power to relieve the pain of the suffering. Physicians were sent for and came at once. The party was taken home later in a trolley car. The carriage was completely wrecked, the horses were caught sometime later. Miss Mary Brown returned yesterday to Plainfield and brought her sister's son, Howard, with her. He is being cared for and his speedy recovery is expected. The condition of Mrs. Armstrong is critical and she cannot be moved from Bristol. Her injuries are the worst. The others are doing well but it will be sometime before all recover.

Improvements at the Railroad Station

Station Agent Haynes says that as soon as the work of elevating the main tracks in front of the North Avenue station is completed the attention will next be turned to tunneling the main and side tracks in an effort to carry off the surface water. As soon as the improvements are made here the attention of the trackmen will be turned to Grant and Clinton avenues, where similar improvements will be made.

Borough Republican Primary.

The Republicans of the borough will hold a caucus in the basement of the schoolhouse on Saturday evening to elect three delegates to attend the Republican State convention to be held in Taylor's Opera House, Trenton, on Thursday, August 27th. Ten electors are to be elected from New Jersey for President and Vice-President of the United States.

Wiring the Fanwood Depot.

Allen Laing, of this city, has William Simmonds at work wiring the Fanwood depot for electrical lightning. In the depot there are to be five incandescent lamps and there will be five additional lights located conveniently about the grounds. Everything will be in readiness for lighting by tomorrow night.

Dunellen Juniors Celebrate.

The anniversary of William G. Holton Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., of Dunellen, was celebrated in a most auspicious manner last evening. There were present delegations from surrounding councils, and about twenty-five members of Franklin Council, this city attended in a body.

The New Tax Rate.

According to Assessor Hubbard's figures the total assessed valuation of Plainfield's real estate is $7,500,000, or $280,000 more than a year ago. The rate this year will be 2.30, or two cents less than last year.

GOLD MEN'S RALLY

Great Gathering at Madison Square Garden Last Night.

HON. BOURKE COCKRAN THE ORATOR

He Replies at Length to Bryan's Speech, Arraigning Portions of the Chicago Platform; the Nominee and the Populists.

New York, Aug. 18.—Madison Square garden was densely crowded last night long before the Democratic Sound Money league meeting was called to order. The crowd was almost if not fully as large as was present last Wednesday night when Wm. J. Bryan was formally notified of his nomination by the Chicago convention. The principal attraction of the evening was the speech of W. Bourke Cockran, as it was understood his remarks were to be a direct reply to the speech of Mr. Bryan. The arrangements for the meeting were on a most elaborate and almost perfect scale and the trouble and tumult outside the garden which marked the demonstration last week were entirely lacking. The sixty-ninth regiment band rendered a series of national airs while the audience filed in. Every man, woman and child who entered was given a small American flag and a leaflet containing the words of the "Star Spangled Banner" and "America." These songs were rendered by a double quartette in which the vast assemblage assisted. The small American flags played a prominent part later in the evening, when they were waved vigorously by the vast audience when it gave vent to its enthusiasm at some of the points made by Mr. Cockran in the course of his speech. The decorations in the great hall were very profuse. Flags, shields and streamers were hung in every available place and the garden presented a most beautiful picture.

Forty States Represented.

On the platform besides Maj. John Byrne, president of the democratic honest money league, who called the meeting to order, Hon. Perry Belmont, the permanent chairman of the meeting, and the Hon. Bourke Cockran, the speaker of the evening, were a host of democrats of national and local renown, and a large number of vice-presidents of the meeting, including democrats from forty different states. Eighty-three hundred chairs had been placed in the arena in the great auditorium. This arrangement swelled the seating capacity of the building to about 18,000.

Perry Belmont Presided.

At 8:25, when Mr. Cockran came in, every seat was occupied. Mr. Cockran was received with cheers. Major Byrne immediately advanced to the front of the platform and when, at 8:30, order was restored, he called the meeting to order in a brief speech, and named Perry Belmont as chairman. When the applause which greeted Mr. Belmont ceased he began his speech. He was in good voice and his every word was audible in all parts of the house. At one point in his speech, where he was particularly severe on populists and populism, in which category he included Mr. Bryan, a number of hisses were heard, but these were quickly drowned out by the counter cheers. Mr. Cockran was then introduced amid cheering. He spoke in part as follows:

Mr. Cockran's Speech.

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen, fellow democrats all. With the inspiring strains of the national air still ringing in our ears, who can doubt the issue of this campaign. Stripped of all verbal disguise it is an issue of common honesty, an issue between the honest discharge and the dishonest repudiation of public and private obligations. It is a question as to whether the powers of this government shall be used to protect honest industry or tempt the citizen to dishonesty. On this question honest men cannot differ. It is one of morals and of justice. It involves the existence of social order. It is the contest for civilization itself. A democratic convention may renounce the democratic faith, but the democracy remains faithful to democratic principles. Democratic leaders may betray a convention to the populists, but they cannot seduce the footsteps of democratic voters from the pathway of honor and of justice. A candidate bearing the mandate of a democratic convention may in this hall open a canvass levelled against the foundations of social order and he beholds the democratic masses confronting him organized for defense. Fellow democrats, let us not disguise from ourselves the fact that we bear in this contest a serious and grave and solemn burden of duty. We must raise our hands against the nominee of our party, and we must do it to preserve the future of that party itself. We must oppose the nominee of the Chicago convention, and we know full well that the success of our opposition will mean our own exclusion from public life, but we will be consoled and gratified by the reflection that it will prove that the American people cannot be divided into parties on a question of simple morals or of common honesty. We look in vain through the speech delivered here one week ago to find a true statement of the issue involved in this canvass. Indeed, I believe it is doubtful if the candidate himself quite understands the nature of the faith which he professes. I say this, not in criticism of his ability, but in justice to his morality. I believe that if he himself understood the inevitable consequences of the doctrines which he preaches that his own hands would be the very first to tear down the platform on which he stands. The people of this country will not change the institutions which have stood the tests and experiences of a century, for institutions based upon the fantastic dreams of populist agitators—that the American nation will never consent to substitute for the republic of Washington, of Jefferson and of Jackson, the republic of an Altgeldt, a Tillman or a Bryan." Mr. Cockran's speech was quite lengthy and throughout it was a severe arraignment of portions of the Chicago platform and the nominee who stands upon it. The speaker made free use of the words populist, socialist and revolution, and he was continually applauded, although an occasional expression of disapproval was heard.

TRAGEDY FEARED.

The Letter Written by Mrs. Johnston Creating a Sensation in Kentucky.

Lexington, Ky., Aug. 19.—The famous letter purporting to have been written by Mrs. J. Fletcher Johnston of this city to Gov. Bradley regarding the appointment of Mrs. Judge Cantrill and Mrs. S. A. Charles as delegates to the Tennessee centennial is developing one of the biggest sensations ever known in Kentucky. S. A. Charles, husband of the lady who was referred to in the letter to Gov. Bradley as of being of no more culture than a chambermaid, is pushing the matter to a crisis. He took a photographic copy of the letter to Gov. Bradley and a letter written by Mrs. Eugenie Dunlap Potts to a newspaper office in this city and showed them to the managing editor. Mrs. Potts is the society editor of this paper and Mr. Charles expressed surprise to the editor that he should employ Mrs. Potts after the editor had said that the handwriting of the Bradley letter and of the one known have to have been written by Mrs. Potts was the same. Judge George Denny, the recent republican nominee for congress, who is a brother-in-law of Mrs. Potts, says he will not allow Mr. Charles, or any other man, to traduce any member of his family, that there is not a drop of cowardly blood in the Denny and Dunlap veins and tha the proposes to defend the honor of his sisterin-law. Both men are recognized as possessing the most daring courage, and the friends of both apprehend a tragedy.

CONDITION OF CROPS.

Weather Bureau's Weekly Bulletin for Eastern States.

Washington, Aug. 19.—The weekly crop bulletin issued by the agricultural department says: New England—Plenty of sunshine and moderate rainfall, but unevenly distributed; crops growing and maturing fast; grain yields well. Apples very fine and large crop. New York—Grain cutting generally completed; clover meadows show good second crop; tobacco, good crop. New Jersey—Early buckwheat heads not well filled; late crop very promising; temperature, sunshine and rainfall above weekly average. Pennsylvania—Heavy oat crop secured; corn, buckwheat, millet, tobacco, pastures, apples and truck generally above average. Maryland—Early corn crop assured; wheat, rye and oats being thrashed, tobacco crop short in places.

ADAMS EXPRESS STRIKE.

Managers of the Company Say That the Trouble Is Over.

New York, Aug. 19.—The freight of the Adams Express company, it is claimed by the officers of the company, is being moved to-day with little delay, only that caused by the fact that the new men employed in the places of the strikers are not wholly familiar with their work. Every wagon is manned, it is asserted, and at the Canal street and Forty-ninth street stations there were more wagons and drivers awaiting orders than could be used. The managers at the different offices said this morning that there was no delay worth mentioning.

New Five-Dollar Bill.

New York, Aug. 19.—The first lot of the new $5 silver certificates is out. The face of the note is black and white; on the back green. The face shows an allegorical figure of Liberty holding an electric lamp over her head, illuminating an eagle and a picture of Fame. In the background is a picture of the capitol at Washington. Pictures of Grant and Sheridan with a a shield between them are on the reverse side of the bill. The numerals in the corners of the bill are cramped in form and the denomination is not apparent at the first glance. The bill is not popular with bankers.

Death of an Old Skipper.

Boston, Aug. 19.—Capt. Luther Crowell died at West Dennis, Mass., yesterday, aged 78. In early life he commanded the barks Rebecca Crowell and La Platte in the South American trade, and afterwards, for thirty years, was with the Boston & Philadelphia Steamship line as captain. He retired six years ago. He leaves a son, Capt. Crowell of the steamer Spartan of the Philadelphia line, and two daughters.

Fight with Indians.

Tucson, Ariz., Aug. 19.—Three Indians were killed, thirty captured and three soldiers mortally wounded in a fight yesterday between Troop E of the Seventh cavalry and Yaqui Indians, twenty miles south of here.

Killed in a Collision.

Chicago, Aug. 19.—In a collision on the Chicago & Alton railroad yesterday near Chicago, an unknown man was killed, several were injured, one seriously, and three cars were wrecked.

SCHOOL AND CHURCH.

—School directors in the district of Duverne, Ia., have ordered a cyclone cave dug at each of the schoolhouses in the district.

—It is said that there are only two words in the English language that contain all the vowels in their order. They are "abstemious" and "facetious."

—The archbishop of London estimates the contribution of churchmen to religious objects during the last 25 years as amounting to about $400,000,000. Over $105,000,000 has been spent on elementary education.

—Some idea of the amazing growth of our universities is furnished by the statement that nearly 1,200 students have presented themselves for this year's examination for admission to Yale alone; the prosperity of Yale is no exception to the general rule.

—Prince Nikita, of Montenegro, has sanctioned the building of a Roman Catholic church at Cettinje, and will himself supply the greater part of the money needed. The church will be for about 150 Albanians, Turks and Austrians who reside in the town, as no Montenegrin is a Catholic.

—The Presbyterian church has made wonderful progress in every Christian country in the world during the century that is nearly gone. The United States 100 years ago Presbyterianism held the eighth place among the evangelical denominations. To-day it is the fourth largest body in this country.

—Father Mortara, a regular canon of St. Augustine, who has just been appointed to the charge of the Hospice of the Great St. Bernard, is said to be the Edgar Mortara whose kidnaping in 1858 by the archbishop of Bologna set all Europe in a ferment. The child of Jewish parents, he was alleged to have been baptized by a maid servant, and the Church of Rome claimed him. Neither Lord John Russell, nor the archbishop of Canterbury, nor Sir Moses Montefiore, who went to Italy for the purpose, succeeded in obtaining his release.

He Was Case Hardened.

The lawyer's fair client sat beside his desk, her dainty handkerchief ready for instant use in her beauteous hand. The fair client sought a divorce.

"He often came home drunk," she said.

The lawyer made a note on a scratch-pad.

"And he beat me with the flat of an ax," the fair client went on. "And he called me names and threw the roast at me, and he stuck a fork in my arm."

Overcome by the memory of her misfortunes, the fair client bowed her head and wept. The lawyer made another note. His face expressed no emotion.

Why was the lawyer unmoved at her grief? Why did her troubles raise no answering throb in his breast?

Ah, gentle reader, the lawyer was case-hardened.—Chicago Tribune.

DR. JENNER'S DISCOVERY.

Vaccination for Smallpox Just One Century Old.

The Famous Physician's Marvelous Scientific Revelation Was Not the Result of Accident as Has Been Stated Time and Again.

[Written for This Paper.]

Edward Jenner, the discoverer of vaccination and one of the greatest benefactors of the human race, performed his first test experiment 100 years ago. On May 14, 1796, he inoculated the boy Phipps from a pustule on the hand of a young woman who had got cowpox from one of her employer's cows. In addition to his work in this line he was a remarkable man, being a naturalist, a physiologist, a geologist, an advanced agricultural scientist and an eminent physician and surgeon. Fitted by nature for scientific work, he was more inclined to it by the great John Hunter, under whom he studied medicine, and whose intimate friend he was until Hunter's death. In 1771 he prepared the natural history specimens brought back by Sir Joseph Banks, Capt. Cook's naturalist, on his first voyage of discovery, and for this work was offered the position of naturalist to Cook's second expedition, but this offer was declined.

Before he was graduated in medicine his attention was directed to a common belief among the country people near his home in Gloucestershire that a person who had once had cowpox was safe from smallpox. As soon as possible after going back to his native place, Berkeley, to practice medicine, he began to collect information on the subject. For several years the cows in that vicinity were free from cowpox, and he could make no experiments. From the first he was somewhat discouraged by his country physician acquaintances, who said they had no faith in the common belief, and had often seen people afflicted with smallpox after having had cowpox. On the other hand, he found several persons who had often been exposed to smallpox without infection after an attack of cowpox, and they attributed their immunity to the cowpox. Five years of investigation as to the differences between the doctors and the dairy people convinced Jenner that there were several different eruptions all known as cowpox, and that one variety did protect against smallpox.

Having established this fact, the new difficulty arose that even after an attack of the true cowpox the milkers sometimes had smallpox. Long study and investigation showed the cause of this: that the cowpox was not a preventive unless it was communicated to the human at a particular stage of the eruption. It was well for Jenner and for vaccination that this matter had to be thought and worked out, for if the vaccine theory had been published before this fact was discovered vaccination might have been set back half a century, certainly for many years.

These investigations had occupied about 15 years without Jenner's being able to find a single case of cowpox. Nothing shows better the fact that he had a truly scientific mind than the fact that he arrived at these correct conclusions before he had the opportunity of testing them by actual experiment. From 1773 to 1796 he was studying the subject without seeing a cow or person with cowpox. When the opportunity finally came in 1796 the boy Phipps was inoculated. The result was as predicted by Jenner. Afterwards the boy was inoculated with smallpox, and this inoculation had no effect, as Jenner had predicted would be the case. After years of most patient work and investigation Jenner had the satisfaction of knowing that his reasoning was correct, and that smallpox could be robbed of its terrors.

So far as health and life are concerned, no other discovery ever made can be compared with the discovery of vaccination. For years smallpox had been the terror of the world, and Jenner had the opportunity of becoming probably the richest man in the world by keeping his discovery a secret. He was too much of a man to do that.

After his successful experiment on the boy Phipps, Jenner went over all his work and repeated his experiments before making his work public. Knowing that he would meet with criticism and ridicule, he wished to fortify himself at every point. In the spring of 1798 he prepared the manuscript for his pamphlet, which was published in June, 1798. As he had expected, he became a target for all sorts of abuse and malice, especially in England. The medical men of the continent were as a rule more scientific than those in England at that time, and there the pamphlet was treated with more consideration: for scientific men are not prone to reject what is new without fair tests. In England, again, many medical men condemned vaccination after giving it unfair trials and refusing to follow Jenner's directions.

The first copy of Jenner's pamphlet that came to America fell into the hands of Prof. Waterhouse, of Cambridge. Struck with the value of the discovery, should it be all that was claimed for it, he wrote an account of it for the Columbian Sentinel of March 2, 1799, and brought it before the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, of which John Adams was president. Waterhouse sent to England for vaccine virus, and vaccinated seven of his own children, six successfully. Then, like Jenner, he inoculated them with smallpox, but this did not take. That was the beginning of vaccination in America. In 1801 Dr. Waterhouse got some new virus and instructions from Jenner, and sent some to Thomas Jefferson, who was then president of the United States. Jefferson immediately vaccinated nearly 200 persons in the families of his sons-in-law and neighbors, and his success increased the popularity of vaccination in America.

For four years after the publication of his pamphlet, Jenner gave practically all of his time to vaccination, and most of it gratuitously, and in addition spending several thousand dollars a year in the work. Parliament was petitioned to compensate him for his great work, and after a debate he was voted a miserable £10,000, much less than he could have made in private practice, had he accepted the invitations to go to London. Several years afterwards, the facts being again brought before parliament, he was voted an additional £20,000.

In one way or another Jenner was honored by the government or princes and potentates of almost every civilized country. Diplomas and honors of learned bodies were showered upon him, and medals were struck in his honor. In England, on the continent and in America the clergy prayed for him and preached the gospel of vaccination. His pamphlet was translated into almost every European and Asiatic language. The Spanish government, then more civilized and wide-awake than at present, fitted out an expedition that carried vaccinators and vaccine virus to all the Spanish possessions in the new world. So greatly was Jenner honored that during the war between France and England his personal passport to an Englishman traveling for his health was honored by Napoleon on many occasions.

DR. EDWARD JENNER.

Bitterly as Jenner and his discovery were fought during the first 25 years of vaccination, nothing could succeed against the figures showing the decline of smallpox year by year after 1798, when the discovery was made known. In some countries in which the annual number of deaths from smallpox had been thousands, it fell to tens, often to less than fifty. From India and the East Indies, where smallpox was a greater scourge than cholera, came the same facts in favor of vaccination. But as facts are stubborn things, so are prejudiced men, and some of these could still be found, who while having but little weight where they were best known, continued to ignore facts and to combat vaccination.

The mere saving of lives and of days of illness does not appeal to some men; but the saving of wealth touches a popular chord. During the first four years of vaccination the saving of life and days of illness resulted in England alone in saving of wealth to the amount of £800,000, from vaccination alone. Making no allowance for increase of population, and taking no account of the greater risk due to more rapid transportation and closer intercommunication, the wealth saved in England alone by vaccination during the century of vaccination amounts to £80,000,000. The amount is of course much greater, as will be seen by the fact that the cholera epidemic of 1884-87 cost southern Europe 150,000 lives and more than $500,000,000; and smallpox without vaccination would be a worse disease than cholera, far worse than yellow fever.

ALIMONY FOR MRS. ABBEY.

Awarded $3,300 a Year and $350 Attorney's Fee by the Court.

New York, Aug. 19.—Lawyer Brooke, before Justice Smyth of the supreme court, moved for an allowance of $100 a week alimony and $500 counsel fee for Mrs. Florence Gerard Abbey, pending the trial for an action for separation which she has brought against Henry E. Abbey, the theatrical manager. Mr. Brooke said: "Mrs. Abbey is utterly without means for her support or to prosecute the case, while Mr. Abbey, you know, is in receipt of at least $10,000 a year as one of the managers of the Metropolitan Grand Opera house. We believe Mr. Abbey has other means or that he will shortly receive other sums of money, but we are unable to state just how much. During the past year," said Mr. Brooke, continuing to read from the complaint, "the defendant has been in almost a continual state of intoxication, and he has abused Mrs. Abbey until she was in fear of her life." Mr. Abbey's attorney set up a general denial of the charges. Justice Smyth finally fixed the alimony at $3,300 a year and gave Mr. Brooke $350 counsel fee.

GEN. WEYLER'S DECREE.

An Official Copy of the Order Regarding Filibusters.

New York, Aug. 19.—Senor Baldasano, consul general for Spain in this city, has received an official copy of Gen. Weyler's recent decree regarding filibusters. It was first published in Havana in the official Gazette. It is as follows: "Duly authorized by the government of his majesty, I order the following decree: Article 1. Any individual aiding our cruisers to capture a steamer bearing a filibustering expedition will be rewarded by the treasury of this island with the amount of $24,000 the moment the capture is effected, and with the sum of $9,000 for each sailing vessel of more than 205 tons captured under similar circumstances. Article 2. The captain of the vessel captured will be exempt from all responsibility Note. A subsequent decree also exempts the crew of the captured vessel from all responsibility. Valeriano Weyler."

VICTORY FOR TEBEAU.

Decision of the Court Against the National League Collecting a Fine.

Cleveland, Aug. 19.—Oliver Tebeau, captain of the local baseball team, is successful in his fight against the National league, Judge Noble having rendered his decision in the injunction to prevent the league from either intefering with the Cleveland team or its captain. He would have mad the injunction permanent but for the fact that the same objects were assured by continuing the original restraining order in force. The object of the injunction prayed for in the petition was to prevent the National league from collecting an alleged wrongful $200 fine assessed against a local captain or barring the team or player from participating in championship games.

New York L. Roads' Earnings.

The net income for the same quarter last year was $376,799. For the same time in 1894 it was $593,303. The total net earnings for the year were $1,118,097. The statistics for the quarter are: Gross earnings, $2,321,813; operating expenses, $1,385,914; other income, $42,500: fixed charges, $616,799, net income, $361,599.

Is the Fuller a Filibuster?

Halifax, N. S., Aug. 19.—Wild rumors are in circulation here as to the nature of the cargo carried by the barkentine Herbert Fuller, which sailed hence yesterday, ostensibly for Rosario. The same stories were afloat shortly after the Fuller arrived here with the three murdered victims on board. This is to the effect that the vessel is only partly loaded with lumber, of which there is no more than enough to conceal a cargo of provisions and war supplies intended for Cuban rebels and that she is bound for the Cuban coast.

TEN SAILORS LOST

Result of the Burning of the Bark Stafford.

HAD TAKEN TO THE SMALL BOAT

The Captain and Ten of the Crew in Another Small Boat Reach Shore Safely Although the Sea at the Time of the Disaster Was Rough.

Philadelphia, Aug. 19.—According to private advices received in this city today, ten of the crew of twenty-one men of the British bark Flora P. Stafford, which was burned at sea several weeks ago, perished. The ill-fated vessel, although sailing under the English flag, was owned principally in this city. She sailed from New Castle, N. S. W., April 22, for Manila, with about 2,000 tons of coal, and on June 8, in latitude 6 north, longitude 13 east, she took fire. The flames soon got control of the ship and the crew was compelled to take to the boats. Capt. Oscar Smith, a brother to Capt. Smith of this city, took to one boat with ten men and the mate with nine other men got in the second boat. Capt. Smith and his ten men succeeded in saving themselves, but nothing has ever been heard from the chief mate and his crew. The sea at the time was rough and the probabilities are that the boat was capsized and all were lost. There are hopes, however, that the sailors may have been picked up by some passing vessel and will yet be heard from.

SPANIARDS TRICKED.

All Their Efforts Fail To Prevent Landing of Filibusters.

Havana, Aug. 19.—Notwithstanding the activity of the warships engaged in patrolling the coast of the island, the landing of filibustering expeditions continues, and within the past few months the insurgents have in this way recived much aid from sources outside the island. The latest expedition to safely land was got ashore on the coast of Pinar del Rio, and the members and the supplies they brought with them are now with the rebels. The news of the landing of this expedition reached here late last evening. It is said that the expedition was an important one, though the place from where it sailed is not stated. Basilio Soler, a prisoner of war, was shot this morning in the Cabana fortress for the crime of rebellion. The news received concerning the movements of the Spanish troops in the province of Pinar del Rio is unimportant.

New Jersey had established a record for good roads, and County authorities from other States were wont to travel over our highways and study the schemes employed for purposes of adoption; but there is recent evidence of woeful neglect in the care of the macadam roads in Union and Warren Counties which must cease if the State is to gain by its past good reputation in this particular.—New York Press

Where the Blame Belongs.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—Please allow me a little space in your valuable paper in relation to The Courier-News' account of Saturday's ball game. The writer of that article puts the blame of the loss of the game upon the back of Mr. Brown who acted as umpire. I have witnessed many games of baseball and wish to say that Mr. Brown's umpiring was impartial and very fair. I think all the spectators who were at the game will agree with me that they saw some of the "rottenest" playing on the part of the home team that they ever saw. Even "Krank" Mallinson left in disgust. The Y. M. C. A's put up a regular school-boy game, as a glance at the erter column will show. I do not wish to complain of the bad playing, as the best of teams are bound to have an off-day once in a while, but the baseball writer of The Courier-News attempting to place the game on Mr. Brown's shoulders is simply childish. I think others will back me up in my statement that Mr. Brown umpired as fair a game as anybody who has filled that capacity here in this city. It was "yellow" ball playing that cost the game, not Mr. Brown. Please set Mr. Brown right before the people. G. E F.

Barry Defends His Cow.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—Would you be so kind as to put this in your valuable paper. Marshal Whitely arrested my cow. I went with Chief Hansen to see Justice Crosley about it, as the Marshal arrested her just as she was coming in at the gate to be milked. Justice Crosley asked me if she had a halter attached to her, and I told him she had and he told me, in the presence of Chief Hansen, that Whitely had no right to arrest her at all, as she was being driven from the field by two boys. John Taylor, a colored man, made the complaint and they had me arrested and fined me $5, which I consider an outrageous shame as J. F. Wilson is allowed to drive his three cows to and from the field, as is also Mr. Jennings and P. M. French's cow is driven all the way down Duer street. Why don't they arrest the rich man's cow as well as the poor man's cow? That shows they are afraid to do their duty. After Justice Crosley told me the cow could be driven as long as she had a halter on and a rope attached. Then I was fined $5 for doing as he told me.

The Poultry Show.

Poultry and pigeon fanciers are advocating a poultry show in the Jersey Cycle Academy to be held this fall, as has already been told in The Daily Press. There are many choice birds both registered and otherwise, in this city and North Plainfield, and if such an exhibition was arranged the public would undoubtedly patronize it. John Angleman has some forty game fowls, some of them having come to him all the way from Walter Hopkins, the Augusta, Ga., chicken fancier, which he is willing to place on exhibition, and there are others who would enter their chickens for the sake of competing for the prizes if for nothing else.

Our doctor's remedies had failed, then we tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, which gave very speedy relief. We regard it as the best medicine ever put on the market for bowel complaints.—Mrs. E. G. Gregory, Frederickstown, Mo. This certainly is the best medicine ever put on the market for dysentery, summer complaint, colic and cholera infantum in children. It never fails to give prompt relief when used in reasonable time and the plain printed directions are followed. Many mothers have expressed their sincere gratitude for the cures it has effected. BLIND BOYS PLAY BASEBALL.

Game Differs in Many Details from the Regular One.

Prof. R. B. Huntoon, of the Kentucky school, describing baseball among the blind, says: The baseball game differs, of course, in many of its details from the regular games. The diamond is not of regulation size, but is of regulation form. The distance between bases is but 40 feet. The fielders are stationed the same as in the National league game, with the exception that there is a right shortstop, thus making ten men to a side. In the outfield, in public games, there is an unlimited unmber of players, each taking a turn at the bat, first moving up one position whenever a batsman is put out.

The catcher sits on the ground, well back from the home plate, and, to guard against injury, he wears a mask and a chest protector. His position is such that when a pitcher delivers a ball it strikes the ground just between the knees and is taken on the short bound.

The batsman takes his position at the plate with a heavy flat bat, somewhat like those used in cricket. The umpire, who must be a man of unimpaired vision, calls upon the pitcher to get ready, and then clearly cings out: "One, two, three!" At the word three the pitcher must loyally deliver the ball. He pitches in the slow, underhand way peculiar to the game 25 or 30 years ago, the idea being to deliver a ball that can be hit by the batsman, who, standing there in the darkness, with a sharpened sense of hearing and a wonderful conception of the time that must elapse before the ball reaches him, is prepared to strike.

If the batsman should miss the ball bounces into the catcher's lap, and is returned to the pitcher by a single toss with a precision that is wonderful. When the ball is batted the umpire calls out quickly to the fielder in whose direction it is traveling, and he, guided by a sense of hearing, either catches the ball or follows it in its course through the grass. Six strikes are an out. In fielding any number of bounds are permitted. If the batted ball is a "hot liner" and traveling straight for an infielder's head, the umpire shouts a warning, and in such cases the player ducks or falls to the turf.

It is possible, in fact, the ball is frequently fielded to first in time to put out the runner. When throwing to first the assisting player, who is guided by the voice of the baseman, calculates the distance with nicety and throws the ball so that it strikes the ground a few yards in front of the baseman. The latter hears it coming and usually gets it without further assistance. Running bases was formerly a difficult thing. There were then three trees on the diamond, toward which the runner ran with outstretched hands. Bags have since been substituted for bases, and the runner is guided by the voice of the baseman, who is required to shout: "First, first, first!" In like manner the other bags are won. Once on a base, the runner is pretty sure to get home, unless his side dies at the home plate. Six outs put a side out.—Boston Transcript.

Nearly Caught By the Trolley.

A young daughter of Chas. Scheidt, chef at the Mountain Park Inn, was nearly struck by the fender on a Somerset street car, on Somerset street, near noon today. According to the story of an eyewitness, the child was crossing the track from one side to the other when she slipped and fell. Little Emma Windham ran out and dragged the girl from the track just in time to save her from perhaps fatal injuries. The motorman was not to blame in the least; in fact, he used every effort to save the child.

THE LAST BARRIER BROKEN.

Woman Has at Last Conquered the Business World.

Feminine Dentists, Customs Brokers, Electricians, Undertakers and Publishers Have Proved That They Can Play a Winning Game.

[COPYRIGHT, 1896.]

The "business woman" is at last an accomplished fact. It is several years since her evolution, and she has had rather a lively time not only in breaking down the barriers of masculine disapproval but in uprooting a few feminine characteristics which proved to be superfluous.

The business woman of to-day has acquired the habit of thinking logically, of prefering justice to sentiment, and of facing a sharply outlined fact without displaying the slightest tendency to hysterics.

And she is everywhere, this nineteenth century business woman, dignified, well-groomed and tailor-made. She is very often a pretty woman, but she never flirts—in business hours.

She was recently in our midst as chief engineer of the great electric show in New York. She is lecturing on the coast of Norway on the eclipse of the sun. She is superintending funerals in Boston. She is a war correspondent in Cuba and an explorer in the wilds of Africa. Very often she is the mother of children who adore her, and who somehow are quite as dainty and lovable as any other children.

Women have been lawyers, physicians and college professors so long that these occupations have grown to seem legitimate and normal fields of activity for intelligent, ambitious young women; but it is only within the past few years that the woman dentist has appeared, strong in her integrity, biceps and diploma, to smilingly assure tortured patients that she "pulls teeth without pain," and will chat volubly with a man whose mouth is dammed up with rubber and unexpressed adjectives.

One of the most successful dentists of New York is Dr. Josephine Maud Rankin. Miss Rankin graduated with a class of 70 men, from the Philadelphia dental college three years ago. She at once started in business for herself, and now occupies an entire building on Sixth avenue near Twenty-third street. Her patronage has increased to such an extent that she now employs ten men as assistants, all college graduates, and has actually established a company called the "World's Dental Association," of which she is the manager. When asked why she did not employ women as assistants and so aid the sisterhood, Miss Rankin replied:

"Why, I would like nothing better, but do you know that since I began business not a single woman has applied to me for a position. I think women are too ambitious to start that way. All the women dentists I know are in business for themselves. I began that way, however. I was in a dentist's office three years before going to college, and during vacation I used to go as 'lady assistant' to help pay my way in the winter. I have had, altogether, nine years' experience, and am very proud of the exhibit of dental work I was able to send to the Atlanta exposition."

Miss Rankin is a Brooklyn girl, young, vivacious, thoroughly in earnest, a graduate of the Brooklyn high school, and probably the most successful of the 2 women dentists in the United States.

The women photographers, insurance agents, and lecturers of Boston share their progressive honors with Mrs. Alice C. Cram, one of the most prosperous contractors of the busy Hub. Mrs. Cram was originally in business with her husband, but soon determined to manage her own business affairs. She is now established in offices next door to her husband, and has met with unqualified success. Although an unusually pretty woman, Mrs. Cram possesses a keen business sense, is brisk and decisive in all dealing with men and women, and, as she says, "believes in leaving all prejudices, sentiments and personalities at home;" and, being a womanly woman, she has a very lovely home at which to leave them.

The woman real estate agent is, strange to say, not a new development. The first real estate office superintended by a woman, was opened in New York on West Thirty-fifth street, the day of Lincoln's assassination. Miss Elizabeth A. Dailey was the agent, and is still doing a lucrative business in the same house.

Miss Dailey has had charge at different times of the property owned by Mrs. Marie Taylor, widow of Bayard Taylor; Miss Whittier, niece of the Quaker poet; and of Mrs. Charlotte Wilborn, one of the charter members of Sorosis.

It is a remarkable thing that Cincinnati's only customs broker is a woman and that she is the only one of her sex in the United States. Her name is Helena Regina Graser, and she does business in the Pickering building, Main street, in the prettiest kind of a little office. She is a fine-looking woman, tall and dignified, and is a lively and entertaining talker. Her work is of a nature that demands a vast knowledge of detail. In assessing duties on imports she has need of an accurate knowledge of tables of weights and measures and for all lines of her work must be abreast of the times even to a perfect understanding of tariff and the money question.

Miss Graser was born in Montreal. Her parents were Swiss. She came to Cincinnati when quite a little child and has lived in a brokerage atmosphere all her life. Her father was a broker and at his death when Miss Helena Graser was only 16 years of age, his work was taken up by an older daughter. She taught Miss Graser the principles of the business. After a year and a half the sister sold her interest and married Dr. Roethe, a well-known Cincinnati physician.

Two years later Miss Graser started out for herself as customs broker and many of the old patrons of her father and sister returned to her. After an experience of seven years she has a thriving business and is the only licensed broker in the city.

Women lecturers who are their own business managers and impressarios form an ever increasing list. There is Miss Kingsley, who talks about Africa; Mrs. Custer, who knows all about buffalos and camping in the west; Mrs. J. Wells Champney, who is in touch with the latest developments in literature, art, and politics; Miss Clarkson, who tells you "what Emerson and Browning meant," or what she thinks they meant; Mrs. Olive Thorne Miller, the feminine Audobon—women who are trying to reform politics, and women who can talk with airy flippancy of the latest fads in china or bonnets, or who can fix you with an eagle eye while they convince you that the Mahatmas have at last domesticated themselves in the tenderloin district of New York.

Miss Mary Proctor is the woman astronomer who has arranged to give a series of lectures on the heavens during the summer on shipboard, for especial benefit of the pretty college maidens who sail with her in June to witness the eclipse of the sun in Norway.

WOMEN WHO HAVE BEEN SUCCESSFUL IN BUSINESS.

For the women who like to lecture but not to manage their own tours there is the female impressario, Miss Anna Millar. Miss Millar has been business manager for Theodore Thomas for three years. During the first year of Miss Millar's management the subscription lists jumped up some $12,000. Miss Millar wears pretty gowns, and has a quiet, gentle manner that would suggest a familiarity with fancy work rather than the management of the public careers of prominent men and women.

The business woman has also invaded Wall street. Miss Daisy Weber is at present manager of the Western Agency, limited, in place of her father, whose recent strange disappearance would have left his wife and family totally unprovided for had not this plucky maiden stepped into the breach and decided to conduct his business, in spite of the fact that a feminine broker was as yet an unknown quantity in New York. Miss Weber is not a member of any of the exchanges, but simply acts as middleman between seller and buyer, and is making a comfortable living for her family.

Mrs. Frank Walton, the chief engineer of the recent New York Electrical exhibition, is one of the two women engineers in this country. She has been in love with steam engines since she first strolled in an engine-room when a tiny miss in pinafores and long braids. At the recent electric show she managed the two great boilers of 250 horse power that ran the 15 engines in the building.

Miss Virginia Pope has for several years divided her attention between dressing shop windows and arranging dinner tables for the nobility of England and the elite of New York. Among her patrons are the princess of Wales, Princess Beatrice, Lady Gadon, the Vanderbilts, Astors and Fields.

Mrs. Dow, of Vermont, is the president and manager of a newly-organized railroad company. And turning from New England to California, we find that Miss Jennie Hilton has made $25,000 within the past three years as a mining prospector.

However stanchly the barriers erected against the business woman have been maintained in the past, she has yet to encounter the obstacles she cannot with patience and perseverance overcome. She can manage a livery stable, run an express wagon, pilot a Mississippi steamer, preside over "tonsorial parlors," defeat justice as a professional burglar, be the architect of her own house as well as fortunes, electioneer for herself at the polls, and make a graceful and efficient mayor of a city if her electioneering proves successful.

MARY ANNABLE FANTON.

GOTHAM'S BABY MONKEY.

It Arrived Unexpectedly at the Central Park Zoo.

First One Born There Since 1888—The Mother's Pride in Her Offspring—Child Had to Be Separated from Its Father.

There is a baby monkey at Central park, New York. It came in the nature of a great surprise to everyone concerned except its fond mother. The mother is called Jennie, and the father goes by the appellation of Max. They have been keeping house together for some little time in a cage on the right of the monkey room as one enters from the south. Mother and child are both doing well, and the little fellow is pronounced by some of those who see him to be the "sweetest thing alive." The parents belong to the tribe of monkeys known as the Java Macqua, having rather long gray hair, and are of about medium size as monkeys go.

This is the first baby monkey born alive at the Zoo in the park since 1888, and from what "Jake," the monkey man, said to a New York Tribune reporter, the little fellow will eclipse the baby hippopotamus in the attention he is bound to receive from the public.

When the reporter went into the monkey house he found "Jake" wreathed in smiles and as happy as a clam at high tide.

"Why," said he, "when I came down here Monday morning and was told that the little baby monkey had been found in the cage I was completely taken off my feet. It was born in the night, and I never suspected such a thing," and "Jake" laughed heartily.

"How do you keep it so quiet?" inquired the reporter.

"Well, you see, this having a baby monkey is such an unusual occurrence, and so much care and attention are required to see that the mother is not subjected to any excitement, that we have not said anything about it, and it will be some time before we shall place them on exhibition. We want to give him every chance to get a good start in life. The time the last baby monkey was born in the Zoo his mother died and it affected his development. He pined for her, and, although he lived to be two years old, his death was attributed to the loss of his mother. Come in and take a peep at the little fellow," said Jake, in conclusion, as he opened a door at the end of a row of cages.

THE MOTHER AND BABY.

When Jake and the reporter entered Jennie was sitting on the bottom of the cage, with her offspring cuddled up in her lap, but at the sight of a stranger she made two or three jumps and springs, landing on an upper bar of the cage, the little baby clinging to her for dear life during her upward flight.

"There he is, and isn't he a 'beaut?'" Jake inquired, proudly.

Jennie sat on her perch, holding baby so tightly in her fond arms that at first there was some difficulty experienced by the reporter in getting even the peep that Jake had promised; but at last the mother, as if appreciating the fact that some one had come to admire her baby, dropped off and came down, and, lifting the little fellow up, kissed him on his little pug nose and placed him in a position to be inspected and complimented.

The baby's head is covered with short, black hair, which shows a wide part in the middle. He has a little turned-up nose, and his eyes are wide open and are as black as coal. He looks like a regular old man, with his forehead all covered with wrinkles. He thinks his mother is just about right, for he won't let go of her for a moment, and is strong enough in the legs to hang on all by his "lonesome" wherever she goes.

"They are most affectionate with their young," explained Jake, as Jennie laid her cheek next the little fellow's and then hugged him with delight, just as one sees human mothers do. "Why, even the fathers are tickled to death with a young one. I remember our last monkey baby. His father was Jacobus. We've got him yet. He's outside in one of the cages. I'll show him to you when we go out. Well, when we had the last baby, we would let him stay in the cage with his father. Jacobus would sit for hours letting that youngster run all over him, and appeared as proud of him as you can imagine."

"What do you feed Jennie now?" Jake was asked.

He replied that fresh carrots, nicely boiled potatoes, boiled rice and sweet milk made up her daily bill of fare. Jake said he decided when he first knew the baby had arrived that it was best to separate the mother and child from the father. This was no easy work, for the monkeys do not like such an arrangement and will fight. Jake had to jump right into the cage and take the baby from the mother. He handed it to an assistant outside, and then took the mother in his arms, and put them both in a cage by themselves in the little room mentioned.

Jennie, the mother, was left at the park about a year ago, and belongs to some private person, but Jake said that he doubted if she would ever be taken away from the park.

STEAL HEAVY NAILS.

California Rodents Construct a Home o Railroad Spikes.

California is a state of big things and not the least interesting among them is the huge wood rat found along the slope of the Cascade mountains. Besides being big, the rat is a professional thief. He steals anything and everything, and is the terror of the natives as well as of hunting parties. Forest and Stream tells some amusing stories of raids made on camps by rats which carried away knives, forks, spoons, tin plates, towels, cartridges and all sorts of cloth and rags that could be used as lining for their nests.

The same paper tells of an effort at building done by a pair of these rats which beats all record for rat architecture. They selected the top of the stove in a hunter's cabin for the site, and while the hunter was gone they built their house. They used railroad spikes for the walls, securing them from a railroad shanty 200 yards from the cabin.

RAT'S QUEER NEST.

In building the house they laid the spikes with the utmost regularity and arranged them so that the points all stuck out. After building the wall up to the proper height the rats filled the interior with soft stuff and had quite a comfortable home when the hunter returned and ousted them without the formality of a writ of ejectment.

It is not always that the rats put the results of their theft to such good use. Many things are stolen apparently for the love of stealing and with no intention of using the stolen articles. In the matter of the railroad spikes it seems that the rats knew what they were doing, for they stole enough spikes to erect their house, and no other iron entered into its construction. Perhaps one of the rats had visited a large city and secured some ideas about building by watching the erection of a modern skyscraper, and was so pleased with the scheme that he resolved to adopt it himself. At any rate the rats built a home that embodied in its construction many of the features of the 20-story buildings in New York.

This particular rat has many queer habits not common to rodents, and he is an interesting study for naturalists. Residents of the locality which the rats inhabit, however, maintain that the rats are a nuisance, and the thieving rascals are killed whenever possible. It is all right to study a criminal until your own goods have been purloined, and many California settlers have suffered from the depredations of the wood rat, and so they have sworn vengeance on the pestiferous but jolly little rodent that steals merely for the pleasure of stealing.

ANTELOPE AND SNAKE.

How the Fleet Animal Makes War on Venomous Reptiles.

One of the worst foes the rattlesnake ever had on the western prairies was the antelope. This wary animal, allied to the deer species, is extremely timid and so afraid of man that only the best hunters could ever bag one. But they had no fear of the rattler, and when one of the reptiles was encountered it was speedily dispatched.

The method of the antelope in making war on the serpent was unique and heroic. The antelope walked around the snake a few times awaiting a favorable opportunity. When it came there was a quick bound and the sharp hoofs of the antelope came down with deadly effect on the body of the snake. With movements as rapid as thought the antelope jumped out of danger only to spring back on its victim again and again until the body of the snake was cut into mincemeat.

HOW AN ANTELOPE KILLS A RATTLESNAKE.

Old hunters say that it was rarely that an antelope was bitten in such an encounter with a rattler, and the snake was always killed unless it found a convenient prairie dog's hole into which it could crawl. The sharp hoofs of the antelope cut like knives, and after being struck once or twice the reptile was too badly injured to offer any effective resistance.

Millions of Soap Boxes.

Two of the soap manufacturers in Chicago together use over 3,000,000 white pine and cottonwood boxes in the course of a year to ship their product. There are something over 50 soap manufacturers in the United States and the annual consumption of all of them together is 150,000,000 boxes.

Delicate Dress Goods.

Some gowns are so dainty in the weave, so delicate in tint, that they seem to soil by being looked at—one or two wearings making them unpresentable, NOT USELESS. We make a specialty of cleaning fine fabrics, the more delicate the material, the better the results. Sometimes an accident will ruin a gown, without injuring the texture. We dye them then, sometimes we get a prettier effect than the original color. Fine goods stand redying. The finer the material the better the new color. We charge so little for cleaning or dyeing, that even if you are in doubt as to the result, it's worth while to experiment. Want a new evening gown for a dollar or two? LEGAL LIGHTS MEET

Opening Session of the American Bar Association.

IN CONVENTION AT SARATOGA TO-DAY

Lord Russell, Chief Justice of England, and Other Distinguished Lawyers from Abroad Present—Programme of the Week in Hand for To-day.

Saratoga, N. Y., Aug. 19.—The American Bar association began its session in Convention hall at 11 o'clock this morning. To-day's meeting will be consumed with the annual address of President Story and reports of the secretary and treasurer. Among the prominent legal men present are Lord Russell, chief justice of England, and several prominent councilors of England who accompanied him to America. Lord Russell and party reached here at 8:35 o'clock last night in the private car "Marquita" of the Wagner Car company. He was met at the depot by a delegation from the bar association, including President Story, Secretary Hinkley and judge George S. Batcheller. The party went at once to the United States hotel, near the depot, where Lord Russell has secured cottages. This evening Judge Batcheller will tender a reception to Lord Russell and party to meet the members of the American Bar association and other legal gentlemen in attendance, at his handsome Circular street residence. The reception will be practically a judicial affair and will be held at 9:30 o'clock. A large number of invitations have been issued and it promises to be the event of the week. Last evening the committee on international law and the members of the general council held meetings in Grand Union hotel and perfected their reports. The report of the former committee will be submitted to-morrow, and of the latter, to-day.

Albany, Aug. 19.—Lord Chief Justice Russell of England and party visited the state capitol building yesterday afternoon. Superintendent Eaton kept the forces of orderlies at their posts and had the party shown through the building. A committee of the National Bar association accompanied the distinguished party, which, after its tour, left for Saratoga to attend the annual meeting of the American Bar association there.

DAKOTAH DOUGLASS' DEATH.

It May Result in Exposures of Far Reaching Character.

Pittsburg, Aug. 19.—Dr. S. B. Anderson, of Arch street, Allegheny; Miss Annie Schrecongost of Manningtoo, W. Va., and Charles J. Boardhead of Kittaning, Pa., have been held to answer for the death of Miss Dakotah Douglass, who died in a Third avenue house Monday afternoon, the result of a surgical operation. Dr. Anderson is accused of performing the operation and Miss Schrecongost and Boardhead are held as being accessories before and after the fact. The case has many features of more than passing interest and may result in exposures of far reaching character. The prominence of all parties to the crime also lends interest to the case. Miss Shrecongost was admitted to bail in $1,000 yesterday. Her accused associates were denied bail.

Death Sentence Commuted.

Washington, Aug. 19.—The president has commuted to imprisonment for life the sentence of Thornton Alexander, convicted here of murder and sentenced to be hanged on November 27. The court officials recommended a commutation of sentence and the president believes that the facts in the case do not establish such a deliberate and premeditated homicide as should be punished by death. The convict is 19 years of age.

Army Orders.

Washington, Aug. 19.—Capt. W. W. Gibson, ordnance department, stationed at Cleveland, O., and Capt. Frank Heath, ordnance department, now on leave, have been ordered to the Sandy Hood proving ground on business pertaining to the test of gun carriages. Capt. Charles Morris has been transferred from Light Battery F to Battery K, relieving Capt. H. J. Reilly, who goes to Battery E.

DENIAL BY BRYAN

Says He Was Never in the Employ of Silver Mine Owners.

REPLIES TO SENATOR THURSTON

His Income Not Large and Derived from His Editorial Work and Lectures. Was Always an Advocate of Free Silver.

Upper Red Hook, N. Y., Aug. 19.—Up to the time of his departure on his fishing trip yesterday Mr. Bryan received a number of callers. Most of them came by train to Tarrytown and drove six miles to Upper Red Hook. One of them was D. C. Keterer of Pine Plains, who wanted the nominee to make a speech there. He said Pine Plains was the usual place for holding big political demonstrations in Dutchess county and pointed out the advantages afforded for meeting purposes by a large pasture in the town. An invitation also came from Tivoli, Dutchess county, and this may be accepted. Despite his suburban isolation, Mr. Bryan is getting his mail regularly and his private secretary, J. W. Cutwright, has his hands full attempting to sort and answer the three hundred letters so far received.

Mr. Bryan's Statement.

On his return from the fishing trip last night Mr. Bryan gave out a prepared answer to the allegations made by Senator Thurston that Mr. Bryan was in the pay of the mine owners. "I have already denied this charge on several occasions, but the reiteration of it by Senator Thurston, a distinguished resident of my own state, justifies me in answering it again. I have never at any time or under any circumstances been in the employ of any mine owners, individually or collectively, directly or indirectly, nor have I ever been in the employ of or been paid by any bimetallic organization. Aside from my editorial salary of about $150 per month paid by the Omaha World Herald and a small amount derived from the legal profession, my income since my retirement from congress has been derived from lectures before lyceums and lecture bureaus which have usually paid me a fixed sum from contributions made by the people of the localities where I have spoken. In some instances I have received nothing at all. In most places I have received more than enough to cover traveling expenses. In only two instances, I think, has my compensation exceeded $100, and these instances it was about $200 at one place and about $300 at the other. The first platform upon which I ran for congress in 1890, before I was known politically outside of my state, contained a free coinage plank, and my republican opponent that year was an advocate of free coinage. In the campaign of 1892 I again ran upon a free coinage platform, and my opponent for the senate, Mr. Thurston, while opposing unlimited coinage at 16 to 1, insisted that he favored bimetallism. I wrote the free coinage plank upon which I ran in 1890, and the free coinage planks in the Nebraska state platform in 1891, 1894, 1895 and 1896, and tried to secure the adoption of free coinage planks in the state platforms of 1892 and 1893. I only mention this to show that my advocacy of free silver is not of a recent date. Having made this answer to Mr. Thurston's letter I shall hereafter take no notice of individual or newspaper comments upon this subject. If the republican national committee will say officially that it believes I have ever been employed to deliver speeches by any mine owner or group of mine owners, or by any association supported by mine owners, I am ready to make a statement showing in detail all money received by me for speech making."

The members of the family were so heavily drugged that it was with difficulty that they were aroused.

SPORTS

WEDNESDAY, Aug. 19. Sun rises 5:13 a. m., sets 6:54 p. m. Lanterns must be lighted between 7:54 p. m. and 4:13 a. m.

Cyclists desiring to join the League of American Wheelmen will be furnished with application blanks and necessary information by addressing the Cycling Department of the Daily Press.

CYCLING COMMENT.

Messrs. Feytel and Miller, of Newark, rode their wheels to this city yesterday and called on friends. They returned toward evening.

The revival of an old idea, by the Manhattan Bicycle Club, of a hill-climbing contest, at the old place, famous in the days of the ordinary—Eagle Rock hill—on Monday, September 7, (Labor Day) at 11 a. m. will evidently prove a success, but not so difficult as in the old times of a decade ago. Entries should be made with Jos. Oatman, 1556 Broadway, New York. No gear under 56 will be allowed.

Diversified novelties will be a striking feature of the Atalanta Wheelmen's meet at Waverly Park on August 22. The race between triplet teams for one mile will be an interesting feature. The Harlem Wheelmen, Vim Bicycle Club and Elizabeth A. C. will contest for three-cornered honors. The King's County Wheelmen's "quad" will be present for exhibition. It may be used to pace Earl and Ripley in record trials.

The Evening Telegram, of New York, last night published a good likeness of F. L. C. Martin, of this city, and a short sketch of his life. He is spoken of in high terms as a veteran cyclist and one of the most prominent bicycle dealers in the State. His kindness to cyclists passing through Plainfield is particularly noted. Mr. Martin, as the originator of the Newark-Philadelphia century run, and one of New Jersey's leading wheelmen, has been invited to be one of the pacemakers for the Telegram's big century run on August 29. He has accepted.

Now that the Louisville meet is over the riders will have an opportunity for rest until the Springfield meet, which is one of the most important of the year. It will take place next month, and all of the fast men, with the possible exception of Johnson, will be there to compete for the valuable prizes. Amateurs and professionals will be provided for on the program, and as some of the latter are riding very fast and the track is in the best of condition, good time may be expected.

AROUND THE BASES.

The Bound Brook base ball team play a team from Trenton on Saturday at Bound Brook.

The Assessor's Book Correct.

Councilmen Tolles, Stebbins, Frost, Serrell, Westphal and Ginna, met in the City Council rooms last evening and examined the books of Tax Assessor Hubbard. They were found to be all right and were passed as correct.

A Lively Time Over a Dog.

A man by the name of Baldwin, who lives on the mountains back of North Plainfield, picked up a valuable dog on Somerset street last evening and took the canine home with him. The dog belonged to a man living at Springfield and he, hearing of his lost dog's whereabouts, came to North Plainfield this morning, and he with a boy named Duffy went to Baldwin's home, where they found the dog. It is understood that a lively time followed the dog's removal, but there were no arrests.

Ex-Councilman E. H. Bird and wife, of Elm place, are among the Plainfield guests at Asbury Park.

The condition of Mrs. Henry Bennett, of Metuchen, sister of J. W. VanSickle, of this city, has become most alarming. Drs. Baldwin, of New Brunswick, and McKingsley, of Metuchen, have been in daily attendance. Her complaint has developed into typhoid fever, and little encouragement is given of her recovery.

RESISTANCE OF A TRAIN.

At Sixty Miles an Hour It Is Four Times Greater Than at Thirty.

At 60 miles an hour the resistance of a train is four times as great as it is at 30 miles—that is, the fuel must be four times as great in the one case as it is in the other. But at 60 miles an hour this fuel must be exerted for a given distance in half the time that it is at 30 miles, so that the amount of power exerted and steam generated in a given period of time must be eight times as great as the fastest speed.

This means that the capacity of the boiler, cylinders, and other parts must be greater, with a corresponding addition to the weight of the machine. Obviously, therefore, if the weight per wheel, on account of the limit of weight that the rails will carry, is limited, we soon reach a point when the driving wheels and other parts cannot be further enlarged, and then we reach the maximum of speed.

The nice adjustment necessary of the various parts of these immense engines may be indicated by some figures as to the work performed by these parts when the locomotive is worked at a high speed. Take a passenger engine on any of the big railroads.

At 60 miles an hour a driving wheel 5½ feet in diameter revolves five times every second; now, the reciprocating parts of each cylinder, including one piston, piston rod cross head and connecting rod, weighing about 650 pounds, must move back and forth a distance equal to the stroke, usually about two feet, every time the wheel revolves, or in the fifth of a second.

It starts from a state of rest at the end of each stroke of the piston, and must acquire a velocity of 32 feet per second in one-twentieth of a second, and must be brought to a state of rest in the same period of time. A piston 18 inches in diameter has an area of 254½ square inches. Steam of 150 pounds pressure per square inch would, therefore, exert a force on the piston equal to 38,175 pounds. This force is applied alternately on each side of the piston ten times in a second.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Power of Insects and Horses.

Few people have any idea of the wonderful amount of strength possessed by members of the beetle family. Felix Plateau has made experiments which show that a common door beetle can draw 500 times its own weight and a stag beetle has been known to escape from a box weighted with a book 1,700 times greater than the insect's body. If a horse's strength was as great comparatively as that of the common flea he could draw a dead weight of 800,000 pounds!—N. Y. Sun.

—When you see the sun drawing water at night, know that it will rain on the morrow. The sun is said to be drawing water when its rays can be seen shining through rifts in distant clouds.

FOLDING CHURCH CARS.

One of the Latest Inventions of Railroad Car Builders.

When in Position and Unfolded These Queer Meeting Houses Extend Over Two Tracks and Overhang on Each Side.

Folding beds are modern in the sense that they became common when city people took to living in flats, but they were used in Europe decades ago. Folding houses, or, as they are called, portable houses, are sent to all parts of the world. Folding bicycles are seeking recognition. Folding boats have been used by hunters and fishermen for years. Folding coops imprison thousands of chickens which are brought to market from poultry raisers.

In short, hundreds of things are now made to fold up in a small compass, so that they take up little room when in transit, but open out to full size when set up in place.

One of the latest inventions in the folding line is a "Gospel car," which looks like an ordinary freight car when made up in the train, but which grows and expands into a comfortable, commodious chapel, with a steeple and bell tower, when the itinerant evangelist sets up his wheeled house of worship on a siding.

Albert Bierstadt, a New York inventor, says the Chicago Record, seems to have a faculty for devising queer railroad cars of the folding-expansive type, for he has invented four kinds. In one the sides are made so that they swing out and down when a windlass is turned and another attachment lifts the whole roof of the car up to give more head room.

Another type looks like the first when folded up, but it can be transformed into a larger room. Extra wings and sides are added so that the floor can be extended far beyond the fixed floor of the car, and the exterior space can be walled in and covered by a hinged roof.

The third kind is made so that it can be lighted by windows, and in addition it is partitioned off into rooms. The latest form is a combination of the last two, and requires two cars to make the whole.

These cars are run on to parallel tracks side by side, the floor sections are swung down to fill the space between the cars, and are clamped together so as to make a solid floor.

The roof sections swing out to within a short distance of each other, and extension pieces are clamped between, and the whole is inclosed by walls which are bolted and clamped in place.

These walls have windows in them, and when the entire affair is put together the railroad chapel extends over two tracks and overhang on each side.

The machinery for raising a steeple over the queer church is capable of lifting the framework to a good height, and when this is put on there is nothing but the railroad track and car wheels to indicate the character of the house.

Braces and rods strengthen the floor and stiffen the walls and roofs, and everything is made so that the meeting house can be set up or taken down in a short time.

Traveling churches are not new, for one has been running over the railroads of the Dakotas for several years, but that railroad church was simply a large car, in which an organ and pulpit were installed, with one end of the car partitioned off to make a sleeping place and kitchen for the traveling preacher.

When railroad companies were reaching out over the prairies of the west, running new railroads through the great plains, armies of men were fed in the huge boarding cars that were important parts of the construction trains. These "boarding shanties" towered high over the box cars, some of them having three tiers of windows.

Thousands of men slept and ate in these traveling boarding houses for months at a time, and in them the original hobo found a home. The bunks extended the length of the car, tier above tier.

In some cars only the cooks and waiters slept, the men sleeping in other cars or tents. Where the construction crew was small one or two cars served for boarding and dining cars.

The boarding cars, iron cars, tie cars, gravel and sand cars, derrick cars, bridge cars and material cars for a long construction train formed one of the queerest aggregations of railroad rolling stock which ever ran over rails.

The City of Churches.

Brooklyn may be the city of churches, but apparently it has ceased to be the city of church-goers. One clergyman in that town has found it necessary to engage a military band to give a concert in his church at each service in order to attract the people.

Atlantic Liners Expensive.

It is stated that the first cost of building a fleet of Atlantic liners is a trifle compared to the cost of running them. In less than three years it will exceed the cost of construction, so enormous is the constant expenditure in wages, port dues and repairs.

Little Wood in Spain.

There is so little wood in Spain that the small boy knows nothing of the joys of whittling, and develops no ambition to become a carpenter. The result is that the carpenters are few, and their shops not well provided with modern tools and machinery.

MOST OF THE DEMOCRATIC STATE COMMITTEE FOR FREE SILVER.

Resolutions Pledging Their Support Adopted With Four Dissenting Votes—State Convention to be Held Sept. 9th.

By a vote of ten to four the New Jersey State Democratic Committee, at a meeting held yesterday afternoon in Taylor's Hotel, Jersey City, declared for free silver. The four who voted against the resolution, which also indorsed Bryan and Sewall and the Chicago platform in its entirety, were E. F. C. Young, president of the First National Bank, Jersey City; General Richard A. Donnelly, of Mercer; ex-Senator William J. Keys, of Somerset; and Samuel M. Wil liams, Comptroller of the New Jersey Central Railroad. All are out-and-out gold men.

When the committee convened there were present: Richard J. Byrnes, of Atlantic City; Henry B. Paul, of Camden; Benjamin S. Cox, Gloucester; E. F. C. Young, Hudson; Paul A. Queen, Hunterdon; David S. Crater, Monmouth; Louis F. Braun, Passaic; ex-Senator William J. Keys, Somerset; Samuel Fowler, Sussex; Samuel M. Williams, Union; Johnston Cornish, Warren; and Richard H. Kuhl, of Hunterdon; General Richard A. Donnelly, of Mercer, and Rufus Blodget, of Monmouth, members at-large.

In the absence of Senator James Smith, the chairman, who is in Europe, ex-Congressman Samuel Fowler was chosen to preside. A letter received from Abram DeRonde, Assemblyman from Bergen, was the subject of considerable comment. Mr. Ronde declared against the Chicago platform and its nominees. Several thought Mr. DeRonde should be dropped from the roll. Ex-Chairman Young and Mr. Williams thought the letter should be accepted. The latter, in stating his reasons, made a speech for gold. The letter was finally tabled after a resolution that the matter be brought to the attention of the chairman of the Bergen county committee and that the committee did not approve of Mr. DeRonde's sentiments had been passed.

Col. E. L. Price, of Newark, made a short speech, in which he urged an early convention. The silver sentiment, he said, was rapidly gaining strength in the State. He also said that Senator Smith would return from Europe in time to assume the management of the campaign.

The committee finally decided to hold the convention Sept. 9th, in Taylor's Opera House, Trenton. Mr. Cornish introduced the resolution which indorsed the Chicogo platform and its nominees. From the tenor of the remarks it is believed that all not in favor of the Chicago platform will be asked to resign, and in the event of their refusal will be forced out of the committee.

Arrivals at the Revere House.

The recent arrivals at the Revere House are: M. S. Tremaine, Mr. and Mrs T. A. Singer, M. M. Singer, Mr. and Mrs. Chambers, C. A. Maum, New York; C. M. Cordell, Chicago; Thos. A. Howe, C R. Pratt, Montclair; Chas F. Abbott, C. W. Abbott, Plainfield; F. Downs, Mrs. L. Hodges, F. C. George, wife and maid, O. C. Alexander, Brooklyn; C. Hepp, M. H. Smith, Paterson; A. S. Finney, Bridgeport; G. F. Jones, New Haven; Miss May Howard, E. H. Smith, Jersey City; W. H. Thomas, Portland.

Sidewalk Blockaded.

At the corner of Manning avenue and Somerset street, in North Plainfield, there is a nuisance calling for immediate attention. The sidewalk is torn up and blockaded and the street and avenue at this point is without a light except from an ordinary lantern. Excavations have been made and the dirt piled in the gutter. Last night a woman and two children on their way home tried to escape the embankment and all three fell in the gutter. Soiled clothes and vexed feelings were the result.

A Funny Case.

A peculiar, or rather funny, case is to be ventilated in Justice Mosher's court on the 25th inst. It is the case of Justice V. W. Nash against Bond, on contract, and the papers are returnable to the Justice on the 25th. The peculiarity of the case was the fact that Justice Nash couldn't issue summons in his own behalf. So it was taken before another justice of the peace. The case will also include a provision relating to the possession of the premises on West Third street.

Will Go on the Road.

John Daly, who managed Music Hall last season for Rich & Maeder, has been advanced by the same firm to a position with their "A Pair of Jacks" company. The company will open their season Sept. 22d, and will rehearse in New York.

FARMER JIM GETS APPLAUSE.

Addressed the Farmer at Packer's Island Yesterday.

The Journal, this morning, published the following about J. E. Martine's talk at Packer's Island yesterday: After a song or two by a quartet of Port Oram, Hon. James E. Martine was introduced. He is known as the "Farmer Orator of New Jersey." He has a big farm in Plainfield. As far back as 1872 Mr. Martine raised a rumpus in a Democratic meeting in Elizabeth by his free silver speeches. He spoke to-day for an hour and a half, tracing the history of the silver movement in this country and vehemently declaring no true prosperity would come to the farmer until the white metal was restored to its rightful place. The big audience rose and cheered wildly as Farmer Martine waved a big flag and called upon his hearers te make the election of William J. Bryan sure by giving him the New Jersey electoral votes.

Nearly Severed His Jugular Vein.

George McEnee, a driver for Mrs. J. Brown, of South Second street, almost lost his life while at work on a scavenger wagon Tuesday. He was turning into Randolph road from Central avenue, when one of the reins parted, and John Scudder, the driver, was thrown from his seat to the roadway. McEnee made an heroic effort to save Scudder, and he, too, was thrown from the seat to the ground, landing in such a position that the rear wheel of the wagon ran over his back and shoulder, nearly severing his jugular vein, To add to the injuries thus inflicted McEnee's head struck a stone in falling and he was rendered partially unconscious. Dr. Simpson attended the wounded man, and today he is able to go out.

A NOTABLE DECREASE.

The Borough Public School Membership Much Lower This Year.

According to the last census the decrease in membership in the borough public school this year will be about forty. If this is true it will make a difference of $200 less on the appropriation received from the State. The school has been thoroughly overhauled and is now in good condition for the coming year. The opening day will be Tuesday, September 8. Dr. Warde, the new principal, is expected to arrive in a few days, and he will at once prepare to open the school. Among the new teachers at the school is Miss Alice Needham, who has been teaching at the Greenbrook school. She is thoroughly competent and has met with remarkable success in teaching. She will have charge of one of the lower grade classes.

A New Enterprise.

A. M. Vanderbeek, formerly of the delivery department of Edsall's Commercial Palace, next week proposes to start a five and ten cent business delivery wagon, or two, if necessary. All it will be necessary for business men to do will be to hang out a sign and the wagon will stop and take such packages as are wished delivered There will be three deliveries a day, 9:30 a. m., and 1:30 and 4:00 p. m. The business men seem anxious for it as it will be of great advantage of those having no regular delivery wagon of their own.

May Build an Ice Pond.

It is stated upon good authority that the Plainfield Ice Company has purchased a portion of the William Spencer farm in Washington Valley and also a portion of the wellknown fertile land from the Underhill people. It is also stated upon most excellent authority that the company will erect a dam in the rear of Mr. Koch's residence to a point on the Valley road. Should the scheme go through, and the work once completed, this will, it is thought, be one of the first spring water lakes in this section of the country,

A Bad Fall.

John De Meza, of West Second street, was thrown from his wheel yesterday afternoon on West Front street by slipping on the trolley tracks. He was so stunned by the fall that he had to be carried to the sidewalk, where he soon recovered enough to walk. He received a number of painful bruises.

—The steam roller is at work on West Front street beyond Grant avenue.

—A benefit for the family of the late William Frey will be held at T. A. B. Hall this evening.

If you have ever seen a little child in the agony of summer complaint, you can realize the danger of the trouble and appreciate the value of instantaneons relief always afforded by DeWitt's Colic & Cholera Cure. CLUBHOUSE SITE CHOSEN

HILLSIDE MEMBERS WILL HAVE NEW QUARTERS AT RANDOLPH ROAD.

The Structure Will be Ready For Occupancy the First Week in September and Will Have an Opening for Their Friends.

Unless something unexpected happens, the new clubhouse the Hillside Tennis and Golf club will be ready for occupancy during the first week in September. A meeting of the Board of Directors of the club was held the first of the week when the exact site for the clubhouse was decided upon. It will be placed on Plainfield avenue, one hundred and twenty-six feet from the road and exactly at the head of Randolph road. The building is not large and work will be begun at once so that it is hoped that it will be completed before Labor Day. An opening has been planned when the Plainfield people will be invited to take a look at the new clubhouse.

The tennis courts of the club are to be changed from their present location on Watchung avenue to the ground directly in the rear of the new club house. They will hardly be in good condition for playing this year, however, and the old courts will probably be used. There will be the regular club championship tournament for the silver trophy on Labor Day, September 7, on the Watchung avenue courts. This tournament always brings out the best talent in the club and an exciting contest may be looked for.

There are no special golf matches arranged at present but the golf committee expect to have several more before the season is over.

An Unpleasant Removal.

Jack Pickering, a young lad living on East Front street, did some involuntary circus tumbling on Park avenue yesterday afternoon while W. Gordon Williams, of East Front street, proceeded to remove a large section of skin from his side. Williams was riding down the street on his wheel with Pickering riding on his handlebars. Either the lad went to sleep and lost his balance or else it was a stone that jolted him off. At any rate, he turned several somersaults as he fell, while Williams also tumbled off, landing on his wheel with the result above mentioned.

To Cruise In Their Own Boat.

Fred Overton, of Rockview avenue, and Harry Curtis, of Mercer avenue, went to Southold, Long Island, yesterday on their summer outing. They took their wheels with them and had their cat boat, which they constructed themselves, sent by express. They expect to spend much of their time cruising about Peconic Bay in their cat boat, which is thirty feet long.

Expensive Peddling.

William Mendel, who is in charge of the fish car at the old freight house, came up before City Judge DeMeza this morning charged with sending his assistant on Paradise Alley to peddle fish. Mendel admitted the fact, but pleaded ignorance of the city ordinance. The Judge declared him guilty of the same and fined him $5. The fine was paid.

Adjusting the Loss.

Through Mulford's agency, the North American Insurance Company, of Philadelphia, has adjusted part of the loss on the Benton property which was destroyed partially by fire on last Sunday. The Commercial Union Company, of New York, had a policy on the building through Wm. A. Woodruff's agency, and this was adjusted satisfactorily yesterday.

To Rehearse in Music Hall.

"The Cotton Spinner" company which Rich & Maeder, lessees of Music Hall, will produce this season, rehearses in Music Hall next week. The twenty-six members of the company will arrive in the city Monday morning. There will be a dress rehearsal Wednesday evening, and the opening performance will be Thursday evening.

WILL FLOAT A BANNER.

THE OCCASION TO BE A SPEECHMAKING ONE FOR REPUBLICANS.

The Banner Will Be Hung on North Avenue From the Hotel Grenada—City Executive Committee Increased in Number

The Republican City Executive Committee met in the Coward building last evening at 8 o'clock, all the members being in attendance. The main business transacted was in reference to the banner-raising and ratification which the committee has set down for some evening next week. Just what night it will be lies almost wholly with "Dore" Vroom, who is doing the painting on the banner network. Cobb, of College place, New York, is painting the portraits, and "Dore" is putting the artistic finishing touches on the netting. The banner itself is the same one that was swung to the breeze before the last Presidential campaign, and the total cost for the new production will not exceed $100.

The banner is to be strung over North avenue, from the Hotel Grenada building to D. W. Littell's building on the opposite side of the street. Or, perhaps, a pole will be erected in front of Mr. Littell's store. There will, in all probability, be speechmaking and fireworks from the balcony in front of The Grenada.

At the meeting, last night, the executive committee was increased to the extent of twelve, or three new members from each ward, making twenty four in all. The secretary was instructed and authorized to advertise the Republican primaries for next Monday evening.

To Repeat the Concert.

The Martin Bros. quartette are going to give another entertainment on the greens opposite the Cycle Academy this evening, weather permitting. The slim financial reward from the last concert did not in the least discourage the performers, so they have decided to repeat the entertainment, with new and additional features. Everybody is invited to hear the Martin Bros. free of charge, but they are reminded that a collection will be taken up for the benefit of the players.

Warrenville Excited Again.

That controversy over the possession of a wagonload of oats and a pig, that has recently caused so much excitement in Warrenville, comes up again Saturday morning in Justice Austin's court in Warrenville. The case is that of Stein against Baldwin, on contract, and Stein is suing for the value of the oats. The story of the trouble was told some time ago exclusively in The Daily Press.

Ed Marble, George Thatcher's late interlocutor, is in town for a day or two, stopping at the Grenada

Mrs. George W. Wendall, of the borough, has gone to Cambridgeport, Mass., for an indefinite period.

Miss Maud Middledith, of Park avenue, has gone to Point Pleasant to spend a few weeks at the "Leighton."

William Sanders, a brother of Officer James Sanders, of East Fourth street, left for Westfield today after a pleasant visit with his sister's family, Mrs. Langford, of the same address.

Mrs. Charles A. Mann, of Washington, D. C., has rented J. E. Martine's house, 924 Prospect avenue, through J. T. Vail's real-estate agency, and will take possession September 1st.

Fred Sandford, of North Plainfield, left town today for a season of recreation, which will include both fishing and hunting on the coast. He will take a boat on the Maine line to Portland, Me., where he will remain for a time, and from there he will go to the Adirondacks to remain until September 10. Fred has been there before this season and reports the black bass as running plentiful.

John J. Kenney, of this city, received a letter from Paul Ackerly, formerly a member of The Press staff and later of the Rockville (Conn.) Journal, stating that he is still in Washington, where he went as private secretary to Congressman E. S. Henry, who is also the Mayor of Rockville, and stating furthermore that he is very much pleased with the Capitol. Paul expects to remain there for a few weeks yet.

CRACKED THE SAFE.

Burglars Invade a Fanwood Coal Office But Get No Booty.

The large safe in the coal office of Mr. Smith at Fanwood, almost directly opposite the station, was broken open last night, but the robbers got but little of value. The intruders entered the place with a false key, and with a jimmy tried to open the safe door.

Finding this of no avail they next bored a hole through the door near the combination lock and inserted a fuse of giant powder. The safe was blown to pieces and the windows in the office were blown out. The place is in an isolated part of the town and few people are around there late at night, and especially after the station closes at 11:15 p. m.

This morning, however, the place was found wide open, with braces, drills, screwdrivers and a long piece of fuse laying on the floor, which shows conclusively that the burglars were either frightened away or else left of their own account before securing any booty. The police have been investigating the case, but as yet no arrests have been made.

OBJECTIONS TO THE TROLLEY.

Lawyer Hetfield Says East Second Street Property Owners are Resolute.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—In your issue of last evening there appeared an article entitled "A Trolley Extension," in which it was stated that "more than enough consents have been secured on East Second street from Park avenue to Leland avenue." Just such articles have been appearing in our evening papers for the last five or six weeks, but still my young friend, Mr. Moffett, has been kept hustling to get more consents. Let not you, Mr. Editor, nor the people of East Second street, be deceived by the reports given out by the railroad company's employes, as a very large percentage of the residents and property owners on the street are unqualifiedly opposed to the road there, and justly, too, as the street is only 24 feet in width in some portions and 27 feet in other parts. If a car track should be laid there, it would be absolutely impossible to pass a car with wagon or fire apparatus. Then the street would need widening, and who would be at the loss of the shade trees and who would the expense of widening fall upon, answer the property owners. No, Mr. Editor, the railroad company cannot go up East Second street without a very large fight.

Walter L. Hetfield.

Absent for Sixteen Years.

Thomas Hand is in town from Duluth, Minn., spending a few days with his brothers, Captain William, David and Hezekiah Hand. Mr. Hand was formerly a resident of this city, but sixteen years ago he went to the west, and this is his first visit back since. He is a contractor by occupation and during his years of absence he has built the sixty miles stretch of railroad on the Pine Creek Railroad between Blackwells and a place known as the Jersey Shore. At one time he was timekeeper on the D. L. & W. road, and at another time he was employed in Minneapolis and other places in the west. He was for seven years in charge of the Hillside cemetery at Minneapolis. Mr. Hand will remain in town over Sunday and then go to Williamsport, Pa.

A Noisy Nuisance.

Some boys in the tin shop over the Postal Telegraph and Cable Company's office on Park avenue, Tuesday afternoon, caused quite a disturbance by blowing tin horns. The neighbors stood it as long as they could and then complained to Chief Grant. He went to investigate, but by that time the noise had ceased and the place had been closed for the day.

"Camp Levee" Soon to be no More.

"Camp Levee" will be a thing of the past after Saturday morning. The campers have finally decided to break camp that morning and return to the civilized world now that the weather is cool enough here. The closing night is to be duly celebrated however and wonderful times are expected.

Twenty Left Behind.

When the Jr. O. U. A. M. excursion left the North avenue station at 7:45 this morning about twenty of the excursionists were left behind. They were mostly all females, and each one carried a lunch basket. Instead of returning home they took passage on a local train, and followed the excursion to the park.

DEATH TO CHEAT LAW.

ONE OF THE AGED DUNHAM ASSAILANTS FOUND ON HIS DEATH BED.

Though Weak and the Hands of Death Hovering Over Him he Professed Innocence of the Serious Accusation.

Though death will doubtless remove him from the clutches of the law, Chief Grant is positive that he has located one of the two negroes who committed the murderous assault on Mr. and Mrs. Maxwell Dunham, an aged couple living near New Market, on November 10, 1892. This crime created a great sensation in this vicinity at the time by reason of its brutal character. But lying on his back in a cot in the Mercer hospital in Trenton, his constitution ravaged by consumption, his face wan and haggard, his voice weak and faltering, with the hand of death ready to sweep him into eternity at almost any moment, James Johnson still protests, as vigorously as short breaths will permit, that all of the Chief's suspicions are wrong.

The story is this: On the morning of November 11, 1892, Officer Kiely was patroling his beat about 4 o'clock when he met James Johnson, colored, 24 years, carrying a bag that looked suspicious. He arrested him as a suspicious character and found that the bag was filled with a number of chickens. A further investigation proved that they were stolen property and that Johnson had taken them from the hennery of farmer Peter Benwood, living in Piscataway. Benwood identified the poultry as part of his flock and on this evidence, and the general knowledge that Johnson's character was bad, he was convicted in the Middlesex County Court and sent to State Prison at Trenton for one year.

The day before his arrest the assault on the aged Dunhams had been committed by two negros. Chief Grant took hold of the case, and from the descriptions given by the victims of the assault, he concluded that Johnson was one of the guilty parties. But there was no convincing evidence to prove his connection with the outrage, and when he returned from serving the term in prison he was permitted to remain in this neighborhood without being persecuted by the officers of the law.

His inclination for wrong doing soon asserted itself, however, and in a few months he stole a horse and carriage belonging to Aaron Brower, of Piscataway, and sold it to a man by the name of Wolf, living ten miles from Stroudsburg, Pa. He was traced as far as this and the property recovered by Chief Grant, but Johnson escaped and, it was said, went to Virgina, where he was born. The Chief was unable to locate Johnson exactly, but thorough some of his relatives he learned that he was on some poor farm in that state suffering with consumption.

It seems, however, that Johnson recovered his health sufficiently to start North again, and he was prompted to come this way in the hope that the last crime of horse stealing had been forgotten and he would escape punishment. He succeeded in getting as far as Trenton, where the hardships encountered in his wanderings had overcome his health and he was forced to apply to the authorities and for help. He was subsequently admitted to the Mercer hospital and from there communicated with friends in this city. Through the latter, the Chief learned of his location and yesterday he went to Trenton.

In the public ward the Chief found the colored man a pitiable object to gaze at. Besides being in the most emaciated condition, the nurse said that his body was literally covered with abscesses. The Chief confronted Johnson with the charge of being one of the assailants of Mr. and Mrs. Dunham. Notwithstanding that Johnson could only speak in a whisper, and could utter but a few words before his breath was exhausted, he denied the accusation and claimed to be entirely innocent of implication in the crime which would have been likely to have resulted in a lynching if his detection had been made when public sentiment was aroused over the outrage. Chief Grant told a Press reporter this morning that he now had a chain of evidence which he was positive would convict Johnson of the charge if he was ever brought to trial. But it is only a matter of a short time when Johnson will pass to that greater and higher tribunal and the law will be cheated of its victim.

In the theft of the horse Johnson did not deny but what he was guilty, but he implicated Charles Moulding, of Piscataway, and Alexander Williams, of this city, as accomplices. The Chief is also positive that Moulding was with Johnson the night of the Dunham assault and that he was one of the assailants. His location is not known.

BRYAN AT ELLERSLIE

With His Wife and Party He Visits Gov. Morton's Country Seat.

MAKES A SPEECH AT RHINEBECK

Hearing of His Coming, a Reception Committee Is Hastily Organized and the Little Hotel Decorated—Followed by an Impromptu Procession.

Upper Red Hook, N. Y., Aug. 20.—At 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Bryan and Mr. and Mrs. Perrine, their hosts, left Upper Red Hook in a covered wagon to drive over to Ellerslie, Gov. Morton's home. With them went the Misses Perrine and a number of friends in vehicles and on bicycles. Others joined them along the road, and by the time Ellerslie was reached the procession was quite formidable. The route was through Red Hook, or the lower village, past the estates of John Jacob Astor, John Armstrong Chanler and other persons of wealth, and through Rhinecliffe to Governor Morton's celebrated stock farm. Mr. Bryan and his friends inspected the stock stable and the dairy houses under escort of Gov. Morton's superintendent, who had been instructed from Albany by the governor's private secretary, Col. Ashley W. Cole, to show the candidate every attention if he came. Leaving Ellerslie, Mr. Bryan and his party visited the estate of Col. Jacob Ruppert, the brewer, and then started for Rhinebeck, where they were to have supper. On the way Mr. Bryan was waylaid by Rev. Mr. Richards, pastor of the Hillside Methodist church, and invited to visit the church fair in progress in a tent near by. Mr. Bryan paid $2 for the admission of the party and made liberal purchases of ice cream and cake. Rhinebeck people were on the lookout for the democratic candidate. He had telephoned to have supper for himself and friends at 6 o'clock, and when he arrived he found the ancient Rhinebeck hotel, where the meal had been ordered, decorated with bunting in his honor. Not only that, but a reception committee was awaiting him and they had a brass band and were prepared to do honor to his present prominent position. There were republicans as well as democrats on the committee, and Mr. Bryan was informed that the reception was intended to be entirely non-partisan. Three hundred people gathered in front of the hotel and applauded when Mr. Bryan stepped upon the decorated balcony. He was introduced by George L. Esselstyne, a prominent republican. Mr. Bryan made a short speech, expressing his great pleasure at the impromptu reception. During his remarkes he referred to the present campaign and touched on the money question. Mr. and Mrs. Bryan and Mr. and Mrs. Perrine ha an eight-mile drive through the moonlight from Rhinebeck to Upper Red Hook. It was late when they reached the home of the Perrines. They were followed along the country road to Upper Red Hook by farmers in wagons and carriages and men and women on bicycles. As they proceeded the impromptu procession grew larger, as people living along the road would fall into line.

Accepts Bryan's Statement as True.

Chicago, Aug. 20.—Before leaving for New York last night Senator Thurston accepted as conclusive proof of the falsity of the charge, the statement made by Mr. Bryan that he had never been in the employ of silver mine owners or silver associations. Senator Thurston, at Madison, Wis., recently quoted the charge made in the editorial columns of the Chicago Chronicle and called on Mr. Bryan to say if the accusation was true or false. The senator said last night: "Mr. Bryan's word is enough for me, and I shall be glad to say as much to the people of the country in my next public address. Mr. Bryan has denied the charge which was made by a democratic newspaper and I have no hesitation in believing him."

GOLD FROM EUROPE

The Yellow Metal To Again Move This Way.

FIRST SHIPMENT NEXT SATURDAY

Good Effect Already Noticed on the New York Stock Exchange and the Business Outlook Is Brighter—Causes Given for Its Importation.

New York, Aug. 20.—The news that gold was to be imported from Europe this week has already shown beneficial effect on the stock market and the general financial situation. The importations are the result of the reduction in the price of sterling exchange which, in turn, reflects the great improvement in the general situation, politically and financially, as compared with a week ago. How much gold has been ordered cannot be positively stated, but it is announced that Lazard Freres had ordered $2,000,000 in gold from London by next Saturday's steamer, and that other orders would be given or had already been placed. Some of the leading associated banks, it is said, have helped to bring about the importations of gold by lending money for the purchase of commercial bills against cotton, etc., going forward at rates which permit gold to be imported at a profit. This tendsat once to relieve the pressure from the country banks for money to move the crops. Bankers reported today in corroboration of this view that there was a decrease in the demand for time loans, although the high rates for such loans were still maintained. The call money market is also distinctly easier.

Sterling Exchange Market Demoralized.

The sterling exchange market is practically demoralized. Banker's demand bills were sold at 4.85, a rate, it was said, which would under certain circumstances permit the importation of gold without loss. As commercial bills are being bought for less it is unnecessary to speculate how gold can be imported at this time at a profit. There were, however, numerous reports in circulation to account for the fall in exchange and the importation of gold. One was to the effect that the gold was to be brought here as the result of a triangular operation in which the German bank was the party of the third part. The price at which the gold can be bought in Europe undoubtedly plays an important part in the transaction. Another reported reason for the break in sterling was that a large amount of exchange had been released, that is, thrown on the market by those who bought it to hoard. Some of these were said to be banks who had given the government some of their gold in exchange for legal tenders a few weeks ago and had hedged, that is, protected themselves by purchasing sterling. The last report, it may be said, lacked confirmation.

Increased Circulation by Banks.

In connection with the efforts to relieve the pressure for time money from country banks it is learned that several banks had this week increased their circulation for that purpose, thereby also enabling some of the foreign bankers and others to purchase commercial bills of exchange. Some of the banks, besides using their own bonds for that purpose, have lent foreign bankers money on the United States bonds they purchased at the time of the last government loan. The loans run for a year and the banks have the use of the bonds for the purpose of taking out circulation. This some of them have done to their full limit, that is, 90 per cent. of their capital. Thus a double purpose is served by the transaction. It is estimated that between three and four million dollars will be added to the circulation in that way this week, all of which goes to the relief of the time money market and aids in moving the crops.

Return of Bishop Potter.

New York, Aug. 20.—Bishop Potter returned on the Majestic from a European trip yesterday. In reference to the English view of the silver movement in the United States, he said: "I had a conversation with a very distinguished member of the liberal government, and he expressed himself very hopefully in regard to the situation. I saw one or two members of the present government also, and was glad to see that they were all hopeful about the present situation."

Hon. W. D. Balfour Dead.

Toronto, Aug. 20.—Hon. William Douglas Balfour, provincial secretary in the Ontario government, died at 6 o'clock last evening from acute hemorrhage of the lungs.

The Flavoring of Flour.

It is exceedingly important that the family flour barrel be kept in a cool, dry closet on a rack, so that no dampness can collect under it. An arrangement is now on sale for lifting the barrel above the floor and moving it out when necessary, which is an improvement on a rack on casters. This is a barrel swing, by means of which the barrel is held suspended in the air from a beam or heavy joist of the house. The barrel may be thus suspended in a pantry, and when needed may be swung out by a slight movement. The greatest advantage of either rack or swing is that the floor beneath the barrel may be kept scrupulously clean. Family flour absorbs odors of other food and any foul germs that may be present in the atmosphere, therefore it should be closely covered, whether in a closet or kept outside in a larger room, and the room where it is kept should be free from all debris of food and other articles too often found in a kitchen pantry. —N. Y. Tribune.

Photographing Thought.

Thought has been photographed by Dr. Baraduc, a Roumanian; at least that is what he tells the Paris Academie de Medicine, backing up his assertion by many photographs. These are said to be rather cloudy, though a few are distinct, representing persons and things. The method employed is for the person whose thought is to be photographed to enter a dark room, place his hand on a photographic plate, and think intently on the object to be reproduced. Dr. Baraduc asserts that it is possible to produce a photographic image at a great distance, and instances the case of Dr. Istrate and Mr. Hasdeu. Dr. Istrate, before going to Campina, 180 miles from Bucharest, told his friend, Mr. Hasdeu, that he would appear on one of his photographic plates in Bucharest. On a specified night Mr. Hasdeu went to bed at Bucharest with a photographic plate at his feet and another at his head, while Dr. Istrate went to bed at Campina, willing with all his might that his image should appear on his friend's plate. Persons who have seeen the plate say that there is on it a luminous spot in the middle of which a man's profile can be made out.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Brown Stews.

Stews made from beef, mutton, game and dark-fleshed birds are usually cooked with a brown sauce. The French method of making a brown stew is superior to all others, because the result is more savory, digestible and nutritious than any other. The preliminary browning accomplishes a three-fold result, which is altogether wanting in the English form of stew. In the latter, the so-called "Irish stew" for instance, the meat is often "cooked to rags," and yet those very individual muscles are so tough as to defy mastication. This undesirable result is probably attained by the rapid boiling, which separates the muscular fibers without softening or making tender the fibers themselves. On the other hand the French method of first browning the meat retains its juice and preserves its form during the prolonged gentle cooking which entirely softens its fibers.—Home Queen.

Her Chance.

"Jennie," said Mr. Portly, "I wish you'd put a 'V' in my dress trousers. I'm getting too stout to wear 'em." "I will," responded his spouse; "but I wish you'd put a couple of 'V's' in my purse. It's getting so thin that it slips through my fingers."—N. Y. Recorder.

An Earnest Official.

"We got the earnestest prosecutor in our county on earth," said Rubberneck Bill to the wondering tourist.

"Earnest," said the tourist.

"You bet. Every time he don't hang a feller he is prosecutin' he takes it as a personal insult and shoots the feller anyhow."—Indianapolis Journal.

COSTLY BELGIAN GUN BARRELS.

They Are Made by Hand and by a Complicated Process.

The United States consul in Liege describes, in a recent report, the manufacture of and trade in damascus gun barrels, wholly hand made, in the valley of the Vesdre, in Liege province. These barrels are for sporting guns, and the industry is many years old, the workmen in the villages in the valley being almost all gun-barrel makers, and the trade descending from father to son.

The best barrels are a combination of the best primary substances, welded and forged by the martelage a froid process; the steel comes from Westphalia, the iron is manufactured at Couvin, in Belgium; the coal, which is specially suited for the work, from the Herve highlands, in Belgium, while the motive power of the factories is obtained from the River Vesdre. The industry has increased greatly in recent years. These armes de luxe, as they are called, are made by men working in pairs, each pair in its own little factory, quite independent of all others. They are paid by the piece, the wages being good, and about 2,000 men are engaged on the work in the valley. Medium quality barrels are made of coke iron and steel, while the superior quality, which are produced in the Vesdre valley, are made of charcoal iron and steel. An ingenious "marriage" of these metals gives a composition which, when manufactured, guarantees the required solidity and resistance.

The improvement in these damascus barrels dates from the introduction of percussion caps in the place of the old flint lock. Formerly iron barrels alone were produced; now, to manufacture the curled damascus, the ingot is composed of 30 sheets of iron and steel, each having a thickness of four millimeters, which are enveloped in a sheet-iron box, placed in an oven, and welded together at the lowest possible temperature. Each barrel receives 150 welding heats while being forged, and if a single one of these is unsuccessful the barrel may be a failure, either by alteration of the damascened work or an imperfection in the welding.

There is no official test of these armes de luxe, but they are thoroughly tested by the manufacturers before delivery. The annual production of damascus barrels in the Vesdre valley is about 300,000 pairs, of a value of about 3,500,000 francs. Of this the wages alone—for all the guns are hand made—amount to about 2,000,000 francs. The principal markets are Great Britain and the United States. About half the barrels made in the Vesdre valley are sold to manufacturers of arms in Liege to be mounted.—N. Y. Times.

RAILROAD YARD TERRORS.

Even Train Men Cannot Cross the Tracks at Night Without Being Confused.

"It's hard for the ordinary traveler to realize the terrors of the average railroad yard," said an old and experienced trainman at one of the big Jersey city terminals to a Sun reporter. "The commuter who scans the yards daily as he is smoothly riding through them, naturally enough fails to appreciate the mass of detail in the duties of the men who are employed to switch him safely into the station. Of course, the routine work we do, fraught with responsibility and danger as it is, becomes mechanical enough to us in time, but there is one thing that I have never been able to do with coolness in all the years I have been employed here, and that is to cross this network of tracks at night. The experience of Thomas Baker, the freight clerk at the Lehigh Valley station, in Communipaw, is proof that I am not the only hardened railroader afflicted in that way. Baker was run down by an engine because he got bewildered in the maze of tracks. I don't blame him. Why, it's enough to give a man heart disease to attempt to cross such an aggregation of rails, with a lot of headlights moving all around him and scores of bells ringing and whistles ringing in his ears.

"Every time that I am compelled to make such a trip—and I only do so nowadays when I am compelled to—I get the lay of the land well in my mind, and note which engines are moving and which are not; but it is of no use. By the time I'm in the middle of the yard my head is in a whirl, the headlights are dancing all around me, and I skip and dodge around frantically until I get safely on the other side. Usually most of the locomotives are standing still in the trainshed, but it's hard to believe it when you are in front of them. Some commuters who work in Jersey City have a trick of walking into the station from the yard to save the trouble of going around by the regular way, but when I can I always warn them of the danger of doing so."—N. Y.

MAJ. M'KINLEY BUSY

All Spare Moments Spent on His Letter of Acceptance.

THE DOCUMENT NEARLY COMPLETED

Most of It Already in Type and the Proofs Read and Revised—To Be Made Public, Probably, About the First of September.

Canton, O., Aug. 20.—Major McKinley now devotes most of his time when he is not receiving callers and dictating to his private secretary such correspondence as the latter cannot attend to himself, to work on his letter of acceptance, and during the past two days he has devoted several hours to that task. The letter is almost completed and a greater part of it in type. Of this the proofs have been read and revised by Mr. McKinley. The letter will probably be made public about the first of September, it is believed. Ex-Labor Commissioner Lewis of this state and several men prominent in labor circles called on the major yesterday afternoon. They stated that the working men of Ohio have a kindly feeling for the republican candidate for the presidency. At half past four Major and Mrs. McKinley went for a long drive with Mr. and Mrs. George Frease, some of their Canton friends. Many telegrams of greeting from political organizations were received by Major McKinley last evening.

Flag Raising at Portland.

Portland, Me., Aug. 20.—The Lincoln club had an auspicious flag raising last night, opening the local campaign. Two flags were run out. Then a procession was formed and marched to the Portland club, where another flag was run out as the procession passed. They then marched to the house of Hon. T. B. Reed on Deering street, where the band played and Mr. Reed made a speech from the balcony. At the close of Mr. Reed's speech the procession marched to the residence of Hon. F. E. Richardson, where Gov. Cleaves was serenaded and addressed the assemblage on national and local issues.

Refuse To Accept American Silver Coin.

St. Johns, N. F., Aug. 20.—All banks doing business in this colony refuse to accept American silver coin and demand five per cent. discount on American notes. The policy holders of the American life insurance companies are starting an agitation demanding that the policies be endorsed as payable in gold. The uncertainty of the financial and political problem in the United States is responsible for this.

Poll on Their Financial Choice.

Albany, Aug. 20.—The grand council of the Order of United Friends, which closed its session here last evening, took a vote of the delegates on the financial situation, the result standing: Gold standard, 63; free silver, 27. Utica was selected as the place for next year's meeting.

BULGARIA AND TURKEY.

Critical Stage Reached in Regard to Frontier Disputes.

Sofia, Bulgaria, Aug. 20.—In consequence of the frontier disputes between Bulgaria and Turkey, the Bulgarian government has notified the Turkish government that unless the latter appoints delegates to a frontier commission by a certain date the Bulgarian troops will be ordered to reoccupy the positions recently occupied by Turkish soldiers on territory which Bulgaria claims belongs to her.

MASSACRED EIGHTY PEOPLE.

Insurgents in Macedonia Also Burned Two Villages.

London, Aug. 20.—A dispatch from Athens to the Central News says that insurgents in Macedonia have burned two villages in the Kozoni district and massacred eighty persons.

Dr. Nansen's Return.

Christionia, Aug. 20.—The Aftenposten, in an article on the return of Dr. Nansen, the Arctic explorer, declares that Dr. Nansen says that he will not attempt again to reach the North Pole in a ship, but will, perhaps, lead a sledge expedition from Franz Josef Land, from which place he regards the journey to the pole as not difficult.

One and a Half to One for Gold.

Washington, Aug. 20.—Reports have reached here from Buenos Ayres to the effect that an American syndicate has offered the Argentine republic $150,000,000 in silver in exchange for $100,000,000 in bonds payable in gold at 4 per cent. interest, with a half per cent. added as a sinking fund.

Another of our neighbors had been sick for about a week and had tried different remedies for diarrhœa but kept getting worse. I sent him this same remedy. Only four doses of it were required to cure him. He says he owes his recovery to this wonderful remedy.— Mrs. Mary Sibley, Sidney, Mich. For sale by T. S. Armstrong, Druggist.

NEIGHBORHOOD NOTES.

The second game of baseball between the Somersets of Plainfield and the Scotch Plains team will take place on Saturday, August 29th. The Plains boys are practicing every day and next season they may go out as a professional team.

A lawn party is being arranged by several Plainfield merchants, which is to take place at Scotch Plains in close proximity to the baseball grounds, tomorrow evening. There will be vocal and instrumental music, speechmaking and refreshments.

The new arrivals at "The Homestead" this week has been surprisingly large. The place will probably be kept open during the fall and winter months, so great has been the success during the past few months as to warrant the undertaking.

Fanwood and Scotch Plains are to each other like New York and Brooklyn, in one sense of the word. Fanwood is governed by a municipal body known as the Mayor and Council and Scotch Plains is content to remain in the same old rut of a century or more ago. But the people in the Plains have metropolitan ideas and they are beginning to put them into practice. For instance, a stranger went into the only eating saloon in the place yesterday and called for a steak, "well done." He was told that the only place in the town to get such a meal was in George Marsh's barn. The man left and the waiter fainted.

SUMMERING INLAND.

Salt-Water Girl Might Learn from Her Fresh-Water Sister.

Through a Log Jam in a Canoe—The Girl Who Is "Game" Helps Poke the Logs Away—Crossing the "Boom."

[COPYRIGHT, 1896.]

Those people who spend all their summers at the seashore and never taste the joys to be had at inland resorts miss a great deal of pleasure which they might be glad to partake of if they only knew what possibilities for it exist in the vicinity of the little mountain streams that flow down from the wilderness of the Adirondack forests.

These little streams have a commercial value that compares very favorably with that of many more pretentious waterways. Every year thousands of logs are floated down to their respective mills to be sawed into the boards that make millions for the lumbermen.

But it is not with the millions nor the lumbermen that the pleasure seekers are concerned. The logs themselves form a very exciting and sometimes very annoying feature in their enjoyment. To be sure, there is a law which requires lumber companies to leave a waterway for pleasure boats, but such corporations are no more considerate than others, and they have small scruples about evading the law if they can.

So it often happens that when a gay young college man from one of the numerous colleges in that vicinity goes out for a quiet boating trip with his favorite summer girl he is suddenly confronted with a jam of floating logs that fill up the entire stream, or are scattered about in such promiscuous fashion that he has to perform a polka mazurka with his boat in order to get through. If the logs are very closely jammed together, the youth must land his girl and drag his boat until he finds clear water again. But if he sees a chance to poke his way between the logs, he does so, even at the risk of tipping his boat over in the effort, a risk which is always imminent, but which only lends spice to the adventure.

A canoe is better than a rowboat for the purpose of dodging logs, because, being narrower, it goes through smaller spaces; also because it has one long double paddle instead of a pair of oars that are always striking obstructions and getting in the way. There are many other advantages about a canoe, not the least of which is its picturesque quality. Nothing else appeals so strongly to the susceptibilities of the summer girl as the picture of a handsome college youth perched gracefully upon the deck of the stern of his canoe with the long, double paddle in his firm grasp. He is attired, say, in a pale blue negligee shirt and dark blue trousers, with a cap that sits on the back of his head and rumples his hair into a bang over his forehead.

CANOEING THROUGH LOGS ON AN ADIRONDACK STREAM, HER CHANCE TO HELP.

The girl sits in a good position to view his fascinating figure. She leans back comfortably against the cushions that are supported by a sort of chair back that is chained to the sides of the canoe and rest on the bottom. One can almost recline in a chair of this kind, and nothing can exceed the comfort of it.

Then think of the possibilities of varied enjoyment! With a well-filled lunch basket and a warm wrap to fend off the cool night breezes, one can go up in the afternoon and float down by moonlight.

Your party starts about four o'clock and you have just settled yourself comfortably among the cushions when you begin to bump against loose logs that are scattered through the stream. The logs get more and more crowded, and the first thing you know your end of the boat is tilted up on a submerged tree trunk. Then, if you are "game," and not afraid of soiling your hands, you go to work and help push off; after which you will get a good deal of fun by reaching out as you come up to a big log and poking it out of the way. One can push the canoe through a tangle of logs much easier with the hands than with the paddle.

The greatest bugbear to the canoeist is the "boom," which is a line of logs chained together along the middle of the river and fastened to stone piers stationed at intervals of 30 or 40 rods. This is intended to pen the logs in on one side of the stream, but sometimes they get so thick on the canoeist's side that he is compelled to go over the boom to the log side, where perhaps it is entirely clear.

Sometimes the youth gets out on the boom and shoves the canoe on, girl and all; and sometimes a kind-hearted logdriver, who knows how to walk the logs, comes to your assistance and shoves you both over. More often you land at one of the stone piers and cling to the log frame, in which the loose stones that form the pier, are encased, while your hero of the paddle pulls the canoe across.

After you and the other members of your "fleet" have passed all the logs, you paddle on to a cool and shady spot where you land and eat your lunch, discoursing upon the scenery and other things until the sky begins to grow dusky, whereupon you start floating homeward, blissfully oblivious to the fact that those logs which were so easily poked aside on the way up have been huddling themselves into a raft which is impassable to boats and everything else except an experienced log walker.

But this oblivion cannot last long, for the youths and maidens are very soon made aware that the only way to get home is to land on the bank and drag the canoe past the jam. Here again, if you are the right sort of a girl, with a little muscle in your arms, you will take hold and help in the arduous task of moving a water vehicle on dry land. Perhaps you land two or three times, perhaps only once, but if you do your part in the emergency, you will find yourself several degrees better off for the exercise and several degrees higher in the estimation of your canoeist.

PREFER COUNTRY LIFE.

Iowa People Have Little Disposition to Herd in Great Cities.

The Hawkeye state of Iowa, admitted to the union in 1846, and having a population in excess of 2,000,000, is exceptional among western states in the absence of large cities within its borders. With the Mississippi flowing on one side of it and the Missouri on the other, with a railroad mileage of 8,500, and with few natural obstructions, it has long been a cause of wonder that in the 50 years which have passed since its admission Iowa has apparently not been able to set up on its own account a single first-class city—that is, a city having in excess of 50,000 population, though in New York state the test of a city of the first class is five times as great, or 250,000.

It was not until the year 1890 that the town of Des Moines, the capital of Iowa, reached a population of 50,000. By the census of 1870 (Davenport was then the largest city in Iowa) the population of Des Moines was 12,000 and Burlington was ahead of it with 14,000, Dubuque with 18,000, and Davenport had 20,000. Des Moines is one of the oldest cities in the west, having been first settled in 1850, and having a new state capitol building costing under the original contracts $1,500,000, and begun in 1869. The slow growth of Des Moines is typical of the growth of other towns in Iowa which seem to withstand the great increase of business in that state. In 1890 a federal census of the country was taken, and it showed only one city in Iowa having more than 50,000 population. In 1895 the state census of Iowa was taken, and so far from showing the same percentage of increase as marked the cities of neighboring states, there were several cities of Iowa which actually fell backward—an unusual thing in American municipalities, and especially in the great and growing west. Thus Sioux City, which had a population of 37,000 in 1890, had only 27,000 in 1895.

Council Bluffs, directly opposite Omaha and a city which would naturally partake of the growth of that thriving Nebraska town, fell off in five years from 21,000 to 20,000 in population. The town of Creston, with large interests as a railway repair terminus, fell off in five years from 7,200 to 6,600 population. Nor were these instances isolated, for the general tendency of the people of Iowa is to remain in the small towns or country districts and keep away from the large cities. In other parts of the west a city which once acquires importance enough to be prominent gains thereafter in steady ratio, but such appears to be the hostility of the Iowa people to city residence that after a town has become populous it is threatened with the danger of going backward again. This peculiarity cannot be with accuracy ascribed to either the lack of railroads, for Iowa has these in abundance, or the means of water connection, for these are many, or the conditions of crops, which of late years have been better—Iowa is essentially a corn state—than in other states in the same section. In Minnesota, for instance, the population of Minneapolis has increased 28,000 in the last five years, of St. Paul 7,000, of Duluth from 33,000 in 1890 to 60,000 in 1895, and of St. Cloud from 7,600 to 16,000. But Iowa adheres tenaciously to her cross roads and village settlements, and seems to give a negative answer to the familiar query of literary societies: "Is city life to be preferred to life in the country?"—N. Y. Sun.

NON-UNION MAN BEATEN.

He Shoots One of His Assailants and Causes Much Excitement at Lynn.

Lynn, Mass., Aug. 20.—A small-sized riot occurred at the Thomas G. Plant & Co.'s shoe factory last evening. Wm. J. Whitten of Haverhill, a non-union laster, was entering the factory when he was set upon by members of the crowd that had gathered at the entrance and quite severely beaten. He drew a revolver and fired point blank at one of his assailants, Charles O. Barlow, inflicting a flesh wound in the thigh. When Barlow and a companion named George Pierson went to Dr. Leland W. Baker's office for medical assistance the doctor notified the police and the two men were arrested for assault on Whitton. Barlow and Pierson are lasters employed in another factory in Lynn, but are strong sympathizers with the Plant company strikers. The shooting caused much excitement and there is much feeling against Whitten, who was arrested a few days ago for using his pistol in self-defense, but was discharged.

FIRED ON THE ADMIRAL.

Peculiar Blunder Made by a Cruiser in the Practice of the French Fleet.

Toulon, Aug. 20.—In the course of artillery practice by the ships of the Mediterranean squadron near here the torpedo cruiser Vantour fired her machine guns at a target which was being towed by the battleship Brennus. Through some fault in the management of the guns the shot from the Vantour were showered upon the bridge of the Brennus, where Admiral Gervais and the officers of his staff were stationed in the conning tower observing the practice. The glass in the tower was shattered and the structure badly injured, but fortunately the admiral and his aides were not hurt. The helmsman of the Brennus, however, was seriously wounded.

THE REPORTED INDIAN FIGHT.

The Story Published Yesterday Now Said To Be Without Foundation.

Tucson, Ariz., Aug. 20.—The News' correspondent has just come from the place where the fight was said to have taken place Tuesday between the Yaqui Indians and troop E, seventh cavalry. He found the report of the fight to be without foundation. The soldier who brought the story here and who represented himself as a courier from Capt. Hare's troop, seventh cavalry, on sick leave, is under arrest. The Indians in this vicinity are quiet.

Whitecaps Visit a Circus.

Knoxville, Tenn., Aug. 20.—Some time ago the European circus wagon show billed Sevierville for a performance yesterday. This being the first tent show to visit the mountain town, a committee of white caps sent the circus people word that everything on the bills should be shown or the tent would be torn down and burned. The show arrived yesterday, and as soon as the tent had been erected drunken men and boys cut the guy ropes. A general fight followed. Twenty men were badly hurt.

A Curfew Law at Topeka.

Topeka, Kan., Aug. 20.—The city council has enacted a curfew law. It provides that all children under sixteen years of age who are found on the streets or in public places unaccompanied by guardians after 9 p. m. in summer and 8 p. m. in winter shall be arrested and fined not less than $5 nor more than $25. The fire bell will ring every evening fifteen minutes before the hour fixed by the law.

New York, Aug. 20.—The White Star steamship Majestic, which arrived at Quarantine yesterday, made the fastest passage she has ever made from Daunt's Rock to this port. Her time of passage was 5 days, 17 hours and 56 minutes, which is twelve minutes better than her best previous record made four years ago. She experienced fine weather and smooth seas throughout.

Dying from Glanders.

St. Louis, Aug. 20.—Mrs. Blaise, wife of George Blaise, a gardener living on Oak Hill avenue, whose daughter died from glanders, is also dying from the same disease, which was transmitted from the family horse. It is feared that other members of the family will be stricken with the horrible malady.

Three Friends Ordered Released.

Washington, Aug. 20.—The collector of customs at Jacksonville, Fla., has been directed to release the Three Friends, if, in the judgment of the collector, the facts in the case warrant such action. No doubt is expressed by officials here that the facts do not justify her further detention.

A Monument to Thomas Chittenden.

Williston, Vt., Aug. 20.—A beautiful granite monument erected to the memory of Thomas Chittendon, one of the founders of Vermont and governor of the state for nearly a decade, was dedicated with appropriate ceremonies here yesterday afternoon in the presence of a large gathering.

Carlisle Calls at Gray Gables.

Buzzards Bay, Mass., Aug. 20.—Lighthouse tender Mistletoe was here yesterday and Secretary Carlisle made a short call on the president. After the Mistletoe returned, the president, Mr. Thurber and Dr. Bryan went fishing down the bay.

To Blow Up an Infanta.

HOUSECLEANING TACTICS.

How to Meet the Annual Trial with Comparative Ease.

While the systematic housekeeper is renovating the sleeping-rooms, she should dispose of the winter garments. Furs, wraps and gowns which are not to be worn until next fall should first be thoroughly cleaned and then carefully packed. To pack away any article of attire without first making it fresh is a crime which should bar the person committing it from the society of good housewives.

Furs may be satisfactorily renovated at home. Short-haired skins, such as seal and ermine, should be rubbed against the grain with soft flannel until all the hair is reversed. Spots should then be rubbed lightly with flour and the flour finally removed by vigorous shaking. Long-haired furs may be cleaned by scouring them with hot bran. After this has been done roll the garments in paper, tie up in linen cases with pepper and camphor bags, and consign them to chests.

The spring house-cleaning period is not only the time when winter clothes should be laid away, but it is also the accepted season for plumbing. The services of the plumber are likely to be more necessary than those of any other person in the spring renovation of the bathroom. A beautifully enameled tub is a small compensation for sewer gas. Consequently before any mere superficial details are attended to an expert opinion concerning such homely things as drains and pipes should be obtained.

The bathtub will be less trouble to keep clean if it is painted with enamel paint. This may be purchased already mixed, and the least skillful woman will be able to apply it satisfactorily. The tub should, of course, be perfectly dry until after the last coat of paint has been applied. The wall of the bathroom back of the tub and washbowl, if they are not tiled or marble, should be "papered" with linoleum in tile patterns. This will permit unlimited spashing of water without damage. The floor may be well covered with this material.

If the bathroom has not been equipped with wire soap and sponge trays, shelves for bottles, hooks for clothes, racks for towls, and the like, there is no time like the days of the spring house-cleaning in which to repair the omission.

Before descending to the lower part of the house, the mistress should discover if her mattresses need renovating. If she uses feather ones she should destroy them, for in the opinion of physicians they are positively pestiferous. Hair mattresses, if they are hard and dirty, may be freshened by ripping the ticking, removing the hair, washing the ticking, picking the hair and putting it in a dry, airy place for several days. When the ticking is dry it should be filled lightly with the hair and tacked together again.

If painting is done in the bedrooms, pails of fresh water should stand about uncovered. This will prevent attacks of painters' colic.—N. Y. Journal.

CONQUERING A BRONCO.

How It Can Be Done, According to Veracious Citizens.

It is related of a prominent citizen of Arizona that he once met a prominent citizen of Montana on the neutral ground of Colorado. The subject of bucking horses coming up, the prominent citizen of Arizona said:

"We have some very skillful riders down in my country. This, of course, shows out particularly when they are breaking wild broncoes to ride. When an infuriated mustang, saddled for the first time, and rearing and bucking with all the terrific energy of his savage nature, looks up out of the tail of his eye and watches his rider calmly roll and light a cigarette, it has an excellent effect on him, and usually he cools down, realizing the hopelessness of his task."

Then spoke the prominent citizen of Montana:

"That will do very well, I dare say, for the comparatively mild and inoffensive horses of your southern latitude, but it has been found to have no influence whatever on our fierce and vicious beasts. But when one of our cowboys mounts a bronco for the first time it helps greatly to subdue the creature when, after he has leaped and pitched for 15 minutes, he happens to glance back and finds his rider quietly shaving, holding a small mirror in one hand and the razor in the other, with the mug, hot water and bay rum in a little basket on his arm. Ah, it's all in knowing how, this subjugating a Montana bronco!"

Then the meeting of prominent citizens adjourned.—Harper's Magazine.

Delicate Dress Goods.

Some gowns are so dainty in the weave, so delicate in tint, that they seem to soil by being looked at—one or two wearings making them unpresentable, NOT USELESS. We make a specialty of cleaning fine fabrics, the more delicate the material, the better the results. Sometimes an accident will ruin a gown, without injuring the texture. We dye them then, sometimes we get a prettier effect than the original color. Fine goods stand redyeing. The finer the material the better the new color. We charge so little for cleaning or dyeing, that even if you are in doubt as to the result, it's worth while to experiment. Want a new evening gown for a dollar or two? TO HEAD OFF SPAIN.

Washington Officials Giving Attention to the Filibustering Matter.

Washington, Aug. 20.—Spain's determination to present a bill against the United States for alleged failure to stop filibustering has aroused the authorities here to counteraction as a means of offsetting Spain's bill. Orders have been issued from the treasury department for the collection of evidence to disprove Spain's claims. Commanders of revenue cutters and collectors of customs will be required not only to apprehend filibusters but to secure affidavits from the captains of suspect vessels showing the exact limits of their operations and particulars setting forth the difficulties they have encountered in eluding United States officials. The purpose of this is to secure a body of evidence showing the non-participation of the United States even though Spain succeeds in establishing the faat that filibustering has been carried on. Officials say this will overcome the precedent in the Alabama case, on which Spain relied, as that was based on Great Britain's passive acquiescence in the arming of the Alabama.

LEAF TOBACCO CROP.

Highest Uniform Quality and Yield Per Acre Ever Harvested.

Springfield, Mass., Aug. 20.—More than half of the cigar leaf tobacco crop grown in the United States has been safely housed, and up to date returns to New England Homestead warrant in pronouncing it the highest uniform quality and largest yield per acre ever harvested. Returns show 26,000 planters of this crop this year compared to 35,000 in 1892, while about 63,000 acres were devoted to cigar leaf this year compared to 100,000 in '92. This is exclusive of Florida, where considerable interest in the crop has been shown and where leaf of particularly fine quality has been produced by experienced native and Cuban planters. If the now unharvest crop averages in yield with that already out the crop will equal 225,000 cases (350 pounds to the case). The quality promises to be equal, if not superior, to that of the famous '92 crop, which made over 300,000 cases. The proportion of the crop suitable for wrapper leaf promises to be large.

Career of the Late Baron Von Kedtwitz in America.

MARRIED A LOUISVILLE HEIRESS

The Only Couple Ever Married in the Catholic University Chapel at Washington—Sympathy from Queen Victoria.

Washington, Aug. 20.—Baron von Zedtwitz, whose death by accident occurred on his yacht Isolide, was married while attached to the German legation in this city, the event forming the climax to a brilliant and successful official and social experience. His bride was Miss Lena Caldwell, the wealthy heiress of Louisville, whose sister, Miss Mary Gwendolen Caldwell, made the project of establishing a Catholic university in Washington practicable by a gift of $300,000. The marriage ceremony was the first and only one ever celebrated in the chapel of the Catholic university, and most fittingly so, as the bride had built the chapel as a memorial to her mother. The marriage ceremony was attended only by the relatives of the bride and the necessary witnesses and was followed by a wedding breakfast at the Arlington hotel. The latter was a grand event and was attended by the diplomatic corps and most of the prominent people in society. Just previous to his marriage Baron von Zedtwitz had been appointed minister to Mexico and to that country he first took his bride. Since their return to Germany the baron's prominence was in every way enhanced by his charming wife. Miss Mary Gwindolen Caldwell has lived abroad, mostly in Paris, since her sister's marriage.

Newspaper Tribute.

Berlin, Aug. 20.—The Reichsanzeiger, the official journal, to-day publishes a tribute to the late Baron von Zedtwitz and testifies to the zeal displayed by him in the official positions he occupied.

Sympathy of the Queen.

London, Aug. 20.—The queen has telegraphed to the royal Alber Yacht club expressing her regrets because of the death of Baron von Zedtwitz.

LORD RUSSELL ENTERTAINED.

Brilliant Reception to the Distinguished Englishman at Saratoga.

Saratoga, N. Y., Aug. 20.—Judge George S. Batcheller, formerly presiding justice of the international tribunal in Cairo, Egypt, and who has a handsome town house here, gave a reception at 9:30 o'clock last evening in honor of Rt. Hon. Lord Russell of Killowen, lord chief justice of England, to meet the members of the American Bar association delegates and legal gentlemen in Saratoga at this time. Sir Frank Lockwood, Q. C., M. P.; Montague Crackenthorpe, Q. C., and James Fox, B. L., of Lord Russell's party, were also present. Although the affair was strictly of a judicial nature, Lady Russell, Lady Lockwood, Miss Russell, Miss Lockwood and Mrs. John W. Foster, the latter a guest of Mrs. Batcheller, were present. The guests were received in the drawing room by Lord Russell and Judge Batcheller. Late in the evening a collation was served. Among those present were ex-secretary of state John W. Foster, ex-minister Edward J. Phelps, United States Attorney General Harmon, president Moorfield Storey, Boston, and treasurer Francis Rowle of Philadelphia, of the American Bar association; G. A. Mercer of Georgia, C. C. Allen of Missouri, G. M. Sharp of Maryland, judges W. Howe, New Orleans; L. E. Wales, Delaware; James C. Withrow, St. Louis; O. P. Shiras, Dubuque; L. D. Brewster, A. V. W. SPORTS

THURSDAY, Aug 20. Sun rises 5:13 a. m., sets 6:54 p. m. Lanterns must be lighted between 7:54 p. m. and 4:13 a. m.

CYCLING COMMENT.

Miss May Day, of West Fourth street, has a new Olympic wheel.

Mrs. Thomas Rice, of West Second street, has purchased a new Stearns wheel from W. H. Rogers.

The Clio Wheelmen, of Jersey City, have joined the Associated Cycling Clubs of New Jersey.

Mr. and Mrs. Maynard, of Park avenue, went to Newark and Orange on their tandem this afternoon.

The Vim Wheelmen announce that their race meet will be held at the Waverly track, Saturday, October 3d.

Membership, August 14th, League American Wheelmen: new, 953; total, 63,400. New Jersey Division, new, 76; total, 4,028.

E. Maxwell Honeyman, of Duer street, and his cousin, Fred Zandt, of Jamesburg, rode over from the home of the latter to Plainfield Tuesday afternoon where they will remain for several days.

W. H. Rogers, the popular West Fifth street bicycle dealer, has just received a new combination Stearns tandem from the factory. It is enamel yellow throughout and is a beauty in appearance and running qualities.

A young lady cyclist was riding on Park avenue yesterday afternoon when her dress skirt became entangled in the chain and rear wheel. Roundsman Mattox was riding by and gallantly went to the rescue. The tangle defied the efforts of the officer, but after working for half an hour and finally taking off the rear wheel, the young lady was released from her unpleasant position.

Secretary Abbott Basset, of the L. A. W., notifies the members that in September a renumbering of the members will take place, The first 100 are reserved for the executive officers, but all vacant numbers above that will be filled, as the present total membership is 63,400, and the highest membership ticket at date is 127,134. It will be seen that the numbers now held will be greatly reduced.

The ferry between Elizabeth and Staten Island is now in operation and has plenty of accommodation for cyclers and their wheels. The boat makes trips every twenty minutes between the hours of 6 a. m. and 1 a. m. The fare is five cents and no extra charge for wheels. A pleasant afternoon's ride for Plainfield cyclists is to go to Elizabeth on the county road, then taking the ferry to Staten Island. Then ride around the island to Tottenville, ferrying across there to Perth Amboy and returning by the way of Metuchen. The roads are all good except between Perth Amboy and Metuchen, where there is a side path, and the hills are few and not steep.

Through the efforts of the Rights and Privilliges Committee of the New Jersey Division, League of American Wheelmen, a number of hotels have removed the signs from their doors announcing that they were official headquarters of the league for riders who were touring or on a run, when in realty they had appointed themselves, and were not designated by the Chief Counsul of the State. For the benefit of the unsuspecting rider it might be well to mention here that genuine L. A. W. hotel have posted, in a conspicuous place, a certificate of appointment signed by Chief Counsel Gentle, and furthermore a notice to wheelmen informing them that they must show their tickets only when they are ready to pay their bills.

The secretary-treasurer of the New Jersey Division of the L. A. W. is hard at work thinking over some premiums for members, and in the course of a few days he will be ready to publish the old list, together with some new and useful presents which the New Jersey Division has always offered its members when they showed a disposition to help along the officers in their effort to put New Jersey at the head of the list in point of membership and strong, healthy condition. All wheelmen should be members of this organization, as it helps along the cause they are most interested in. It costs $2 for the first year and $1 for each subsequent year. League members can save ten times their dues on hotel reductions. Application blanks at this office.

AROUND THE BASES.

There is one thing that rankles in the hearts of the baseball players of the Elizabeth Athletic Club and that is that the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. boys should actually go to work and spoil the reputation of that old and firmly established club, the E. A. C., by defeating their nine on their own grounds. The other members of the E. A. C. profess to twit their imfortunate friends, who think they can play ball, for allowing a "crowd of boys" to defeat them. It will be remembered that the Plainfield team went to Elizabeth last month and defeated them by a score of 12 to 6. A return game is to be played in this city on Saturday and the E. A. C. nine is coming up with the intention of "doing or dying." While the Y. M. C. A. boys, of this city, have no particular wish to kill their opponents they have come to a decision that to be "done" is entirely out of the question. If you are interested in seeing who is going to come out ahead, just drop in the Y. M. C. A. grounds on Washington avenue Saturday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock and you will see a great game.

An Afternoon Scrap.

John Scott of 214 Plainfield avenue, left his horse standing in front of the Penfield house at Park avenue and Seventh street this afternoon while he was at work on the opposite side of the street mowing grass. Some man who refused to give his name took possession of the rig and started to drive away. Scott noticed the man going away with the rig and gave chase after him. Roundsman Billy Mattox was in the neigborhood at the time and placed the fellow under arrest. On the way to the station house the prisoner became abusive and scratched the officer's face quite badly. The nippers and club were then used and the prisoner was landed in durance vile, where he awaits a hearing. The man is about 40 years of age, but as yet refuses to divulge his identity.

EMPRESS EUGENIE'S CARRIAGES

Although the Finest in France, They Are Ordered to Be Destroyed.

The state carriages used by the French envoys in the czar's coronation have a curious history. They were constructed for the prince imperial's baptism in 1856, and bore the imperial arms. They were the work of Ehrler, the court coach builder, and were very costly and imposing. They had not been used a second time in 1868, when they were sent back to Ehrler to be renovated. They were still at his factory in 1870, when the war broke out, and remained there. The empress repeatedly asked Ehrler to destroy them and she could not bear the idea of their coming down to be used by wedding parties in the Bois de Boulogne. But Ehrler evaded her request, telling her that they might eventually find a worthy purchaser, and that meanwhile they were no incumbrance to him.

When parliament recently voted 1,600,000 francs for the republic to be properly represented at the Moscow coronation, the question of carriages arose. Two very fine horses were found, with some difficulty, as were also two coachmen, one of whom had just left the service of an American millionaire. The harness was speedily made, and there only remained the carriages, but these could not be built in time. The prince imperial's baptismal carriages were then remembered. There could be no idea of buying them—indeed, they were scarcely on sale—but Empress Eugenie was asked if she would let them.

She refused to do this, but offered to lend them. The offer was accepted. They were repainted, the imperial arms being effaced by the ambassador's arms, and the one intended for Gen. de Boisdeffre having the body blue, the wheels red and the padding white, and thus showing the tri-color. The empress has declined an offer to restore them on their return to their former condition, and to avoid any mischance has given positive orders that they shall then be broken up.—London Times.

New Theory of Sunstroke.

An English physician has discovered that sunburn is produced by penetrating light rays and not by heat at all. The face of a victim of sunburn is not only swollen, but pitted, and at the bottom of each pit the microscope discloses a freckle. The physician who has made this interesting discovery claims that sunstroke can be averted by wearing a hat and clothes of an orange hue. No remedy is found so satisfactory as the use of pigments. A lady who wore a blouse with red and white stripes had red stripes imprinted on her shoulders by the sun underneath the white, while the skin under the red stripes remained normal in color.—N. Y. CZAR OF LONG ISLAND.

Pat Gleason, "The Fighting Mayor," Issues a Challenge.

Will Run for Governor of New York—Also Tells How to Run a City and Presents Some Highly Original Ideas.

[COPYRIGHT, 1896.]

You ask me how to run a city? I will answer the question frankly. The author of the Declaration of Independence said that government was governed the best which was governed the least. I cordially indorse his sentiments. The proposition will apply with equal force to state, county or city. We have too many self-constituted rulers nowadays attempting to run our cities. The men elected by the people to direct their affairs should do it, and not a lot of shrieking, hysterical fanatics who are responsible to nobody but themselves.

We need a new Declaration of Independence to free ourselves of the Parkhursts, Gerrys and Godkins, who have fastened themselves upon the neck of the body politic. Parkhurst might do in a Puritanical New England village, Gerry in Russia and Godkin in his native heath, the County Wicklow, Ireland; but they are all out of place here. They are all miscarriages in American politics.

The mayor of an American city, elected by American citizens, native or naturalized, should rule it, and not be hampered in the discharge of his duties by the interference of what my friend, Thomas C. Platt, fitly characterized a lot of "outside busybodies."

THE CZAR OF LONG ISLAND CITY.

If the mayor is found to be corrupt, incompetent or derelict in his duty, the remedy is simple: Impeach him. That can be done by preferring charges before the governor of the state, and have him adjudicate upon the matter after both parties to the controversy have been heard. But when the chief magistrate of a city is struggling with the task of governing it—and it is not half so easy as some people imagine—he should not be bothered by a lot of shallow-pated cranks, bogus reformers or political pulpiteers, who are only actuated for the most part by an insane craving for notoriety or a greedy desire to get at the loaves and fishes. As they are generally little fellows, wearing a six hat and a ten shoe, I presume they must do something to bring themselves before the public, else they would fade from sight. This is the only theory on which I can account for their constantly ridiculous behavior.

I believe in home rule for cities. I think it is perfectly absurd, for instance, that a hayseed legislature, composed for the most part of men from rustic communities who know nothing of the needs of a great city like New York and its adjacent sister cities, Brooklyn and Long Island City, should tell us what we should eat and drink on Sunday and pass laws to such an effect. If they do not want a glass of lager on Sunday it is no reason why they should prevent their brethren of the metropolis and adjoining cities from taking one. The workman in the city, be he clerk, salesman, bricklayer, boilermaker or what not, who has only one holiday in the week, and that Sunday, should not be compelled to mope at home and go dry because the farmer wants to go through that act of abnegation. The hypocrisy of such a law is apparent when a man like Warner Miller, of Herkimer and New York, for instance, who went howling through the wilderness last fall about the "maintenance of the American Sabbath," could take his tipple every Sunday at the Union League while one of his wood pulp clerks would—if he couldn't get by the policeman stationed at a saloon side door—go thirsty.

Warner Miller reminds me of a story United States Senator Vance told of his colleague Matt Ransom. He espied, at one time, a darky coming down Pennsylvania avenue, Washington, with a stately looking horse, enveloped all over with a blase blanket on which was engrafted in large red letters the words "Matt Ransom."

"So you called that horse after my colleague, did you?" inquired Vance of the darky.

"Yes, sah," returned the black man.

"Can he run?" asked Vance.

"No, sah, he ain't much on runnin'."

"Can he trot?"

"No, sah, he can't trot for sour apples."

"What good is he then, and why did you call him after Senator Ransom?" demanded Vance in surprise.

"Well, sah," replied the colored gentleman after a moment's thought, "he can't trot, or he can't run, but he's a pow'ful good looker and a splendid prancer."

That hits the nail on the head as regards Warner Miller. He was once in the whirligig of politics, thrown into the United States senate by some strange freak of fortune. Ever since that joke was perpetrated (Conkling called it the "irony of fate") Miller has been a powerful good looker and a splendid prancer. He will be nothing more.

WITH THE POLITICIANS.

NEWARK ADVERTISER MAKES SOME UNION COUNTY GUESSES.

Foster Voorhees Wants to Stay at Home But Still he May be Induced to Take the Senatorial Nomination This Fall.

The Newark Advertiser yesterday published two columns of political comment about Union county, a part of which was as follows:

If the gold Democrats should decide on a Congressional candidate of their own kind, S. M. Williams, vice-president of the New Jersey Central Railroad, will be their selection. He is now associated with A. B. Carlton, as committeeman for the third party organization. His name has also been mentioned in connection with the Democratic Senatorial nomination.

The renomination of Charles N. Fowler by the Republicans is assured. It is simply a matter of the formality of the convention. He was endorsed last year by the Congress Convention that selected delegates to State Convention.

The Senatorial fight is much mixed. After Prosecutor Marsh and James D. Martine, comes Peter Eganwolf, a prominent German, who has several times been a candidate for Mayor and Sheriff.

The Republicans are urging the renomination of Senator Foster M Voorhees, whose modesty compels him to decline the honor, but the majority of the Republicans think a little coaxing will put him in the field again. To The Daily Advertiser correspondent he said: "I stand by the position I took at the close of the legislative session. I prefer to stay at home and practice law. It pays better and then again I am getting old and must look out for the rainy days. You see, I have made up my mind to buy a farm, and if I go to the Senate again I am three years further away from that farm."

Sheriff George Kyte is a candidate who is now making an active canvass. He lives in Fanwood Township, and is the choice of a number of the townships. He was a candidate three years ago for Senator and now claims it as a matter of right.

Assemblyman J. Martin Boll, who led the trolley fight in the Legislature, will become a candidate if Senator Voorhees positively refuses to take it. There are some bicyclists who are not favorable to him because of his trolley agitation, but otherwise it is said there is no opposition to him. Former Assemblyman Codding is entirely out of the Senatorial contest.

There seems to be lots of men in the county who know a good thing, judging by the list of men who want to be the successor of Sheriff Kyte. William Hulskamper, of Elizabethport, who has been Freeholder for two years, heads the list, seconded by Robert L. Houston, of the same place. The friends of the latter claim that he is entitled to the nomination this year, because Houston and his friends aided Hulskamper three years ago when the County Clerk fight was on. Hulskamper was to return the compliment this year, and the Houston people now demand that the terms of the compact made shall be carried out.

Lewis W. Miller, the under-sheriff, who lives in Fanwood, thinks he has served the people well and should be called up higher.

The others mentioned are Joseph Ogden, of Elizabeth, formerly a member of Council; F. F. Glasby, who was formerly Sheriff; William Kirk, a contractor in Plainfield; and J. Frederick MacDonald, a grocer in Plainfield.

The Democratic candidates are led by W. H. Hicks, the last Democratic Sheriff. Edward H. Sherwood, cashier of the Rahway National Bank, has aspirations for recognition by the Democrats of the county. The selection of the Sheriff will be largely controlled by the place the Senator is picked from.

There will be a change in the members of the House. Henry Clauss is not desirous of being returned, and a renomination is being pressed on Chris. Burger, who has already served two years. Assemblyman Roll and Codington go back unless the former captures the Senatorial nomination.

John Kean has not lost his interest in politics. He has been attending the Congressional conventions and has had a flag raising that was so festive that the citizens of Union township still have a pleasant flavor in their mouth. When asked about politics he shyly remarked, "Don't know anything about it, just looking on and taking things quiet. No silver sentiment in New Jersey outside of Democratic circles. We will surely carry the State."

CHILLY AT CAMP LEVEE

THE YOUNG MEN WILL PULL STAKES TOMORROW MORNING.

One of the Members of the Party Had a Run-in With a Nest of Yellow Jackets—Jack Frost Threatens.

"Camp Levee" has made Washington Rock a lively place, indeed. Every day the campers entertain scores of visitors among whom the fair sex is well represented. Sometimes the visitors receive an invitation to stay to dinner but only a few are thus honored. At first the callers were a little bit shy about accepting that honor but one experience settled any doubts of the kind. Charles H. Angleman is chief of "Camp Levee" and under his direction and personal care, most delicious meals are served equal, the visitors say, to Delmonico's, but then perhaps they are a trifle prejudiced.

While it has been a trifle cool in Plainfield, it has been considerably so at the camp and the young men have almost come to regard themselves as arctic explorers. Wyatt Barnes has joined the party with an extra supply of sweaters and he intends to keep warm if possible. Several nights ago the young men visited Rockview farm, the home of the Misses Barrett. An impromptu whist party was gotten up and the evening passed very enjoyably. On the return the young men got lost in the woods on the side of the mountain, but managed to find themselves after considerable exertion.

Thomos U. Smith is suffering from two yellow jacket stings on the lower eyelid. He went out early in the morning to get some firewood and accidentally chopped into a yellow jackets' nest. They now regard yellow jackets as worse than "Weary Waggles."

Tonight will be the last to be spent at the camp and a number of Plainfielders have been invited to partake of the last evening meal which "Chef" Angleman promises will be the pinnacle of culinary art. He sat up all last evening, hugging the fire, to devise something entirely new for the grand occasion.

Gaities in the White Mountains.

At the second german of the season given at Jefferson, N. H., Mrs. Charles J. Fisk and Mrs. Rowland Cox presided at the favor table, which was tastefully decorated with cut flowers and festoons of ribbon. The favors were flowers, silver exchange favors and china. Rowland Cox, Jr., and Miss E. Davis led the german, the figures of which were beautiful and complicated. Miss Fisk and Miss Cox were among the dancers.

Meeting of the Exempts.

A meeting of the Exempt Firemen's Association, of this city, was held in No. 2 engine house last evening, and the attendance was unusually large. President A. Saltzman was in the chair. After extending invitations to the various companies in the city and North Plainfield to participate in the reception to be given to the New York Volunteers here on September 3d, the meeting adjourned to Tuesday evening of next week.

In Honor of "American Day."

The Junior Order of United American Mechanics of this State celebrated "American Day" at Asbury Park yesterday. It required nineteen special trains to take the patriots to the shore, and the crowd numbered over 8,000. The special trains came from Plainfield, Newark, Jersey City, Rahway, Elizabeth, Paterson, New Brunswick, Trenton, Philadelphia and other points. The usual parade was abandoned, and the Juniors spent the day in recreation and sightseeing.

Africa and the Africans.

Rev. Dr. Chase, a returned missionary from Africa, was in town last evening and lectured in Mt. Olive Baptist church before a good sized audience. Dr. Chase has had thirteen years service among the Africans, and his experiences have been both thrilling and unique. He held the close attention of his hearers throughout his discourse and told of several experiences under his own personal observation, of massacres and other barbarian atrocities before missionaries invaded the land. On the whole the lecture was a success, but the attendance was not large.

Douglas Darby's fast stepper "Sunday" was given three trial heats on the track of the Gentlemen's Driving Park Associati on yesterday and made very good time. The time made was 2:36, 2:34 and 2:34.

If you have ever seen a little child in the agony of summer complaint, you can realize the danger of the trouble and appreciate the value of instantaneons relief always afforded by DeWitt's Colic & Cholera Cure. USED HIS FINGER NAILS.

GIBBONS WAS TOO FREE WITH THEM ABOUT MATTOX'S FACE.

First He Tried to Steal a Horse and Wagon and Then Tried to Scratch Out Roundsman Mattox's Eyes—Sent to Jail.

When any man proceeds to rake another's face with his finger nails with wicked intent then the law usually takes a hand in the matter, but when the scratched individual happens to be a policeman, and a roundsman at that, then the arm of the law falls heavily on the offender. Roundsman Mattox was the sufferer and John Gibbons, not the famous historian, however, was the individual that tried to play gardener on Mattox's face. Now Gibbons languishes in the Elizabeth county jail recalling the day with sorrow when he first tried to interfere with Plainfield justice.

The cause of all the trouble was told in yesterday's Daily Press. John Scott, of Plainfield avenue, was cutting the grass on a lawn at the corner of Seventh street and Park avenue, while his horse and wagon remained on the other side of the street. A middle-aged man came along and with admirable self-possession climbed in and started to drive away. Scott could scarcely believe his eyes as he saw the wagon going down the street, but he started in pursuit to see, if possible, whether he was chasing an optical illusion. There was no fake about it, however. Like the policeman in the yellow paper-covered romance, Roundsman Mattox put in an appearance just at the nick of time, and the stranger was unceremoniously dragged from his seat.

Mattox told the man he was under arrest, but the latter said there was no rest about it, and then his language became unpleasant to the ear. As talking didn't seem to impress the officer, the prisoner resorted to other more violent means and went for the officer tooth and nail. With the gore streaming down his face the genial Roundsman took his hand in the conflict, and after some trouble, placed the nippers on his prisoner, and by a little taste of the club convinced him that the lockup was the place for him.

This morning, the mutilator of "Billy" Mattox's features hadn't much to say. He gave his name as John Gibbons. The Judge gave him a good lecture, but what he appreciated more, sentenced him to pay a fine of $25 and go to jail for sixty days.

Roundsman Mattox does not look very much the worse after his encounter, and he feels quite pleased over the result.

A BUSY MAN.

Street Commissioner Meeker Has But Little Time to Spare.

Street Commissioner Meeker is a busy man and he manages to move around more in a day than a good many people imagine. Wednesday, he rode ninety miles while riding about looking after his different gangs of men and attending to other necessary business of his office.

He now has the steam roller working on West Front street between Grant and Plainfield avenues. There was some delay in this work caused by the non-arrival of the necessary crushed stone. The fault, however, lay with the weather, as the recent extreme heat made it impossible for men to work at the Smalley stone quarry and so the supply at the stone crusher ran short. That trouble is all over now as the cool weather has arrived, for a time at any rate.

This will be the last work for the steam roller for the present, so Commissioner Meeker told a Daily Press reporter yesterday afternoon, as the funds apportioned for that purpose have almost been expended.

Taxpayers' League.

The Somerset County Taxpayers' League will hold a two days' picnic at Chimney Rock, September 2 and 3, at which the following persons will make addresses: Mrs. E. C. Fales of Brooklyn, James E. Martine of Plainfield, Dexter Davis of Newark, Lunn Davis of New York, Col. Archie Fisk of Colorado, Hon. A. W. Cutler of Morristown, Hon. Thomas McEwan of Jersey City, John R. Foster of Three Bridges, William C. Barrick of Flemington, J. W. Arrowsmith of Orange and E. S. Wilde of Newark. The Big Six Quartet of Port Oram has been engaged to furnish music for both days. All the political parties will be represented in the speakers.

—Tomorrow Saturday, August 22, VanEmburgh & Son will sell one lot of plain table tumblers at 23c dozen.

Poison Ivy, insect bites, bruises, scalds, burns, are quickly cured by DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve, the great pile cure. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

WILL OF ELIAS R. POPE.

HOW THE PROPERTY WILL BE DIVIDED AMONG HIS HEIRS.

His Estate, Both Real and Personal, to be Held in Trust For Five Years, Except That Bequeathed Directly By Will.

The will of the late E. R. Pope was probated before the County Surrogate in Elizabeth this afternoon by the following executors: James C. Pope, Frank A. Pope and Howard A. Pope. The document is as follows:

In the name of God, amen.

I, Elias R. Pope, residing at No. 420 Park avenue, in the city of Plainfield, N. J., being of sound mind, memory and understanding, do make, publish and declare this to be my last will and testament, in the manner following, that is to say:

First—It is my will and I do order and direct that all my just debts and funeral expenses be paid and satisfied as soon as conveniently can be after my decease, and a suitable monument be erected for myself and wife.

Secondly—I order and direct my executors hereinafter named, to hold the stocks now owned by me in the Plainfield Gas Light Company and the Plainfield Gas and Electric Company, of Plainfield, N. J., and not to sell the same until five years after my decease, subject to such changes as they may deem best for the companies' interest and for the benefit of my estate.

Thirdly—I hereby order and direct my executors, or the survivors of them hereinafternamed, to hold in trust all my estate, both real and personal, that I may die seized of, except as hereinafter provided for, for the term of five years. After my decease the income from my said estate to be given to my wife, Hannah A. Pope, from time to time, as she may require. The house and lot wherein I now reside, belongs to my wife, Hannah A. Pope, together with all the contents of the same, and nothing contained therein is to be inventoried or accounted for as a part of my personal property.

Fourthly—I give and bequeath to the Piscataway Seventh-day Baptist church at New Market, N. J, the sum of one thousand dollars, to be invested in a first mortgage, and the interest only to be used for keeping in repair and proper order the graves of John Pope and Sarah R. Pope, my father and mother, and keeping fences, and burying grounds in order. And if at any time, or for any reason, the said church shall fail to so apply the said interest, the said principal and interest to revert back to my lawful heirs.

Fifthly—I give and bequeath to my grandson, Frank A. Pope, Jr., the sum of one thousand dollars, to be invested at interest for him, and both principal and interest to be paid to him when he shall have arrived at the age of twenty-one years.

Sixthly—I give and bequeath to my grandson, Leslie Gillingham Pope, the sum of one thousand dollars, to be invested at interest for him, and both principal and interest to be paid to him, when he shall have arrived at the age of twenty-one years. But I order and direct that the above mentioned legacies shall not be paid out of my estate, until after the expiration of five years after my decease, as above mentioned.

Seventh Item—After the five years shall have expired from the date of my decease, I order and direct that my executors or the survivors of them, hereinafter named, shall divide my estate, both real and personal, into four equal shares, and my wife, Hannah A. Pope, to have two shares, absolutely given her to do with as she may think best; one share to be given to my son, Frank A. Pope, and one share to my son, Edward G. Pope.

Lastly—I hereby nominate and appoint James C. Pope, Frank A. Pope, and Howard A. Pope, of Plainfield, N. J., or the survivors of them, executors of this my last will and testament, without being required to give bonds or security, whether required by law or not, hereby giving them full power to sell any or all of my real estate, and give good and sufficient deed in law therefor.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and seal at Plainfield, N. J., this 10th day of April, A. D., 1895. [Signed]

Elias R. Pope.

J. F. MacDonald and H. B. McDonald were the witnesses.

Young Gold Bugs.

That famous organization of boys known as the Park Avenue Club, the members of which are Roland Rockfellow, Herbert Rockfellow, "Manager" William Sweeney, Edward Demarest, David Demarest, Homer Smith and Douglass Martin, has declared in favor of McKinley and Hobart. The members of the club have decided that gold shall be the only standard while free silver shall be cast out in the cold. They have all decided to show their sentiments by wearing McKinley and Hobart hats.

RATHER YOUNG THIEVES.

SONS OF RESPECTABLE PEOPLE LOOT THE BOYS' CLUB ROOMS.

Boldly Stole Two Wheelbarrows Loads of Tools and Books and They Also Divided the Booty Between Themselves.

Two lads, scarcely in their teens, have ended their short career, for the present, in the lockup. Their last grand coup was to carry away a wheelbarrow load of tools and books from the new club house of the Boys' Club on Sycamore street and then take their plunder home to divide it. They were seen, however, in the act and last night Chief Grant captured both the young offenders and lodged them in jail.

One of the lads lived on East Third street and the other on New street, but, for the sake of their families, their names will be withheld for the present. They have both been members of the Boys' Club and, during the long vacation, they have tried different amusements. Since the Boys' Club changed its headquarters to the old Plainfield Bicycle Club house the boys have been hanging around there watching the unpacking and arranging of the tools, apparatus and books.

Of course, everything was in general confusion and the lads took advantage of it. Sixty-six books, belonging to the club's library, whose total value amounted to between $30 and $40, were piled in a wheelbarrow and then a general supply of tools, hammers, saws, maletts, etc., usually two of each kind, was added to the load. The tools were worth about as much as the books.

This miscellaneous load was openly wheeled to the East Third street home of one of the lads and there the spoils divided. The parents were told that the books and tools had been given to them.

Complaint was made to Chief Grant by those in charge at the Boy's Club and he investigated. On inquiry he learned from the boys around there and the neighbors who the thieves were and he soon arrested them and recovered the books and tools from their parents.

The boys were brought before Justice Newcorn this morning and were held to await the action of the Grand Jury. They will probably be sent to a reform school.

RESPONSE IN MELODY.

These Verses to be Sung at the Opening of the Endeavor Convention.

The following hymn has been adopted by the committee on programme for the New Jersey Christian Endeavor Convention in October, and will be sung by the delegates at the opening session, October 7th, in response to the greetings of local societies:

Tune: "Vox Angelica" or "Pilgrims of the Night."

We hear, we hear, Endeavorers voices swelling
From Christian hearts, abounding in God's love;
We hear the promise of their welcome, telling
Of hallowed joys to lift their souls above.

Workers for Jesus
Clothed in His light,
Bearing our Crosses Endeavor in His Might.
Working and Singing
Exultant, Exultant for the Right.

We come, we come responding to their voices
From rudant hills, and "oceans wave beat shore;"
All Jersey now salutes thee, and rejoices;
Glad Plainfield, through thine open gates we pour.
Workers for Jesus.—

With you we'll sit at Jesus' feet, awaiting
The Holy Spirit, God's most precious Gift.
That, neither faith, nor love, nor zeal abating
We may from sinful Earth its burden lift.
Workers for Jesus.—

Once more, dear hearts, we thank you for your greeting.
Your smiles, your songs, your salutations, all.
With you, Endeavor Hosts in Christ's name meeting
Shall feast, as in Christ's bannered banquet hall.
Workers for Jesus.—

These verses were composed by Rev. Cornelius Brett, of Jersey City, chairman of the '96 programme committee, to be sung in response to the to the song of welcome composed by Rev. Robert Lowry, of Plainfield.

Danced to Prof. O'Reilly's Music.

The summer night's festival and dance of the Fourth Ward Social Club in St. Marys, T. A. B. Hall, last evening was a prounced a success. About one hundred couples were present and enjoyed an evening of unalloyed pleasure to Prof. Eugune O'Reilly's fine music. The committee of arrangements consisted of Martine Kane, Chairman, P. Mack and Charles McCarty. The dance was so much of a success that the managers are considering the feasibility of repeating it at an early date.

Johnson's Mother Visited Him.

Mrs. Coleman, mother of James Johnson, the alleged colored assaulter of Mr. and Mrs. Dunham, was notified by Chief Grant of the condition of her son, who now lies dying at the Mercer Hospital, Trenton. Yesterday she went down to see him. Mrs. Coleman lives on Paridise Alley and is married to her second husband, hence the difference in name.

NO LAG IN CARNIVALITES

ARRANGEMENTS FOR THE GREAT BICYCLE EVENT BEING PERFECTED.

The Features Being Advertised all Over the State and Cyclists are Interested to Attend and Compete For Prizes.

Don't think that the interest in the Daylight Bicycle Carnival is dying out because not much has been said about it this week. There is a saying that still water runs deep and so it does in this case. The advertising committee has been at work and now large posters are being distributed throughout the neighboring town and villages telling a few facts of Plainfield's great event. The bicycle clubs of this district have been notified and the large and valuable prize list has tempted them in preparations to attend.

The decorations of the wheels will be something very elaborate in many cases as cyclists are beginning to realize that they will have to hustle to take a prize. There will be lots of competition for the prizes but everybody has a good chance. Good taste and beauty are a winning combination, however.

The coasting contest has aroused great interest for it offers everybody a chance. A number of staid business men of this city have signified their intention of entering this contest and hint that they may surprise some of the younger contestants by carrying away the honors.

The financial aid of all is requested in making the carnival successful. So far the financial committee has met with an excellent response and it is hoped that all the local business men will realize the importance of making the affair a success and thus aid themselves very materially.

A meeting of the general committee was to have been held last evening in the Board of Trade rooms in the Babcock building but, owing to a misunderstanding, only part of the committee appeared. It was decided to hold another meeting this evening at the same place, beginning at 8:30 o'clock, when all the members of the general committe are requested to be present. This meeting will be a very important one, as the questions of finances, prizes and judges will come up for discussion.

Last Mauch Chunk Excursion.

The last Mauch Chunk low-rate excursion, but one for this season run by the Central Railroad of New Jersey, will start next Wednesday. It will, as usual, have a liberal patronage and will be first-class in every respect. Nice cars will be on the train and the public made comfortable. This is delightful Mauch Chunk weather. It is lovely now in Glen Onoko and to explore that lovely mountain retreat should afford boundless pleasure to the tourist. The country about Mauch Chunk is wild and beautiful. The air is crisp, cool and full of the resinous odor of pine. The ride on the Switchback Railroad is no less interesting than ever, nor is the entire Central's line any less romantic. The outing afforded at a very low rate cannot be equalled and gives more satisfaction than a short trip to the seashore. Special train with lunch-car attached leaves Plainfield at 9:25 a. m. and returns about 8 p m. Fare for the round trip $1.75.

Seventh Day Baptist Conference.

The Seventh Day Baptist conference, which was held in this city last year, is now in session in Alfred, N. Y. The report of Treasurer George H. Utter of Westerly, R. I., showed the Church to be in a healthy state financially. The report of the Board of Managers was received and accepted. It is a pamphlet of forty-four printed pages, and tells in concise language the work accomplished by this denomination during the year. The afternoon session was opened with a song service, following which was open parliament. Dr. A. Maine delivered an eloquent address on the subject of "Evangelistic work." He was followed by the Rev. Mr. Randolph of Chicago, the Rev. J. A. Platts of Leonardsville, N. Y., the Rev. Mr. Cottrell of DeRuyter, N. Y.; the Rev. H. P. Burdick, the Rev. S.S. Powell of Little Genesse, and Evangelist E. B. Saunders of Hilton, Wis. The discussion of "The Foreign Field" was opened by Miss Susie Burdick. She confined her remarks to the China mission, in which country she had been a missionary for several years.

Tingley Family Re-Union.

Next Wednesday will be a galla day for the Tingley family for on that day the annual re-union of the family will meet on the David Blackford farm near Samptown and renew old acquaintanceship. It is expected that between 200 and 300 of the direct descendants will be present from different parts of the country and the day will be given up to speech making, feasting and a good social time.

SPLIT ON POLITICS

Don M. Dickinson's Law Firm Dissolves Partnership.

ELLIOTT G. STEVENSON RETIRES

He Is Prominent in Michigan Politics and a Worker for Bryan and Sewall—Dickinson and Private Secretary Thurber To Remain.

Detroit, Aug. 21.—The law firm of Dickinson, Thurber & Stevenson, which is comprised of Hon. Don M. Dickinson, Henry T. Thurber, private secretary to President Cleveland, and Elliott G. Stevenson, late chairman of the democratic state central committee, has dissolved on account of political differences which have arisen between Messrs. Dickinson and Stevenson since the Chicago convention. In the Chicago convention Mr. Stevenson posed as the mouthpiece of Mr. Dickinson, who represented the administration. Mr. Stevenson was chairman of the Michigan delegation and also chairman of the state central committee. He declared he would resign from the latter position, not on account of the platform, but because of the treatment of the Michigan delegation. Mr. Stevenson did resign, but his resignation was not accepted, which was considered purely a personal victory rather than one for gold or the administration. Later, Mr. Stevenson resigned again and made way for Frederick A. Baker, a silver advocate, retaining a place on the committee, however. Mr. Stevenson has been taking an active part in the campaign in the interests of Bryan and Sewall. This action on the part of Mr. Stevenson so incensed Mr. Dickinson that the relations between the members of the firm became greatly strained. Articles of dissolution of the firm were finally signed. Mr. Thurber will remain with Mr. Dickinson. This law firm probably had a larger revenue than any other similar firm in the state. Mr. Stevenson, besides being one of the most conspicuous democrats in Michigan, is considered a lawyer of great ability. He came here from Port Huron a few years ago to become the junior partner of the firm, and immediately took high rank among Detroit lawyers.

TRAIN RUN BY WOMEN.

Novel Excursion to the Thousand Islands Conducted by the W. C. Association.

Syracuse, N. Y., Aug. 21.—The first woman's train in the world left here yesterday for the Thousand Islands, over the Rome, Watertown & Ogdensburg railroad. The train is run by the Woman's Christian association of this city who formed themselves into a tourist company for the purpose of running the train and also operating the steamboats on the St. Lawrence river during this personally continued tour. The engine was started by Mrs. James W. McGuire, wife of the mayor of Syracuse, and each car in the train had a woman conductor, in uniform, and a woman chaperon. The Thousand Island Steamboat company's steamers, run in connection with this tour, will also be officered by the women, the woman having appointed a commodore, captain, mate, purser, cook, engineer, firemen and crew to serve to each excursion steamer. The train consisted of twelve vestibule cars, including a Wagner palace car and carried about 600 people.

TO SAVE $27,000 MONTHLY.

Number of Workmen Reduced on the Pittsburg & Western Railroad.

Pittsburg, Aug. 21.—Thomas M. Kink, receiver for the Pittsburg & Western railroad, has issued an order for retrenchment on that road, curtailing the monthly pay rolls $27,000. A large reduction in the number of workmen is the outcome. The salaries of the remaining employes will not be reduced. The cause for the order is a marked falling off in the freight traffic, which is believed to be only temporary.

Pennsylvania Gold Democrats.

Philadelphia, Aug. 21.—The programme for the state sound money democratic convention here next Tuesday has been decided upon. The situation was generally discussed and it was agreed that a permanent chairman shall be appointed immediately after the opening of the convention, a temporary organization being deemed unnecessary. Two delegates from each congressional district and two for each of the congressmen-at-large will be selected to attend the national democratic convention in Indianapolis on Sept. 2. The convention will also select presidential electors-at-large. The platform will be short and will probably be a repetition of the sound money plank of the democratic state convention.

Stolen Chalice Recovered.

Bridgeport, Conn., Aug. 21.—The police have recovered the silver chalice which was stolen from the vestry of St. Mary's Catholic church recently. It was left by a stranger at Michael Propoke's jewelry store in East Maine street. Propoke agreed to buy it of the stranger, but the fellow evidently grew suspicious subsequently and did not return. The gold chalice was not offered for sale.

Hay Crop.

Canajoharie, N. Y., Aug. 21.—Reports from several hundred points relative to the hay crop denote a good supply in the central, western and northwestern states with a demand for the same in the eastern and coast line states.

Treasury Gold Reserve.

Washington, Aug. 21.—The treasury gold reserve has further declined to $103,932,711. The withdrawals for the month to date aggregate $7,750,000.

Mr. Bryan Would Enter Into Debate with No One Else.

MANY OFFERS ALREADY DECLINED

Arrangements for the Meeting at Albany Next Tuesday at Which He Will Speak.

To Deliver an Address at Tivoli-on-the-Hudson To-morrow.

Upper Red Hook, N. Y., Aug. 21.—William Jennings Bryan was asked last night if he intended to answer Mr. Cockran, and said in answer that he was receiving many invitations from prominent men to debate the silver question. In order to avoid further invitation of this nature he said he would not consider any proposition to debate any question with anybody during the campaign unless a debate should be arranged between Mr. McKinley and himself, and he added that so far as he knew no plan for such a debate was under consideration by either national committee. Ex-state senator Norton Chase and internal revenue collector Louis W. Pratt were here to make arrangements for the Albany speech on Tuesday night next. At their suggestion Mr. Bryan will leave an hour or so earlier than he intended and arrive in Albany about 4 o'clock, leaving there at 10 o'clock. Dutchess county has been placarded with posters of a meeting at Tivoli on the Hudson at 3 p. m. to-morrow, the addresses to be delivered by Mr. Bryan and Senator Stewart of Nebraska. A large crowd is expected.

SEWALL NOT OUT.

The Rumor That He Had Withdrawn Authoritatively Denied at Bath.

Bath, Me., Aug. 21.—Regarding the rumor in New York that Arthur Sewall has withdrawn, the Bath Daily Times has been authorized to state that the rumor is absolutely without foundation.

ESCAPES MILITARY TRIAL.

Gen. Cepero's Case Transferred to the Civil Courts in Cuba.

Havana, Aug. 21.—The case of Gen. Jose Loranzo Cepero, an American citizen who was arrested in January last on board a steamer running between Cienfuegos and Batabano, has been transferred from the military to the civil authorities, and he will be tried by the high criminal court of Santa Clara. Gen. Cepero, it is said, was in command of the rebels who engaged the column of Gen. Arizon at Maltienpo during Gomez's march from the Siguanea valley to Matanzas. It is also charged that he was the leader of many raids in the eastern provinces. Cepero took passage at Cienfuegos on the steamer on which he was arrested. His case was taken up by Consul General Lee, who demanded that he be tried by the civil courts and not by a court martial. This demand has now been conceded and Cepero will be transferred to Santa Clara for trial.

COULD NOT READ ENGLISH.

Privilege of the Electoral Franchise Denied to a German.

Washington, Aug. 21.—Judge Cole of the district court, who a few weeks ago refused to naturalize an Italian because the man admitted that he did not understand the constitution and was unable to comprehend the form of government existing here, has made another ruling in the matter of an application by a German for admission to citizenship, tending to still further restrict the electoral franchise. The applicant demonstrated that he was unable to read English, whereupon Judge Cole rejected his application, saying that no one was entitled to the rights of suffrage who could not read the language of the country.

Press Arrangements for Buffalo Convention

Buffalo, Aug. 21.—Secretary Cunsen of the democratic state committee requests that all applications for press seats in the state convention which is to meet in Buffalo September 16 be sent to John H. O'Brien, chairman of the committee on press arrangements, 666 Ellicott square, Buffalo. Newspapers are requested to specify the number of seats actually needed.

Return of the Fram.

Christiana, Aug. 21.—The safe arrival of the Fram after her long voyage in the Arctic seas created much enthusiasm here, and the buildings in the city and the ships in the harbor were decorated in honor of the occasion. Dr. Nansen is jubilant over the return of the vessel, and will board her as soon as she arrives at Tromsoe from Skjervoe.

Maryland Gold Democrats.

Baltimore, Aug. 21.—A conference of gold democrats was held yesterday afternoon at the office of ex-congressman Isidor Rayner, at which it was decided to issue a call for a mass meeting of the sound money democrats of Maryland for the purpose of selecting sixteen delegates to represent this state at the Indianapolis convention, September 2.

To Witness Armor Plate Tests.

Washington, Aug. 21.—Capt. Ira McNutt, ordnance department, has been ordered from South Bethlehem, Pa., to the Sandy Hook proving ground to witness the test of armor plate piercing projectiles.

The President Spends a Busy Evening.

Buzzards Bay, Mass., Aug. 21.—Secretary Thurber and the president were kept very busy last night until after midnight with official correspondence.

Ryan Defeats Moore.

Buffalo, Aug. 21.—Ryan was awarded the decison over Moore in the 20-round glove contest last night.

LEGENDS OF THE DIAMOND.

Many Curious Superstitions Are Associated with the Beautiful Gem.

Diamond was the name of a beautiful youth of the island of Crete, one of the attendants of the infant Jupiter in his cradle. Diamond, not to be subject to "the ills that flesh is heir to," was transformed into the hardest and most brilliant substance in nature. In Arabic and Persian works on natural history Aristotle is generally quoted as the chief authority for the story of the inaccessible valley of diamonds, where it was the custom to throw down pieces of flesh as the only means of procuring the gems. Vultures picked up these with the precious stones attached to them and dropped them in their flight on various parts of the earth. Marco Polo, who traveled in India in the thirteenth century, gave much the same account of the method of procuring diamonds. One of the adventures of Sinbad the Sailor in "The Arabian Nights" is almost identical, and Epiphanius, in the fourth century, writes to much the same effect. The diamond was called adamus, which means indomitable. It was never pounded and taken internally like other stones, because it was considered indigestible. The diamond had the virtue of bestowing victory and fortitude. It calmed anger and strengthened wedded love; hence it was called the stone of reconciliation. The learned De Boot takes occasion to discourse at some length as to whether the power of discriminating between right and wrong, legal and illegal love, is a natural quality of the stone or belongs to a spirit residing in it. For the very extraordinary arguments he uses the reader is referred to his treatise (B. II., c. iv.). That diamonds preserved their owners from the plague was considered fully proved by the fact that the plague at first attacked only the poorer classes and that the rich, who wore diamonds in profusion, usually escaped. Though the diamond was not supposed to be fusible by fire, the splendor of its luster and its properties were thought to be affected by heat, for which reason Wolfgangus Gabelschoverus advises all who wear these gems to take them off at night and place them in cold water or on a marble slab. Among the ancients the diamond was a symbol of severe and inexorable justice, and of the impassability of fate. Hence the judges of Hades were described as having hearts of adamant. A Jewish legend relates of the gem, supposed to have been a diamond, worn on the ephod of Aaron, that when a man really guilty was charged with a crime the jewel became dark and dim. If the accused were innocent it sparkled with increased luster. But all these wonderful virtues are eclipsed and thrown in the shade by one most marvelous and unique—for it was attributed to no other gem—the faculty of multiplying its species! Boetius De Boot, quoting from another learned man, relates that a lady of good family had two hereditary diamonds which produced several others and thus left a posterity. The comments of the narrator are no less curious than the statement itself, but it does not inform us whether these descendants were born small and grew in size from infancy to maturity.—London Society.

of Cod-liver Oil with Hypophosphites, can be taken as easily in summer as in winter. Unlike the plain oil it is palatable, and the hypophosphites that are in it aid in digestion and at the same time tone up the system.

For sickly, delicate children, and for those whose lungs are affected, it is a mistake to leave it off in the summer months. The dose may be reduced if necessary.

We recommend the small size especially for summer use, and for children, where a smaller dose is required. It should be kept in a cool place after it is once opened.

Horace J. Martin, Prop. Repairing. Sundries,

THE BEDFORD BURGLARY.

Mortal Wounding of Mr. Adams and the Shooting of the Two Robbers.

Bedford Station, N Y., Aug. 21.—This vicinity is still in great excitement over the attempt of four burglars to rob the post office and general store of William B. Adams & Son and the mortal wounding of Mr. Adams, the wounding and arrest of two of the robbers and the narrow escape of Mr. Adams' son from death. The latter owes his life to a suspender buckle which deflected the bullet which struck him. The store of Mr. Adams was fitted with a burglar alarm connected with his residence near by. Soon after midnight the alarm sounded and Mr. Adams and his son, the former armed wirh a revolver and the latter with a Winchester rifle, were hurrying to the store. As they approached they saw a man hiding in the dark near the front entrance to the store. At the point of young Adams' rifle the burgler surrendered. He was turned over to the village blacksmith. The elder Adams in the meantime had gone to the rear of the store. Young Adams then started for the front entrance, and as he neared the door he heard several shots in the rear and encountered a burglar escaping by the front entrance. Young Adams was commanded to throw up his hands, but instead quickly fired at the robber, who fell to the ground. As the man fell Adams felt something strike him in the back and turned. Another of the burglars stood before him and cried out: "I'm shot, too." He was made a prisoner and said he had been shot in the hand. The firing attracted the nearby residents and they came quickly to the scene. Blacksmith Schenck, hearing groans at the rear of the store, made his way in that direction and found Walker B. Adams lying on the ground, shot through the head. Medical attendance was speedily secured but the doctor pronounced the wound probably fatal. He was unconscious and what transpired at the rear of the store may never be known. While Mr. Adams was being cared for the two prisoners were forgotten and escaped. The burglar shot by Will Adams lay groaning on the track and was picked up and found to have been shot through the abdomen. The man was large and portly, well-dressed and had plenty of money in his possession. A watch was placed on him and search was made for the rest of the gang. It was daylight before another of the burglars was found, badly wounded, lying near the fence on the opposite side of the track from the store. He had been shot in the middle of the back. He was a young man, slim, with face colorless, and poorly dressed. The wounded prisoners were locked up in the Mount Kisco jail. Numerous threats of lynching were heard. William Adams found, when the excitement had somewhat subsided, that he had been shot. The bullet, however, struck his suspender buckle and glanced off. The bullet grazed his back, breaking the skin. The two burglars who escaped are believed to have been wounded.

GOLD NOW COMING

First Shipment Made from Southampton Yesterday.

MORE TO BE FORWARDED TO-MORROW

Denied That the Present Gold Movement This Way Was Brought About by a Plan Devised by New York Bankers.

New York, Aug. 21.—Gold from Europe is already on the way to this country. The first shipment left London yesterday by the steamship Normannia, which sailed from Northampton. The amount was only $250,000, consigned to the Seligmans of this city, but larger amounts are to follow. Two of the steamers sailing to-morrow, it is said, will also carry gold for New York firms. One of the Seligmans said that the importation of the gold at a profit was made possible by the rates for sterling exchange, and the fact that gold commanded a small premium here now. There was nothing at all forced in the shipment, the banker said, and so far as he knew, no suggestion of anything of the sort has been made by any one.

Financial Situation Improved.

Bankers say that they are not sorry to see a reaction in the rates for sterling exchange. The decline had been almost unprecedently rapid and an increase in the rates was therefore a good thing. All agree that the financial situation is much improved, notwithstanding that here and there some one might be a little pinched and commercial houses found it hard to borrow money or sell their paper except at high rates. "But these same houses," said one bank president, "have been getting all the money they wanted at 2½@3 per cent. for a long while, and they should not grumble at paying from 6 to 9 per cent. now for three months. If they figure the average of their interest for the last year or two they will find it not excessive. The fact that a few banks are below their reserve is not of so much importance as some persons are trying to make out. What is a reserve for if it is not to be used in an emergency? Banks should lend some of their reserve and not squeal about it. No bank will suffer and it will not be necessary to issue any loan certificates for the relief under existing conditions or even under much worse conditions than now prevail."

No Conference of Bank Presidents.

The report that the importation of gold from Europe at the present time was the result of a plan decided upon at a conference of bank presidents held Wednesday, is denied. Frederick D. Tappen, president of the Gallatin National bank, said: "No such conference or conferences as alleged took place. The reports to the contrary are absolutely without foundation. It would not be wise to stimulate the importation of gold in such a way as was reported at this time. It would be better to wait and let the gold come naturally." J. Edward Simmons, president of the Fourth National bank, whose name was also mentioned as one of those who attended the conference, said that no such conference or meeting took place and no such plan as that mentioned had been proposed. The leading foreign bankers, members of the sterling exchange syndicate, all agreed in saying that the importations of gold already announced were made profitable entirely through the rates for sterling exchange at the time the gold was ordered and the rates which money commanded here at that time.

An appeal has been made by the Department of Agriculture at Washington for the observance of a "Bird day" in the schools throughout the country, the object sought being to set apart a day once a year, or to combine it with "Arbor Day," for instruction in the value of our native birds, and for discussing means of protecting such as are of value from wanton destruction.

According to the New York Tribune the Hon. James E. Martine declines to be a candidate for Senator in Union county. Mr. Martine has certainly been spoken of as the probable nominee of his party for this office, but it is understood that he prefers to be a candidate for Congress against Mr. Fowler. Four years ago Mr. Martine was entitled to the Congressional nomination at the hands of his party. He was defeated in the nominating convention, and Hon. John T. Dunn was nominated. Mr. Martine hesitated but a little at the injustice done him, then rolled up his sleeves and helped to elect his opponent. The next year his party threw him the Senatorial nomination when it was known he could not win, Hon. Foster M. Voorhees being his opponent, but he accepted the candidacy and worked hard but unsuccessfully. Now they are willing to nominate him again for Senator, because they think Mr. Voorhees will again run; but Mr. Martine is said to want a chance to become a member of Congress. He is entitled to that nomination, and we would like to see him nominated. He is a genial gentleman and a good speaker. He has come out so flatly for free silver that a Congressional contest in this district between him and Mr. Fowler would show just what numerical strength there is in the fallacy. We do not think Mr. Martine would be elected, but he would make as good a fight as possible and would conduct a vigorous but courteous campaign.—Elizabeth Journal.

STILLMAN MUSIC HALL.

Initial Performance Thursday Evening With the Cotton Spinner.

Through the warp and woof of "The Cotton Spinner" run the scarlet threads of laughter, the black threads of villainy, the gray threads of pathos, and the white threads of purity and love. From these variegated strands, the dramatist has woven a beautiful tapestry of human love and human passions, that cannot fail to touch the eye and the heart alike. The features are all humanly drawn, and stand out with startling fidelity to life. There are no complex patterns to disturb the mind, geometrical knots to unkink the brain, nor dull designs to weary the eye. "The Cotton Spinner," is a pretty piece of theatrical tapestry, designed for the work-a-day world, and will be found worth hanging in the chambers of memory, to hide for an evening, the dust from the every day broom of life, which settles at times too thickly upon the well worn furniture of prosaic existence.

THEATRICAL.

It requires energy and adroitness, in these days of sharp managerial competition, to present an entire new bill every week, but Proctor's Pleasure Palace, New York, keeps well in the lead by this popular policy. No matter how novel or diverting a feature may be, one week is the limit of its life in this cool and delightful resort, where refreshing breezes penetrate every nook and corner. The programme is arranged on the reasonable theory that people best enjoy a laughing vaudeville. The comedy element predominates in every feature. The Dillon Brothers sing their brisk, witty parody songs, and keep up a rapid fire of comic conversation. Ben F. Grinnelle and Charles Fostelle offer a mosaic of burlesque foolery and eccentric dancing. James Richmond Glenroy dispenses drollery of his own concoction, and Louise Montrese, late star of the "Black Crook," offers a character monologue.

The father was unable to stop the runaway or to take his little girl from the carriage. On went the horse towards Scotch Plains, the little child clinging to the wagon. Will Taylor, who lives in the vicinity, mounted his bicycle and gave chase, thinking he could stop the runaway horse. Faster the horse ran on, until he reached the turn in the road at Scotch Plains, and finally stopped at Eller's home. The little girl was uninjured, although terribly frightened. YOUR TIRED STOMACH.

"I have, no appetite," you say, "and the little I do eat does me no good. At first it feels cold and dead in my ston ach and by and by I have aches and pains that sometimes go to my chest and back. I feel weak, low spirited and out of sorts all over. I fancy the demon of dyspepsia has got me." That's the way you talk and no wonder. But wait a moment. Let us reason together. Perhaps thus far your stomach is merely tired. You have been eating too much, eating the wrong things, and irregularly. You have given it too much to do, and like all living things, when over worked, it stops at length from sheer exhaustion. There may not be an actually diseased condition as yet. Still it is nature's warning, and you must heed it or worse will follow. "But I must eat or starve," you say. True enough, but safety usually lies in middle courses. Here is one for you. You don't need drastic purges or exciting stimulants. Your condition is one easily relieved if we go about it gently and sensibly. The tired stomach won't work under whip and spur. It has probaly had too much of that already. What you require is something that is at once a food and a digester of food. Such an article is the Shaker Digestive Cordial discovered and prepared by the Shaker Community of Mt. Lebanon, N. Y. Taken right after eating, so as to mix with the food, it does the stomach's work for it, gives it the advantage of further rest, strengthens you in a natural way, and soon enables the stomach to do full duty. There is nothing else like this simple, safe, certain and palatable remedy. Yet the Shakers respect your doubts, and authorize druggists to sell a trial bottle for ten cents.

HAY FEVER REMEDY.

Rubbing the Ears Vigorously Sometimes Brings Relief.

The capriciousness of hay fever and the occasional relief obtained from an entirely empirical method of treatment warrant the publication of any means which has proved successful, in the hope that it may be of use to some other person afflicted with this annoying disease.

Feber, of Hamburg, reports his own case, which has been so severe as to necessitate his using a closed carriage all through the summer. His relief was brought about from accidentally noticing that in the winter a coryza was usually accompanied with hot ears, which regained their normal temperature when the discharge from the nose was established. He determined to try a reversed order of effect on the hay fever in the summer, and began, accordingly, to rub his ears until they became red and hot.

It is now the third year that he has been able to lead an endurable existence during hay fever season. He says:

"As soon as the least sensation of fullness in the nose appears, there is recognized a certain amount of pallor in the ears. A thorough rubbing of the ears, at times even to contusion, has always succeeded in freeing the nasal mucous membrane from its congestion.

"The rubbing, however, must be thorough, and repeated as often as the least symptom of congestion returns to the nose. Since using this means I have been able to take long sandy walks, sit, and even sleep, with open windows, or pass an evening in my garden without distress.

"Several patients have had relief from this treatment, always in proportion to the thoroughness of the rubbing, and I hope by this means some other physician may be able to give his patients the same great relief."—Chicago Tribune.

Butter Produces Fat.

Many physicians, according to a lecturer on dietetics, are ordering thin bread and butter for delicate paitents, especially those suffering from dyspepsia, consumption and anaemia, or any who need to take flesh. This thin bread and butter insensibly induces persons to eat much more butter than they have any idea of. It is extraordinary, says the lecturer, how short a way a fresh pat of butter will go if spread on a number of thin slices of bread. This is one advantage, and a great one in the feeding of invalids, for they are thereby provided with an excellent form of the fat which is so essential for their nutrition in a way that lures them to take it without rebellion. But the thin bread and butter has another advantage equally as great—it is very digestible and easily assimilated. Fresh butter made from cream is very much more digestible when spread upon thin slices of bread than the same amount of cream eaten as cream per se would be.—Chicago Chronicle.

Assured of the Future.

"But, Herbert," she said, "think of the future. You are poor, and you cannot surround me with the luxuries to which I have been accustomed."

"But your father—"

"He would do nothing for us."

"Does he play poker?"

"No."

"Then I'll teach him. Trust in me, darling, and have no fear of the future."—Texas Sifter.

The Queen's Mistress.

It is said that the one woman of whom Queen Victoria stands in resepectful awe is Mrs. Mussens, the housekeeper of Balmoral castle. She has held her position of power for many years, and rules everybody who comes within her domain with a rod of iron, even to the queen herself. Her majesty on one occasion took a fancy to a certain housemaid and requested that the care of her own apartments should be given to the girl. Mrs. Mussens, however, thought differently, and informed her majesty that such a mark of preference would only turn the young woman's head and utterly spoil her. The queen of Great Britain and Ireland and empress of India listened in silence and meekly acquiesced in her housekeeper's decision.—Detroit Free Press.

NEWS FOR THE CYCLERS.

Inventions to Increase the Ease and Speed of Bicycles.

New Method of Applying Power—A Tandem Attachment for Single Wheels—Working the Pedals by Vertical Motion.

[COPYRIGHT, 1896.]

A new idea in bicycles, which will doubtless be hailed with joy by all users of the wheel, is an attachment which, while allowing cyclists to get the same amount of recreation from their riding, gives greater speed, with the outlay of less than the usual amount of muscular force, and consequently with less fatigue. In the ordinary bicycle the pedal moves through a circle, requiring thereby what is known as the "ankle motion" and the "back kick" for effectively applied power. It is the acquirement of these motions which causes difficulty in learning to ride rapidly, as they can only be properly obtained by the most constant practice and exertion.

The new invention overcomes these motions of itself, thus taking the strain from the rider, for the pedals are worked by a vertical motion of the foot, which is a purely natural and customary direction for the foot to move. It is the proper acquirement of this vertical motion which works the wonders, and which is bound to revolutionize cycling.

By an ingenious arrangement of gearing the downward movement of the new pedal describes an arc of a circle the center of which is a rear connection of the pedal arm. As the pedal is moved down it forces the connecting bar down with it on the crank shaft. By this leverage a terrific force is applied to the crank shaft, which is thus turned by mechanical means instead of directly by the foot. In the new device, the cranks are arranged so as to be diametrically opposed to each other, but so that both cannot be placed on a dead center at the same time.

It is claimed that this attachment can be applied to any bicycle. The rider, exerting a more uniformly effective pressure, it helps him to ascend steeper grades with the same gear or the same grade with a higher gear, than can be done by means of the ordinary crank. By the new invention, the pressure of the foot becomes effective during more than half the revolution of the crank shaft. The foot descends rather slowly performing its work, then returns quickly to the top of the range to begin anew. More than half the time is spent in the downwaard working part of the movement, and as a result a less pressure and less muscular strain suffice to produce a given mean tangential force upon the crank.

NEW WRINKLES FOR THE BICYCLE.

It is expected that with the advent of the new idea, weak women and nervous men, who have so far been deterred from bicycle riding by reason of the physical exertion necessary, will now ride on easy grades with less effort than it would be to walk, and still enjoy all the pleasures of wheeling.

A bicycle which can be converted at pleasure from a single machine into a tandem, or "bicycle built for two," is the most recent invention in the wheel line.

It consists of a novel combination of parts, which form an attachment adapted for application to any bicycle of ordinary pattern. One great objection to the ordinary tandem is that it is almost imperative that two persons ride it. With only one rider, the machine becomes unwieldy, and, if the distance traveled be far, the work is tiresome.

With this new invention, however, all the essential parts of a tandem can be carried in a single machine until such time as the rider may have occasion to convert his machine into a tandem, fully equipped for the riders. This tandem addition can also be attached to any ordinary machine without the pedal attachment, when one seat is used for carrying only.

The movable framework which, when set in place, makes the tandem, consists of a fork, a longitudinal brace, a handle bar and a saddle. To an ordinary bicycle is attached an auxiliary sprocket wheel, and through the hub of the rear wheel is an auxiliary driving shaft, to which is connected another sprocket wheel, making in all four sprocket wheels, when the machine is rigged for tandem service. Separate chains connect the two sets of sprocket wheels.

A clamp at the front of the auxiliary horizontal bar is fastened to the saddle post of an ordinary machine, while the two ends of the fork rest on the driving shaft which passes through the hub of the rear wheel. The second saddle projects somewhat beyond the rear wheel, but not sufficiently far to overbalance the machine when there are two riders on it. The rear handle bar is set just behind the regular saddle, in the auxiliary horizontal bar, and can be attached to the front steering gear by a chain or small rod. This device can be fitted to a lady's wheel as well as to a gentleman's wheel, and when one wants to take his lady riding he need not go to the expense of providing a wheel for himself, provided the lady has one. All that is necessary is that he own the auxiliary parts of an adjustable tandem, which he can carry in his hand, and in a few seconds attach to his lady's machine, thus converting it into a complete tandem.

One of the latest bicycle inventions relates to the steering gear. Most bicyles are steered to the front wheel, but on this the rear wheel acts as a rudder. Another unique feature is the way in which the pedal power is applied. Instead of operating the crank, the rider pushes the pedal up and down and the rotary motion is accomplished by means of a connecting bar and a crank. The front wheel is used as the driving wheel instead of the rear one. It is much larger than the front wheel of the ordinary safety. The reason for this is to increase the speed by reducing the friction, and the wheel being of a larger circumference covers the ground with fewer revolutions.

Another freak bicycle which soon may be seen if manufacturers think enough of the idea to invest their money, does away with the familiar chain and sprocket. A claim is made that the absence of these parts means a distinct saving of power. The rider is seated directly over the rear wheel and operates a crank shaft on which is affixed a large geared wheel. This turns a small cog on the axle of the driving wheel, which revolves several times to one revolution of the crank shaft carrying the pedals.

Some people think that bicycle riders cannot be thrifty. A device is just out that will give them all the chance they want to save. It is a dime savings bank skillfully concealed in the grip of the handle bar. There is a slit at the end of the grip into which the dime is slipped. The tubing of the handle bar is fitted with a dial and a spring. The dime drops between the end of the tube and the dial. Each succeeding dime pushes the dial-point toward the fork, indicating the amount in the bank. There is room for 50 dimes. While it is an easy matter to deposit money, it is harder to get it out. This difficulty is placed in the way of the rider in order that he will not draw on his handle bank. Rather than take the trouble to unloosen several screws and nuts, he will allow the dimes to remain until the bank is full. In this way five dollars is quickly accumulated. Any time the rider has any change he is tempted to slip it in the bank instead of buying soda water or stronger beverages.

OLD-TIME ENTERPRISE.

How the Newspapers Prepared for an Important Event.

In 1830 there was intense excitement throughout the country. It was known that Webster was to reply in the senate to Hayne, of South Carolina, and every one was anxious to read his speech and to hear about the contest between the north and the south. Hundreds visited Washington that they might be either nigh to or present at the scene of conflict. The New York, Philadelphia, Boston and Providence papers joined in arrangements to gratify the curiosity of the stay-at-homes.

Relays of fleet horses were stationed between Washington and Providence. But the Providence papers were even more enterprising than their contemporaries of Philadelphia, New York and Boston. An old printer, Mr. Greenleaf Clarke, who was then an apprentice, tells how they came out ahead:

It was determined that if the weather was favorable, in addition to the relay of horses, the Providence papers were to take advantage of the quiet waters on Long Island sound, and place on board a steamer, frames and cases and type and compositors. The water proved to be remarkably calm, and on arriving at Providence the speech was in type, set up on the passage, ready for proving and correcting; and of course, was published in an extra immediately.

An anecdote reveals the intense excitement at Washington on the day Webster delivered his great speech. Among the crowd gathered at the capitol, through which the orator passed to the senate chamber, was an old New Hampshire farmer, with whom the orator had gone on many hunting excursions. Rushnig up to him the old man exclaimed:

"Mr. Webster, are you ready for him?"

"I've got five fingers in," replied the senator, using the vernacular of shooting to indicate that he was not only ready, but had a very large charge to fire at the South Carolinian.—Youth's Companion.

Power of Insects and Horses.

Few people have any idea of the wonderful amount of strength possessed by members of the beetle family. Felix Plateau has made experiments which show that a common door beetle can draw 500 times its own weight, and a stag beetle has been known to escape from under a box weighted with a book 1,700 times greater in weight than the insect's body. If a horse's strength was as great comparatively as that of a common flea he could draw a dead weight of 800,000 pounds!

WAS A GRAND OLD MAN.

Ex-Gov. Felch, Who Died Recently at Ann Arbor, Mich.

He Was One of the Three Oldest Living Ex-Members of the United States Senate—His Friendship for the Poet Longfellow.

The death of ex-Gov. Alpheus Felch removed not only one of Michigan's greatest men, but a national character, the associate of Webster, Clay and Calhoun, and the schoolmate and intimate friend of Longfellow and Nathaniel Hawthorne.

Michigan's "grand old man" is the title that the people of that state in affection and gratitude gave to this man, whose name is written upon every page of the state's history, and upon whom the people of Michigan have bestowed all the honors in their power. As a member of the state legislature, auditor, bank commissioner, judge in the supreme court, governor and United States senator he served the people well and won for himself their reverence and affection.

Gov. Felch was born in Limerick, Me., September 28, 1806. At the age of 15 he entered Phillips (Exeter) academy, and graduated from Bowdoin college when 21. In 1830 he was admitted to the bar at Bangor, Me., and three years later he came west, settling in Monroe, Mich., where he remained ten years, when he removed to Ann Arbor, where he lived for over 50 years. His political life began in 1835 when he was elected to the legislature. Serving in this body two years he was appointed bank commissioner, and in this capacity gave valuable assistance toward the destruction of what was known as the "wild-cat" banking system. In 1842 he was elected to the state supreme court, where he remained until elected governor in 1846.

It was in 1847 that he was sent to the United States senate to represent the state of Michigan in the grandest gathering of intellectual giants this country has ever known. There he was engaged in the great intellectual battles in which Webster, Clay, Calhoun and Benton were the leaders and against the compromise slavery measures that postponed but could not prevent the civil war. Gov.

EX-GOV. ALPHEUS FELCH.

Felch took his seat in the senate when he was 41 years of age, and for many years he shared the honor of being one of the three oldest living ex-members of the senate, George Washington Jones, of Iowa, and James W. Bradbury, of Augusta, Me., being the other two. His remembrances of those days in the senate were full of interest, and he delighted to dwell upon them.

Shortly before his death he said: "In my day the senate was one of the most dignified legislative bodies in the world. The great men of that time were true statesmen, whose object was the maintenance of their principles and the advancement of the interests of the country. There was no such thing as the hurrah of the senate of to-day. There seems to be a great deal of nonsense in that body now; too much attention is paid to the advancement of partisan interests and too little to the consideration of the country's interests."

Gov. Felch's friendship for Longfellow began in the schooldays at Bowdoin college and lasted until the death of the poet. He was frequently a guest at Cambridge, the poet's home. He always spoke of him as a retiring, modest youth, with the pleasantest manner, during the college days, who devoted all the time he could spare from his studies to writing poetry. While still at school he published a volume that attracted the attention of the country to him. Hawthorne he never saw after leaving Bowdoin, but he remembered him as not only modest, but bashful to a painful degree, so much so that very few of his fellow students knew him intimately.

A Virginia Oyster Farm.

William L. Marcy, of Annapolis, has an oyster farm at New Point Island, Matthews county, Va. The farm was started about a year ago. Mr. Marcy has introduced the painting of tiles, made of clay, and coated with a mixture of cement, quicklime and sand, so as to give the spat something to adhere to. The tiles are concave in shape, 15 inches long, with a width of five inches at one end and six at the other. They are set on the bottom lengthwise with the flow and ebb of the tide. When the oyster has developed to the proper size it is, by means of the cement, scraped from the tile, and the tile, after drying, is ready for use again at the proper season, during the last week in May and the first week in June.

The French Foreign Legion.

The foreign legion of the French army is a unique body of troops. It is always sent on dangerous missions or where absolute foolhardiness is required, and it has never been known to falter. An explanation is given in the fact that many of its members are foreigners who have been forced to leave their native countries. They are utterly reckless and are anxious for death, but do not choose to commit suicide. There are political refugees of all sorts, besides men who have been dishonorably dismissed from other European armies for various crimes and misdemeanors, as well as criminals who are serving under assumed names.

Delicate Dress Goods.

Some gowns are so dainty in the weave, so delicate in tint, that they seem to soil by being looked at—one or two wearings making them unpresentable, NOT USELESS. We make a specialty of cleaning fine fabrics, the more delicate the material, the better the results. Sometimes an accident will ruin a gown, without injuring the texture. We dye them then, sometimes we get a prettier effect than the original color. Fine goods stand redying. The finer the material the better the new color. We charge so little for cleaning or dyeing, that even if you are in doubt as to the result, it's worth while to experiment. Want a new evening gown for a dollar or two? DANFORTH CALLS ON HILL.

Said To Have Conveyed Important Messages from Wm. J. Bryan.

Albany, Aug. 21.—Former state treasurer Elliott F. Danforth, who presided at the Bryan notification meeting at Madison Square garden last week, was among the callers upon senator David B. Hill yesterday afternoon at his law office here. It is currently reported that Mr. Danforth came from Upper Red Hook with important messages for Senator Hill from Wm. J. Bryan. When seen upon this subject Mr. Danforth was reticent and declined to be interviewed. He had a long conference with Senator Hill but refused to state the substance of the conversation. Senator Hill also refused to talk. It is reported that Mr. Danforth's friends are urging him to stand for the democratic nomination for governor by the Buffalo convention. Mr. Danforth states in positive terms that he is not a candidate for governor and that early in the canvass he had pledged himself to John B. Stanchfield, who comes from his section of the state. Mr. Danforth states that his entire judicial district, the sixth, will be solid for Stanchfield.

CUBAN FILIBUSTERS.

An Investigation Ordered at Philadelphia in the Laurada Case.

Philadelphia, Aug. 21.—An investigation has been ordered by the secretary of the treasury to find out why no effort was made by the customs officials to prevent the departure of the filibuster Laurada, which cleared this port on August 8 last, ostensibly for Jamacia, but in reality for Port Padre and Nuevitas, Cuba. Complaints, it seems, have been filed with the department of state by Spanish Minister Depuy de Lome, that the government officials were not only negligent, but winked at these violations of the neutrality laws. It is claimed that the Laurada loaded her cargo of war material in sight of the custom house at Wilmington, Del., and yet no attempt was made to stop her, and that twenty artillery officers were also taken aboard from eight small boats. The deputy collector at Lewes, Del., who allowed the vessel to pass to sea, will also be under fire. The investigators will begin at Lewes to-day.

CZAR TO VISIT ITALY.

To Attend the Wedding of the Prince of Naples and Princess Helene.

London, Aug. 21.—A dispatch to the Standard from Rome says that the czar has telegraphed a promise agreeing to witness the marriage of Victorio Emanuele, prince of Naples, eldest son and heir apparent of the king of Italy, and Princess Helene of Montenegro, third daughter of the reigning prince of Montenegro. The czar, on the occasion of this visit to Italy for the purpose of attending this princely wedding, will be accompanied by the czarina. Owing to the decision of the Russian monarch to visit Rome, it is believed in that city that Emperor William will visit King Humbert upon the same occasion, and that he, too, will attend the wedding.

THE METEOR TO STOP RACING.

Her Skipper Ordered to Lay Her Up and Pay Off the Crew.

London, Aug. 21.—Capt. Gomez, the skipper of Emperor William's yacht Meteor, through the collision of which with the Isolde the owner of the latter, Baron von Zedwitz, lost his life, has been ordered by his majesty to pay off the crew of the yacht and lay the boat up. There is scarcely any doubt that all the big cutters will stop racing for the season owing to the sad accident.

LABRADOR FISHERY A FAILURE.

Starvation Next Winter for Thousands of People Threatened.

St. Johns, N. F., Aug. 21.—The mail steamer from Labrador, just arrived here, reports that the Labrador fishery is a total failure. The steamer traversed the whole coast as far north as the Moravian settlements. The failure of the fishery virtually means starvation for thousands of fishermen next winter. The fishery along most of the Newfoundland coast has also proved a failure.

Porter's Canvass for Governor.

Hartford, Aug. 21.—Charles O. Thompson of Pomfret has sent to John Addison Porter, the candidate for governor, a paper signed by seventy-three republicans of the town, stating that, believing through misapprehension of the situation in Pomfret, as evidenced on the surface by the caucus recently held, great injustice might be done him as an individual as well as to his cause, they desire to declare themselves as firm believers in his good citizenship, as evidenced by his ten years of residence among them, and they hope that his canvass may be successful.

Watch Factory Shut Down.

Waltham, Mass., Aug. 21.—The American Watch factory shut down last night to remain closed until Sept. 1. The operatives are dismayed at the outlook, as they finished a month's shutdown only a few days ago, and since that time have been working but four days a week. Dulness of trade is assigned as the cause of the shut down.

Conger-Strong Contest.

Newark, N. J., Aug. 21.—The executive committee of the state republican committee has decided not to reopen the Conger-Strong contest in Middlesex county for a seat in the main body. John H. Conger is therefore accepted as the caucus-elected member over Theodore Strong, who repudiated the vote by which Conger was elected.

John Daly Released.

London, Aug. 21.—John Daly, the Irish political prisoner, was released from Portland prison yesterday afternoon.

LAST PROOFS READ

Major McKinley Completes His Letter of Acceptance.

CONTAINS SEVERAL THOUSAND WORDS

The Money Question Explicitly Covered and the Tariff Question Not in Any Way Neglected—Big Delegations of Callers.

Canton, O., Aug. 21.—Major McKinley has finished work on the last proof sheets of his letter of acceptance. The letter will contain several thousand words and will be very explicit on the money question, but the tariff will not in any way be neglected. Citizens of Ellwood and Newcastle, Pa., are to call upon Major McKinley to-morrow. This will be the largest delegation that has visited Canton. A dispatch received to-day says there will be between 1,500 and 1,800 in the party. A delegation of a thousand farmers from western Pennsylvania and Maryland is announced for the middle of September. Major McKinley had a talk yesterday afternoon with T. J. Morgan, who was commissioner of Indian affairs under the Harrison administration. Mr. Morgan is traveling a good deal and asserts that the republican prospects are improving. The usual number of telegrams from various sections of the country announcing the formation of McKinley clubs were received last evening.

NEW YORK'S DIRECT TAX.

Receipts Promise To Be Large and a Great Relief to Real Estate.

Albany, Aug. 21.—The indications now are that this will be the best year, in the matter of collecting indirect taxes, in the history of the state. State comptroller James A. Roberts has just balanced his tax books up to August 1, which includes ten months of the current fiscal year. The total collected from corporations up to August 1 this year was $1,488,112, as compared with $1,361,916 during the same months of 1895, and $1,143,049 in 1894, showing a gain in two years of $345,062. The number of corporations paying taxes Aug. 1, 1896, was 4,431, against 3,591 in the same month last year, and 2,806 in 1894, a gain of 1,625 taxable corporations in two years. The total collections from transfer and collateral inheritance taxes for the ten months ended Aug. 1 last was $1,640,302, and the total from the new excise tax is $3,497,817. Comptroller Roberts estimates that the total tax from corporations for the entire fiscal year ending Sept. 30 will reach $2,100,000; from the collateral inheritance and transfer tax, $2,200,000, and from the excise tax, $3,550,000. This will make a grand total of $7,850,000 that will be lifted from the shoulders of real estate this year through the medium of indirect taxation. The annual expenses of the state government aggregate nearly $20,000,000, and nearly $12,000,000 of this amount is raised under the annual tax levy.

THE CRUISER BROOKLYN.

Officially Pronounced To Be Up to All Requirements—Her Trial Trip.

Philadelphia, Aug. 21.—The new United States cruiser Brooklyn was inspected by the naval examining board yesterday. The inspectors went aboard of the vessel at Cramps' ship yard and spent the entire day in minutely examining every portion of the hull, guns, machinery, etc. They found everything to be up to the requirements and will submit a report to that effect to the secretary of the navy. The Brooklyn will start on her trial trip to-morrow. After leaving her berth at Cramps' ship yard, she will proceed to the Breakwater and from there will steam to the Massachusetts coast. On Wednesday she will begin her trial of speed and seaworthiness over the official course. In anticipation of the trial the navy department has issued orders to the board of inspectors and to officers to act as assistants, directing them to assemble in Boston. The board of inspectors will not go to Boston on the Brooklyn, but will go from Philadelphia by rail and meet her there.

Morton Will Not Run Again.

Albany, Aug. 21.—It has been gossiped about the capitol for some time that the republican state convention would eventually nominate the old ticket—Morton and Saxton. This talk recently became so strong that Gov. Morton has consulted with his friends regarding it, and has reiterated more strongly than ever that he will not stand for a renomination. He says that both his business and personal interests demand his attention, and especially is this so regarding his business, since the death of his former partner.

Anniversary of Bishop McMahon's Death.

Hartford, Aug. 21.—There will be a solemn pontifical requiem mass to-day at St. Joseph's cathedral for the repose of the soul of the late Bishop McMahon. It will be the third anniversary of his death. Bishop Tierney will celebrate the mass, assisted by a large number of priests.

Ex-Empress Eugenie's Will.

London, Aug. 21.—A dispatch to the Daily Mail from Paris says that it is stated that the will of ex-Empress Eugenie, drawn recently, favors her namesake, Eugenie, the daughter of the late Prince Henry of Battenberg and Princess Beatrice.

Hiscock for Supreme Court Justice.

Syracuse, N. Y., Aug. 21.—Justice Frank H. Hiscock was yesterday unanimously nominated for supreme court justice by the republican fifth judicial convention.

CYCLING COMMENT.

Miss Madge Barnes, of Grove street, has a new Rugby wheel.

The State fair at Trenton will offer bicycle races as an attraction on September 28th. Chairman Gideon of the national racing board will officiate as referee, and Arthur Zimmerman will will be the starter, while "Jonah" Wetmore, of Elizabeth, will assign the handicaps.

Probasco and then the two young men will go to Philadelphia in the fall where they will begin a three-years course of dentistry at the Universarity of Pennsylvania.

AROUND THE BASES.

The Plainfield colored baseball team played a game with the Cranford team on the Y. M. C. A. grounds in this city yesterday afternoon. The attendance was fair, but the receipts from the grandstand were small. The result of the game was 13 to 10 in favor of the Plainfield boys. Geo. Green and Oscar Nelson did excellent work as the battery for the Plainfield team.

The Elizabeth Athletic Club will make its first appearance in Plainfield on Saturday afternoon to compete with the Y. M. C. A. team. Owing to the defeat administered to them by the Y. M. C. A's at Elizabeth, July 18th, they have strengthened their team and hope to square matters. The game should prove to be a very interesting one and as both teams will be represented by their strongest men an exciting time is sure to be enjoyed by those witnessing the game. Play will be called at 3:30 sharp. Last Saturday the grand stand was too small to accommodate the number attending the game. To be assured of a seat come early and thus avoid the rush. Following will be the batting order of the Y. M.C.A.: Townley, 2b.; Dennis, c.; Major, ss.; McLaughlin, 1b.; Sansom, cf.; Schenck, lf.; Cory, 3b.; Symons, rf.; Burt, p.

AMONG THE STEPPERS.

On the track of the Gentlemen's Driving Park Association tomorrow afternoon there will be some spirited trotting contests. Among those who have entered their steeds are Messrs. Arkell, of Westfield, and Gwynette, of Fanwood. Charles Brower has also entered his stallion "Sergeant" against John Osborn's "St. Albans," and this race alone, it is thought, will attract a large attendance. Admission to the track and grand-stand is free, and no doubt a large crowd will attend.

WITH ROD AND GUN.

Walter, John and Norman Linbarger, of Somerset street, went fishing at the Bound Brook dam yesterday. If their string of fish was as long as their yarns it must have been immense.

Mr. and Mrs. William J. Bushley, of New York, are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. R. A Boyce, of Somerset street.

Mrs. L. M. Cooley and daughter, who have been visiting Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Boyce, have gone to Washington Heights for a few days.

F. C. Langhorne and family, of Putnam avenue, have returned from their summer outing spent at Phillipsburg, in the Provine of Quebec, Can.

The Cranford Carnival.

Everything bids fair for a beautiful evening at Cranford on Saturday. Farmer Dunn has given every assurance that the weather shall be clear. So that settles it, and besides Prof. Nathan Guttman and his cornet band will be on hand to astonish the natives with choice selections from both ancient and modern composers. The pyrotechnical display will be something superb, and will include squibs, roman candles, set pieces and sich.

There will also be boating on the beautiful Cranford river. A large delegation of Plainfield people will doubtless attend.

Gone to a Mining Camp.

Eugene A. Gross, of West Seventh street, left on Monday, August 10th, for Colorado, where he has gone to devolp a petrolum mine near Cripple Creek, on the estate of his father. Mr. Gross will be absent about two months.

MISCELLANEOUS ITEMS.

—Between 1850 and 1890, the mints of the world consumed 9,194 tons of gold and 81,235 tons of silver, the value being £1,227,000,000 of gold and £793,000,000 of silver.

—Submarine cables are usually imbedded in the slimy bottom of the ocean but at certain points they hang like wire bridges over deep submarine valleys, so that whales and other large innabitants of the ocean deep may become dangerous to the cable. Once in awhile it is the cable that becomes dangerous to the whales, as recently shown in an accident to the western Brazilian cable.

—The British medical trust that is conducting a crusade against American practitioners in London, recently brought suit against an American, Dr. Bridgewater, alleging that he had "unlawfully, willfully and falsely represented himself to be a doctor of medicine." As Dr. Bridgewater was shown to be the possessor of degrees from New York and Philadelphia medical colleges of international reputation the trust not only lost its suit, but had to pay cost to an aggregate of nearly $4,000.

—An experiment was recently made in Europe to determine what color in a soldier's uniform is the least conspicuous to an enemy. Of ten men two were dressed in light gray uniform, two in dark gray, two in green, two in dark blue and two in scarlet. All were then ordered to march off, while a group of officers remained watching them. The first to disappear in the landscape was the light gray, and next, surprising as it may seem, the scarlet. Then followed the dark gray, while the dark blue and green remained visible long after all the others had disappeared.

Leasing Silver Mines.

The system of leasing in vogue at Idaho Springs, Col., has reached a point where it has proved advantageous to both the owner and the lessee of a mine, and as a result there is a large number of properties being worked under this plan. The older workings of the Lamartine mine are on this basis. Within one year they cleared about $200,000, and since then the owners have taken out $3,000,000 worth of ore.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

LITTLE BABY CARROLL.

Known in San Francisco as the Human Phonograph.

Although But Four Years Old She Can Repeat Anything She Has Ever Heard, and Sings Long Songs Without a Break

Baby Ethel Carroll, of Oakland, Cal., is a human phonograph. Every word of a conversation—no matter how long—names, dates, figures and bits of oratory of all degrees of merit, songs and jokes spoken in her presence, seem to register themselves indelibly upon her brain, and by virtue of her remarkable memory she is able to recall them, word for word, even though it be weeks and months after. At her age—for she is only four years old—much that she hears no doubt is quite unintelligible to her as are the words of a phonograph to a wild beast. She simply repeats everything from memory, without knowing aught of the text of her words. At the Hotel Crellin, says the San Francisco Examiner, where she lives with her parents, she is the idol and wonder of all who know her, for she is as pretty as she is clever. The first time that the child showed her phenomenal trait was at the age of 11 months. At that time she was taken to see one of Hoyt's plays at the Macdonough theater. Upon returning to her home she surprised everyone by repeating word for word one of the popular songs. From that time until now little Ethel has been a regular playgoer.

Now, at the age of four, her memory has developed so remarkably that it is a common thing for her, after seeing a new play, to sing, without a single mistake or the least sign of hesitation, song after song, that she has never heard before. She can also repeat the lines of the play with wonderful correctness. The child has a retentive memory for names and dates. In spite of the fact that large numbers of people see her daily, drawn by curiosity, she never forgets the name of anyone who is introduced to her, and can tell even the exact day when she first met them, though it may be months after.

It is strange indeed to hear Ethel talk about questions of public interest that have been discussed within her hearing.

LITTLE BABY CARROLL.

Several months ago, while the Durrant case was the one absorbing topic of public interest, tiny Miss Ethel heard her mother read several of the lengthy newspaper reports. Since then the subject has not been mentioned until one day last week, when, for the purpose of testing her memory, the matter was recalled. She at once went over the entire subject, using language almost identical with that of the newspaper articles Her answers to questions often took the form of a quotation of entire sentences, and these she repeated perfectly after the lapse of so many months without, perhaps, understanding their meaning.

Recently her wonderful memory was put to a severe test at a concert recital in Oakland. After the performance she was asked if she remembered a certain recitation on the programme remarkable alike for its length and peculiar phrasing. She had never heard it before, but with a confident smile and a certain enchanting carelessness of manner, she recited the entire piece without a single break.

It will be interesting to note as this child grows older whether her memory broadens with age, or whether, as in the case of the famous Italian boy mathematician, it lapses altogether and leaves her more stupid than the veriest infant.

International Marriages.

According to London social authorities, the American girl has had her day in Great Britain. English girls have so profited by the stimulus afforded by American competition that they have developed an astonishing amount of social tact and brilliancy and can no longer be beaten on their own ground. The gloreies of the international marriage have been much prated of, and it will be a sad blow to the American debutantes to yield their aspirations to gilded British titles and poverty-stricken British estates. The British mamma, however, and the American papa will, it is hinted, be of one mind in approving the new order of things. A system that would keep English lords and American dollars where they individually belong would instantly commend itself.

Asbestos in Boot Soles.

It is proposed to use asbestos in the soles of boots. Asbestos wool, pressed by hydraulic force into thin sheets, water-proofed on one side, is to be inserted as the middle sole. Asbestos is a non-conductor of heat, and, in conjunction with a water-proofed material, will have the effect of counteracting the influence of heat, cold and moisture.

Female Whitecaps in Kentucky.

BUTTER IN PLASTER OF PARIS.

A New Method of Transportation Used in Australasia.

There seems to be no limit to the ingenuity bestowed upon the devising of means for accomplishing the transport of the perishable produce of distant climes to the English market. A new method, described in the Australasian, is that of packing butter in a box made of six sheets of ordinary glass, all the edges being covered over with gummed paper. The glass box is enveloped in a layer of plaster of Paris, a quarter of an inch thick, and this is covered with specially prepared paper. The plaster being a bad conductor of heat, the temperature inside the hermetically sealed receptacle remains constant, being unaffected by external changes. The cost of packing is about 1d. per pound. Butter packed in the way described at Melbourne has been sent across the sea to South Africa, and when the case was opened at Kimberley, 700 miles from Cape Town, the butter was found to be as sound as when it left the factory in Victoria. Cases are now made to hold as much as two cwt. of butter, and 40 hands, mostly boys and girls, are occupied in making the glass receptacles and covering them with plaster. The top, or lid, however, is put on by a simple mechanical arrangement, and is removed by the purchaser equally easily. A saving of 52 per cent. on freight and packing is claimed in comparison with the cost of frozen butter carried in the usual way.—Scientific American.

The Angel of the War.

The Cuban patriots met with a great loss in the death of their Joan of Arc. The soldiers of Gomez and Maceo called her "the angel of the war." Her name was Angela de la Guerra. She was as beautiful as she was brave. Around their campfires they speak of her in whispers now, and with tears. For in a lonely grave among the hills she loved so well, a grave dug with the machetes of her fellow soldiers, lies her fair young form, wrapped in the flag of freedom for which she fell, with 12 Spanish bullets in her bosom.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

FOUND TIED TO A TREE

SENSATIONAL EXPERIENCE OF TWO YOUNG WOMEN OF THIS CITY.

The Story is That They Visited New Brunswick With Two Strangers and on the Return Were Tied in the Woods.

Two young Plainfield women had an experience Sunday night that they will not soon forget, according to a well vouched for report from that city, says the Elizabeth Journal. The story is told by Harry Peddington, a young man who lives in New Market and works in Plainfield, to which place he goes daily in a buggy.

Peddington says he was driving to Plainfield early Monday morning, and when passing along a lonely road past some woods he heard a woman's voice calling for help. The voice came from the recesses of the woods, and so he alighted from his vehicle and investigated. After going some distance into the woods he came upon two young women. Their wrists were tied tightly together and both were lashed firmly to a tree. It had rained over night and their clothing was soaking wet. The rain, the cold, and the tight cord about their wrists and bodies were causing them to suffer greatly.

Peddington cut the cords and freed them from their unpleasant situation. The girls were nearly overcome with the exposure and pain, and acted slightly hysterical, but nevertheless they refused all further assistance and declined to give their names. All the information that Peddington could get from them was that they had flirted with two strangers, who had taken them in a carriage to New Brunswick, and on returning home, when in the deserted spot where they were found, the men had takem out of the carriage, lashed them to a tree and deserted them.

Peddington offered to carry the young women to Plainfield in his buggy, but they declined, saying that they didn't intend to ride with strangers again.

The identity of the young women has not been learned, and the police have no information about the matter.

A MAN HUNT IN SOMERSET.

Chris Lovering, Accused of Assault, Captured in the Mountains.

Chris Lovering, the Sourland Mountain desperado, who has been hunted through the mountains for a week by Farmer William Blowers and a posse of his neigborers, was captured on the road between Rock Mills and Weartsville last night by Constable George D. Totten. Lovering who is the most desperate of the many lawless characters known in the Sourland Mountain region, was released from the Somerset county jail recently, after serving a short term for an attempted assault upon a girl in the mountains.

Two weeks ago Mrs. Josephine Blowers, the wife of a farmer of the Sourland Mountain, was found lying unconscious in the woods a short distance from her home. There were indications that she had been assaulted. She said she was picking berries at a lonely spot in the woods when Lovering suddenly confronted her from behind a clump of bushes. He held a dirk knife high in the air and threatened to cut her heart out. She tried to scream but fell fainting to the ground.

Lovering was brought to Somerville and placed in the county jail.

TO HUSTLE IN THE FOURTH.

Republicans Fear Inroads Into Their West End Majority.

The Republican majority in Plainfield is very large, but they are preparing to do some active campaign work, especially in the West End, where they fear the other parties most.

A Fourth Ward McKinley and Hobart Club is already under way and will be organized shortly with the headquarters in the West End. The young men are to be rounded into line by a young men's club which William N. Runyon is engineering through. A Republican glee club to sing the campaign songs is the talk of the party leaders while several other campaign clubs are being discussed. No effort has yet been made toward organizing a campaign bicycle club but if the fight should grow at all hot here there will probably be one.

Singers Attention.

It is earnestly requested that all persons wishing to sing in the Christian Endeavor choir, will meet in the chapel of the First Presbyterian church on Tuesday evening next, August 25th, at 7:15 sharp, to practice music for the coming convention. The work will be greatly lessened if the members will attend promptly.

Yours in the work.

W. E. MacClymont

Chairman of music committe.

AN EVENING OF TALK.

Congratulations to Various Members of the A. O. U. W. Last Night.

At the regular meeting of Columbia Lodge, No. 58, of the A. O. U.W., held in Exempt Fireman's hall last evening, one candidate was initiated. After the usual routine of business a collation was served by caterer William J. Stephenson, in honor of the return home from Europe of Past Master Workman Henry Liefke, also to extend good wishes to Past Master Workman V. W. Nash, who is about to depart to St. Paul, to be gone a few weeks.

Past Grand Master Workman J. W. Diefendorf from Newark made the welcoming address to Brother Liefke, and in behalf of the lodge wished Brother Nash a pleasant trip and safe return. A speech was also made by Grand Master Workman E. H. Colyer, of the same city, in which he told of the rapid growth of the order throughout the State. G. W. Schoner, foreman of Memorial Lodge, No. 63, of Newark, followed with an address. After a few short addresses made by the members of the local lodge, the pleasant evening came to a close. The guests departed on the 11:28 train for Newark.

IMPLEMENTS OF TRADE GONE.

Plainfield Carpenters Lose Their Tools by Theft at Westfield.

L. E. Hart, of this city, is building a house on Chestnut street in Westfield. A number of carpenters from this city go down each day and are doing the work. It has been their custom every night when their work is done to gather their tools together and leave them in the house over night. Early Thursday morning thieves entered the house and stole all the tools belonging to these carpenters. When the men came to work they were surprised to find their tools had gone. Investigation showed that thieves had entered the building and carried of these tools, and the carpenters were obliged to return to Plainfield. Constable Marsh has the matter in charge and will make every effort to recover the stolen property.

A Wanderer in the Borough Sent on His Way to Westfield.

A young fellow who told a straightforward story and gave his name as Frank Johnson, was arrested in the borough last evening for begging a cup of coffee. He went to the house at Mercer and Rockview avenues and after leaving there was arrested by one of the borough squad. The man said he had been working in a drill shop near Reading, Pa., and he was later employed in a slate quarry there. He was simply on the way to visit his sister in Westfield, he said, and furthermore he was going on to Elizabeth. He carried one arm in a sling, the result of an accident to one of his hands. Judge Crosley promptly released the man and admonished him to leave town within fifteen minutes.

DUSKY SONS OF ITALY REVEL.

The Italian Colony is Not Lacking for Musical Amusement.

There is a small colony of Italians, who live at the corner of Grove street and Greenbrook road, who enjoy these summer evenings after the manner of their fellow-patriots, residents in the densely populated Italian quarters in New York. The soul inspiring (to them) strains of the accordion furnishes the accompaniment for the fantastic songs of the dusky revellers. The appreciative audience is not lacking, as the neighborhood is thickly settled. Applause and encores are frequently rendered and called for. These impromptu concerts come to an end long before midnight, and are not objected to by those living in the vicinity.

Shot at a Supposed Burglar.

At Fanwood early yesterday morning it was thought an effort was being made to break open and rob the Jersey Central Railroad station. A hatless man was seen running away from the station in the direction of Westfield. Several shots were fired at the man, but none of them took effect. Or, if they did, they didn't prove serious. The shooter was arrested and locked up, but as yet he has refused to give his right name.

Reported Attempted Robbery.

Burglars tried to enter the Howland residence on Rockview avenue, so the North Plainfield police say, last evening, but they got little, if anything, for their trouble. The intruders were evidenly frightened away. Marshal Hansen will investigate the case today.

—William Buckley has resigned his position with Newmen Brothers, his resignation to take effect tonight. On Tuesday he will start work with J. H. Howell, the North avenue grocer.

A LIVELY WAR OF WORDS

THE FREEMANS AND ELLIOTTS SETTLE A QUARREL IN COURT.

They all Took a Hand in it so the Judge Brought the Trial to an End by Fining Prisoners and Complainant.

The city court room was packed this morning, mostly with colored people, and they listened to one of the liveliest cases, as far as the language was concerned, that has been tried in that court for many a day.

The prisoner was Mrs. Ellen Elliott, of South Second street, and she was charged by Miss Seely Freeman, of the same street, with indecent language and disorderly conduct. Both were colored.

Sometime ago the two families, for they live next door to each other, had some trouble over a duck and the Freemans came out ahead. Since then, the Freemans claim, Mrs. Elliott and daughter have been doing their best to pick a quarrel.

Of course, the testimony of the two sides was exactly contradictory, but it seemed that both parties were somewhat to blame for the quarrel.

Mrs. Freeman, her husband and two daughters, Seely and Annie, were the witnesses against Mrs. Elliott, and they were represented in court by ex-Judge W. A. Coddington. According to their story, the entire Freeman family was of the saintly order, while the Elliotts were the very children of the foul fiend himself. For five minutes Annie Freeman kept up a string of oaths and abusive language, which she solemnly swore were the exact words of her neighbor. Mrs. Freeman and Seely Freeman gave a long list more and told how Mary Elliott had gone about the yard and street indecently exposed. They also claimed that Mrs. Elliott ran a "disorderly house" and that a number of men, both colored and white, frequented the place.

Mr. Freeman was also brought on the witness stand and turning to the Judge, he confidentially remarked "I'll tell you what, the old gentleman, he's all right but the other two"—here he paused to shake his head and sigh "they's real a bad lot." Then the Elliott party rallied their forces and took the stand. Mrs. Elliott laid all the blame, of course, on Mrs. Freeman. She said that the latter started the racket by throwing a pail of water on some children playing in Mrs. Elliott's yard. Her statement was substantiated by a stylish young colored man named John Waldron, who boards with her.

They delared that the bad language had been used only by the Freemans and that the latter had really repeated their own words when testifying as to the remarks of the Elliotts. Mary Elliott and Mr. Elliott testified substantially the same, while a white man, named Burns, probably came nearer the facts than the rest by stating that both parties used the bad language, but the Freemans usually started it.

By the time all the witnesses had told their little tale, 12 o'clock had arrived. The Judge listened patiently to all the testimony and then declared them all, prisoner, complainants and witnesses, guilty, and after a lecture on the necessity of keeping peace in that part of the city, he fined Mrs. Elliott and her daughter Mary, and Mrs. Freeman and her daughters, Seely and Annie, each $5.

The fines were paid amid much grumbling and dissatisfaction on the part of the interested parties. The other cases were adjourned to another day, as the Court wanted its dinner.

Smalley Not Guilty.

Jedediah Smalley, accompanied by his lawyer, ex-Councilman Walter L. Hetfield, appeared before City Judge DeMeza this morning to receive his decision in the case against Smalley for reckless driving. The Judge decided that Smalley was not guilty and therefore discharged him.

Another Proposed Trolley.

A trolley line is proposed between Elizabeth and Rahway. The Union and Middlesex Traction company, which lately completed a road to Boynton Beach, wants a connecting line to Elizabeth.

—Crane & Clark have just received seven cases of fall style hats and will offer some great bargains tonight, 120 West Front street.

—John L. Force is putting a system of electric lights in the basement of J. A. Smith & Bros. grocery store on West Front street.

If you have ever seen a little child in the agony of summer complaint, you can realize the danger of the trouble and appreciate the value of instantaneons relief always afforded by DeWitt's Colic & Cholera Cure. For dysentery and diarrœa it is a reliable remedy. We could not afford to recommend this as a cure unless it were a cure. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 142 West Front street.

NOTHING TO LIVE FOR.

SO THOUGHT A SOMERVILLE BOY WHEN HIS LOVE WAS REBUTTED.

On His Knees he Begged For Her Promise to Marry, and When She Refused he Tried to End His Life.

Frank Pendington, of Somerville, in the presence of his sweetheart, yesterday shot himself in the head with a revolver while on his knees begging or the renewal of their engagement.

Pendington and Miss Clara Beasley were to have been married in June, but at the former's request the wedding was postponed until the fall, although it occasioned a quarrel between them, during which Miss Beasley gave back his engagement ring and presents.

Miss Beasley has refused to entertain Pendington, although the latter has called at her home several times. Yesterday he called again, and sent a note to his former financee stating that he was about to leave the country and asking if she would give him a farewell.

This she consented to do, and while they were together Pendington begged for the renewal of their engagement, but was met with a refusal, whereupon he fell upon his knees and shot himself.

The wounded man was taken to his home in a carriage, where the wound was dressed, and when he was told that it was not fatal he declared that he would again make an attempt to end his life.

Ugly Customers.

In the memory of old citizens sharks have never been so plentiful as during the last few days in the waters of the Kills at Elizabethport, and boys have been warned by the police to keep from bathing, lest some of them might be attacked. "Bill" Levers, an old waterman, Sunday shot a shark swimming off the Central Railroad wharf. It sunk to the bottom before Levers could reach it. Sailing parties on the Kills have been badly frightened by the sudden appearance of the ugly creatures alongside of their boats.

Prospering on a Pacific Isle.

Dr. Willis A. Anderson, of this city, has just received a letter from his brother, Dr. Robert Anderson, who is practicing dentistry in Honolulu, where he has been for the past five years. Robert has made a great success of his business, and has invested in much real estate there. He was expecting to visit his old home in this city this coming fall, but his large practice and other business engagements will not allow him the time off.

To Attend the Reunion.

The eighteenth annual reunion of the Fourteenth New Jersey Volunteers will be held at Jamesburg, this State, on Thursday, September 10th. Among the members who will attend are the following from this city: Edward P. Thorn, William N. Pangborn, A. C. Townley, C. D. Pope, Wm. B. Ayers and Abram King These persons went from here to Elizabeth and joined Captain Harris' command at the breaking out of the war.

Celebrated Her Eleventh Birthday.

Miss Jennie Addis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Addis, of Orchard place, celebrated the eleventh anniversary of her birth yesterday afternoon from 4 to 6 o'clock. There were eleven girls of about the same age present, and they enjoyed the two hours in various pleasant ways. The birthday gifts were neat and appropriate. Mrs. Addis and Miss Street arranged the tables and looked to the interests of the guests.

Left Their Own Mother.

Tax Collector H. N. Spencer, of the borough, has a curiosity in the shape of a black cat, and coal-black at that, which has two kittens of the gray and mongrel breed. By mutual consent the kittens have left their own mother and are now being nurtured by a neighbor's cat. Both cat and kittens are congenial toward one another. They are quite a sight as seen posing in Mr. Spencer's store.

Afro-American Baptist Association.

The Afro-American Baptist Association of New Jersey will meet in the Union Baptist church at Montclair on Thursday, September 24. On the second day of convention Rev. Archie G. Young, of this city, will preach a sermon. Dominie Young is secretary of the association, and is making the preparations for the meeting. It met in this city last year.

A Salvation Camp Meeting.

The Salvation Army is planning to hold a camp meeting at Hyde's Park, corner of Belvidere and LaGrande avenue, beginning September 1st and lasting for two weeks.

NO BOROUGH COUNCIL MEETING.

Called at the Suggestion of Charles A. Reed, But Not a Quorum Present.

At a request of Borough Counsel Charles A. Reed, a special meeting of of the North Plainfield council was called for last evening at eight o'clock, the main object being to consider the Watchung avenue extension and opening into North Plainfield. But the only members who put in an appearance were Messrs Peck, Valliant and McLaughlin. Clerk Arnold was there with the borough records, ready for business. After waiting for an hour or so after the regular meeting time the three councilman went home without transacting any business for want of a quorum. A map of the proposed extension was produced, and carefully gone over in a committee meeting but no report was made.

ATTACKED BY DOGS.

Jacob Humes Has an Exciting Encounter on Cole's Hill.

Jacob Humes, of Scotch Plains, was walking home from Plainfield last Thursday evening about 7 o'clock when he met two very unwelcome visitors that made things lively for him for a few moments. His little encounter happened on Cole's hill. He was walking along the road when the two large dogs, belonging to Thomas Habell, sprang at him.

He defended himself as best he could with his arms, but one of the animals set its teeth in his arm before he could escape. His coat was badly torn.

Mr. Habell was very sorry when he heard of the attack and promptly settled with Mr. Humes.

Co-Operative Association Meeting.

A regular meeting of the Plainfield Co-operative Association was held in the new quarters, corner of Central avenue and Second street, last evening, when new committees were appointed. The advisory committee was made up of Robert Gow, James Bell and James Chamberlin. Messrs. J. S. Forster, Charles Belknap and H. C. Nomer were placed on the finance committee, and the committee on discounts is made up of Messrs. W. G. Gray, Henry VanMiddlesworth and Arthur Hallard. The society is in a good condition, financially and otherwise, and is destined to do much good in this vicinity, especially among the laboring classes.

Gone Back For a Nap.

Warrenville has gone back for another nap. The excitement over the wonderful oats-pig case of Stein vs Baldwin, on contract, which was to have been tried this morning before Justice Austin, has died down as the case has been adjourned three weeks. Assemblyman W. R. Codington, of this city, was counsel for the plaintiff while Baldwin was represented by City Judge George W. DeMeza, of this city.

Union Services.

The congregations of the First M. E. and Grace M. E. churches will hold union services for the remaining Sundays in August and the first two in September. In the morning at 11 o'clock in the First church and in the evening at 7:45 in Grace church. Union Epworth League services in Grace church at 7 p. m. Rev. Henry J. Johnston will conduct the services for the Sundays in August.

Fell by the Wayside.

One unfortunate was gathered in by the police in North Plainfield, last evening. He was found in Al. Smalley's corn patch not stealing, but looking for a quiet berth. This morning kind-hearted Justice Crosley imposed a $3 fine which was paid. The man is an inoffensive citizen, but he "falls by the wayside" occasionally and gets into the officers arms.

Death of Alfred Woolfe.

Alfred Woolfe, aged twenty-four years, son of Rev. Mr. Woolfe, who is greatly interested in the Westfield Fresh Air Camp for mothers and children, known as Camp Woolfe, died at the residence of his parents on Grove street Thursday morning. The funeral services will be held this afternoon.

No Service at Holy Cross.

The Church of the Holy Cross will be closed for two Sundays on account of putting down new carpet and making other improvements. The church will be opened on the first Sunday in September.

INTEREST GROWS APACE

ALL THE COUNTRY AROUND ANXIOUS TO SEE THE BICYCLE PARADE.

Plainfield Will Probably See a Crowd on Sept. 5th That Will Exceed in Numbers Any Ever Before Gathered Here.

With a clear day, the Daylight Bicycle Carnival on September 5th will be a great event for Plainfield.

It is not so surprising that people in this city should be so enthusiastic over the carnival, but it is quite remarkable the amount of interest that is being taken in it by out-of-town people. A member of the advertising committee that visited Oak Tree and vicinity to post up the large bills of the carnival, found great enthusiasm shown among the people of that district. They stated that the residents were going to turn out en masse on the occasion of the carnival. Like interest is shown from all the surrounding towns and Plainfield will see a crowd that will quite surprise her. It will be a holiday crowd, too, dressed in holiday attire, and with money to spend. It will be the event of the season for many village swains and their blushing friends and Plainfield storekeepers will reap the benefits.

Frank L. C. Martin went to Brooklyn last evening to confer with several military wheel organizations to induce them to come to this city and parade. The conference seemed very successful and Plainfield will have its eyes opened to some of the modern uses of the bicycle.

One great advantage of holding the parade in the afternoon will be that the decorations of the houses can be seen. It is to be hoped that the residents will decorate early in the morning and allow their decorations to remain up all day and evening as Plainfield will be crowded with visitors and the city should present as pretty an appearance as possible. The coasting contest in the morning of Carnival Day will attract many who will remain all day and part of the evening. It will be a great day for Plainfield.

A meeting of the general committee was to have been held last night but the members were not notified and it was decided to adjourn the meeting to Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock in the Board of Trade rooms.

Got In, But Got Nothing.

The Perrine house on Grant avenue was the scene of an attempted robbery one night recently. The family are away and a watchman sleeps in the house. One night this week he had a friend staying with him in the house over night, and during the night they were aroused by a noise in the cellar. Stealing cautiously down the stairs the men reached the cellar just in time to see a man going out through one of the windows, and by scaling the fence he escaped in the darkness. Patrolman Post was notified and he found the cellar window open, but the bird had flown. Little, if anything of value, was missing.

A Good Purchase.

Edward White has bought the best part of the dry goods stock of Garey Bros. of 303, 305, 407 Grand street, New York City. They carried a very fine assortment of high class goods and the stock was sold to close the estate. Mr. White bought the stock for fifty cents on the dollar and will put it on sale Monday morning. In his advertisement he tells of a few of the many good bargains to be had.

Narrowly Escaped Death.

Two of Mr. Trainor's children, of Cranford, narrowly escaped death yesterday while playing in the yard, an electric light wire having broke and one end of it falling in their midst. A valuable dog came in contact with the wire and was instantly killed, and the children came within a few inches of sharing the same fate. Mr. Trainor is in the Government employ in New York city.

First Union County Bryon Club.

The first Bryan and Sewall Club organized in this county was formed in Elizabeth Thursday night. Just thirty persons signed the membership roll. Ex-Assemblyman Timothy M. Kelly was elected president; William J. Lansley and George Miller, vice-presidents; Peter Woolsey, secretary, and Oliver Conlin, treasurer; Joseph Mannifield, sergeant-at-arms.

Many Are Away.

There are a great many Plainfielders away on their summer vacation and it was very apparent this morning in the club car "Plainfield," on the 8:27 train, when instead of every seat being filled, just five men made up the list of passengers in that car.

Washington's Farewell.

The Revolutionary Memorial Society of New Jersey is making arrangements for the celebration of the anniversary of Washington's Farewell Address, to be held at the Wallace House, Somerville, on September 19th.

BRYAN AT TIVOLI

Opening of the Democratic Campaign in the East To-day.

AN IMPORTANT SPEECH PROMISED

To Be Next in Interest, It Is Said, to the Madison Square Garden Address—Movements and Doings of the Democratic Nominee.

Upper Red Hook, N. Y., Aug. 22.—The Bryan and Sewall campaign will be opened in earnest this afternoon and evening at Tivoli, in this county, by Mr. Bryan. With the exception of his Madison square address the speech he will deliver, it is said, will be the most important of his utterances since his nomination. Mr. Bryan's visit to Maj. James W. Hinkley, chairman of the New York state democratic committee, will be made on Monday. As to the import of the meeting between Major Hinkley and himself, Mr. Bryan is non-communicative, but politicians hereabouts are attaching much importance to it. There is no doubt that Mr. Bryan and Mr. Hinkley will talk over the condition of affairs in the Empire state. That Mr. Bryan is confident that he will have the backing of the democratic leaders, is shown by his authorized statement with reference to Croker's endorsement of his candidacy, in which he said that he presumed nearly all the leaders would fall into line before the end of the campaign.

Rumor About Senator Hill.

It is likely that Mr. Bryan will spend Monday night at Winnisook lodge in the Catskills, where Major Hinkley is summering, and the two will have every opportunity to discuss the situation in detail. A rumor was brought here to-day that Senator Hill would attend the Bryan meeting at Albany Tuesday night, where the candidate will make a speech, but it could not be confirmed through Mr. Bryan or any other source. The fishing fever took possession of Mr. Bryan again yesterday, at least he said so. With Mr. and Mrs. Perrine, their daughter and some friends, Mr. and Mrs. Bryan drove out to Spring lake, a couple of miles from Upper Red Hook, to try their luck with the rod. Mr. and Mrs. Bryan rowed off to a secluded part of the lake, and while Mrs. Bryan fished her husband produced paper and pencil and devoted himself to writing. Neither he nor Mrs. Bryan would say what he was composing, but everybody knew it was his letter of acceptance.

Two Callers from New York City.

Mrs. Bryan caught a good sized pickerel and a two pound bass. That was too much for the candidate. He became so interested that he took a rod himself and managed to get a pickerel. He did no more writing and, after going ashore, made his first attempt at riding a bicycle, with disastrous results. The party reached Upper Red Hook at dark, tired and hungry. Mr. Bryan found congressman William Sulzer from New York city awaiting him. With Mr. Sulzer was Prof. Van Burr Denslow, who formerly occupied the chair of political economy at the Chicago university, and is now a writer on economic subjects. Mr. Sulzer and Prof. Denslow spent half an hour at Mr. Perrine's house with Mr. Bryan. Reticence was Mr. Sulzer's most marked characteristic when he came out. "I can't say a thing about it," said he; "I can't talk; you know if I could talk I would talk."

Bland Speaks at Laurel, Md.

Baltimore, Aug. 22.—Richard P. Bland was given a big reception at Laurel last evening, and the meeting which he subsequently addressed was largely attended. Mr. and Mrs. Bland arrived from Washington at 5 o'clock as the guest of Ernest P. Baldwin, auditor of the treasury. A public reception followed a dinner, and after that a torchlight procession was formed and marched through the streets of Laurel to Laurel grove, where a big crowd had preceded the marchers. President Baldwin of the Laurel democratic club called the meeting to order, and Mayor Phelps introduced Mr. Bland. He discussed unlimited coinage, eulogized Messrs. Bryan and Sewall and the Chicago platform, and admonished his hearers to beware of gold bug influences.

G. A. R. at Chautauqua.

Chautauqua, N. Y., Aug. 22.—Chautauqua's days are nearly ended for 1896, but the closing scenes are full of interest. The Chautauqua county veterans and G. A. R. held their sixteenth reunion and campfire here yesterday, and several hundred veterans were on the grounds. The annual campfire, around which the Chautauqua county veterans have gathered for many years, was lighted at 7:30 o'clock last evening on the platform of the amphitheatre. Speeches were made by Hon. Lewis Miller, president of the assembly; N. A. Flood, Hon. Wallace Bruce and Dr. H. H. Moore.

The acces of the empire is expressly forbidden to the Jewish emigrants."

Charges of Forgery Against Him.

Boston, Aug. 22.—Thomas J. Stuyvesant, formerly bookkeeper for Geo. Hoffmeier, plumber, Roxbury, charged with forging his employer's signature to two checks for small amounts, has been arrested. There are said to be three other small forgeries for which he is responsible.

PROF. ANDREE TO RETURN.

Too Late in the Season To Make His Proposed Balloon Trip to the Pole.

Christiania, Aug. 22.—Prof. A. S. Andree, according to reports received here, told Captain Svendrup of the Fram, who visited the aeronaut, that it was now too late to make the proposed ascent, and that he would probably soon return to Spitzbergen and make another effort to reach the North Pole in a balloon next April. The Fram, it is said, still has provisions capable of sustaining her crew in the Arctic regions for three years. Fearing that the crush of ice would wreck the ship, Captain Svendrup and the crew were obliged after Dr. Nansen left to remove all the sledges, provisions, ammunition and light furniture.

CHICKASAW NATION BURNING.

Fierce Forest Fires Sweeping Everything Before Them—Immigrants Hemmed In.

Denison, Tex., Aug. 22.—Destructive prairie fires are raging in the Chickasaw Nation. Dwellings, fences and hay have been destroyed, aggregating a loss of thousands of dollars. The creek bottoms are lined with hundreds of immigrant wagons that dare not travel owing to the scourge of fire. There is no water, and the fire has full sway on Rock creek. The fire got into the timber, burning a number of houses, and in some instances cattle were suffocated by the smoke. The fire has also got into the mountain timber, and it is sweeping everything before it.

THE TROUBLE IN CRETE.

Renewal of the Massacres Feared—Insurrection May Be Speedily Settled.

London, Aug. 22.—A dispatch to the Daily News from Athens says that there is reason to fear a renewal of the massacres in Crete by the insurgents. Turkish garrisons scattered throughout Crete are being withdrawn to the large towns. On the other hand, the French consul at Canea, it is announced, has been assured by the officials that the Cretan question will be speedily settled by the foreign ambassadors at Constantinople.

AN AMERICAN SHIP LOST.

The Governor Goodwin Wrecked on Princess Island.

Batavia, Island of Java, Aug. 22.—The American ship Governor Goodwin, Captain Oakes, which sailed from New York on April 29 for Chefoo, and which was spoken in latitude 2 north and longitude 29 west, has been lost on Princess island. All hands were saved. She was built in 1877 at East Boston and was of 1,414 tons. She hailed from Boston and was owned by Foster & Pray.

In Collision with an Iceberg.

Philadelphia, Aug. 22.—The British steamship Linda, Captain Horseley, from Hamburg, had a narrow escape from total destruction on the night of August 13, having, while proceeding in a dense fog through ice obstructions with engines going slow, grazed a tremendous iceberg. The obstruction was not seen by the careful lookout that was being kept until it was within a few feet of the bow, and its bearing were then just one point on the starboard bow. The engines were reversed and the wheel hove over hard to starboard just in time to prevent the vessel from hitting it head on. A glancing blow was struck, but no damage was done.

Cockran To Speak Twice a Week.

New York, Aug. 22.—It was announced at the headquars of the democratic honest money league that the Hon. W. Bourke Cockran had advised Major Byrne, president of the league, that he will speak twice a week during the campaign, wherever the league makes engagements for him. Requests for Mr. Cockran's services have already come from Maine, Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland, Illinois and Indiana. Mr. Cockran will preside at the Indianapolis convention.

Nansen Meets the Fram.

Tromsoe, Norway, Aug. 23.—Dr. Nansen, the Arctic explorer, has arrived here on board Sir George Baden-Powell's auxiliary steam yacht Otaria. He was given a very enthusiastic reception. The Fram was in port, and as soon as the Otaria arrived Captain Svendrup and the members of the crew boarded the yacht, where an affecting meeting took place between Dr. Nansen and his comrades. Mutual congratulations were exchanged upon their escape from the perils of the Arctic seas.

Death of Father Flately.

MOON PHOTOGRAPHS.

Pictures Just Taken at the Paris Observatory Excel All Others.

The moon has been brought closer to us. That is an announcement which science will appreciate. For it is to the moon, as the nearest of all planets, that science must first look for increase of our knowledge of stellar geology and geography. Therefore, every successive step by which science lessens the apparent space between the moon and our eyesight is an invaluable step in advance.

The instrument which has accomplished this last result is the great jointed equatorial at the observatory of Paris recently constructed under the auspices of M. Loewy, the vice president. For two years he and his assistants have been carrying on the most persevering studies, the minutest researches as to the physical conditions of the moon's surface. He has found the optical qualities of the instrument superior to anything heretofore known. Hence the map which he has just published is the most important recent addition to astronomical science. He has been able to bring out the lunar surface with so minute a precision and so clearly defined that it would be impossible to construct a more intelligent or faithful map of our own globe. In the atlas thus obtained the eminent vice president of the observatory has found a means of outlining for us the geological history of our satellite.

It is so difficult to unite the favorable atmospheric conditions to graduate exactly the duration of the exposure according to the brilliancy of the different zones that Messrs. Loewy, Puisseaux and Le Marvan have only been able to take half a dozen perfect photographs as the result of two years' incessant vigilance.

One of the photographs represents the moon in her first quarter. This gives a good idea of the general physiognomy of the moon's surface. In the region of the south pole the greater amplitude and depth of the circles, those circular gullies so characteristic of the moon and of which the earth boasts no equivalent, and the spots corresponding to those great depressions which are called seas, while towards the north pole are easily discernible mountainous groups which exactly correspond to our chains of mountains.

On one enlargement it is easy to study the peculiar diversities of the lunar surface, for the region which this map represents contains three of the most beautiful and regular of the lunar craters—Walter, Aliancensis and Werner.

The largest, Walter, measures 150 kilometers in diameter. In the group, rises an important mountainous group, running from north to south. The central mountain of the group is plainly visible in this photograph. The Aliancensisian range dominates the interior plain of the circle at a height of 3,560 meters in the northwest and 5,000 in the western region.

Below Aliancensis is Werner, 72 kilometers in diameter, and almost perfect in its regularity. The most elevated points are in the northwest and are more than 5,000 meters in height. Only one part of the central mountain is visible, on account of the shadows. Near this mountain is a large white spot which stands out, by reason of its greater brilliancy, more prominently than the spots all around it and occupies almost 50 square kilometers. No other part of the moon presents so brilliant a light. This whole region is lighter than any other parts shown. The presence of these spots is very instructive to the student. They cannot be explained as being the effects of light, nor are they due to the color of the soil, nor to glaciers. M. Loewy has decided that they are deposits of ashes and lava, projected by the innumerable small craters existing in this region, and he concludes that it has once been the center of powerful volcanic action.

Although it does not seem to him clearly enough demonstrated, M. Loewy consents to admit with the greater number of astronomers that the moon possesses no liquid surface to-day, and that her atmosphere is null or hardly perceptible. But his concessions stop here. To his mind the moon formerly had water and air, which were the necessary conditions for the volcanic eruptions found there, and consequently, though contrary to the theory generally adopted, volcanic eruptions were one of the constitutional factors of the moon.—St. Louis Republic.

Oliver Wendell Holmes said:

"If all drugs were thrown into the sea it would be better for men and worse for the fishes."

Yet for the only drug which is at once a medicine and a food we are indebted to one of those same fishes. Dr. Holmes was hasty. "No known drug," says a high English authority (Dr. A. E. Bridger), "except cod-liver oil, has power to generate any force within the human body. The stimulants and tonics waste force and create weakness." Thus we see why of Cod-liver Oil with hypophosphites has, for twenty years, been the chief dependence of physicians in all bronchial and lung diseases. Scott's Emulsion acts strictly on the lines of modern medical practice. It does not stimulate, like alcohol and quinine, or stupefy, like opium and the bromides. It nourishes, strengthens and upbuilds the system. Being a true food (digested and absorbed in cases wherein other food only clogs the digestive organs, ferments, and poisons the blood), Scott's Emulsion arrests wasting, forms new flesh and tissue, revives the natural appetite and cures disease, conferring more life. For consumption, bronchitis, depleted blood, scrofula, etc., it excels all other remedies or forms of treatment.

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

MOTHERS, Do You Know that Paregoric, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, many so-called Soothing Syrups, and most remedies for children are composed of opium or morphine?

Do You Know that opium and morphine are stupefying narcotic poisons?

Do You Know that in most countries druggists are not permitted to sell narcotics without labeling them poisons?

Do You Know that you should not permit any medicine to be given your child unless you or your physician know of what it is composed?

Do You Know that Castoria is a purely vegetable preparation, and that a list of its ingredients is published with every bottle?

Do You Know that Castoria is the prescription of the famous Dr. Samuel Pitcher. That it has been in use for nearly thirty years, and that more Castoria is now sold than of all other remedies for children combined?

Do You Know that the Patent Office Department of the United States, and of other countries, have issued exclusive right to Dr. Pitcher and his assigns to use the word "Castoria" and its formula, and that to imitate them is a state prison offense?

Do You Know that one of the reasons for granting this government protection was because Castoria had been proven to be absolutely harmless?

Do You Know that 35 average doses of Castoria are furnished for 35 cents, or one cent a dose?

Do You Know that when possessed of this perfect preparation, your children may be kept well, and that you may have unbroken rest?

Well, these things are worth knowing. They are facts.

THE USEFUL PETTICOAT.

Alpaca and Sateen Are the Materials Now Used.

Nowadays we seem to hear more of petticoats than in the days gone by. Both black and white moreen petticoats in the godet shape are worn to keep the dress skirt flaring, but I cannot advise them on account of the weight. Black, white and colored silk petticoats are of plain, striped and figured taffeta; they are usually three yards wide, though the extreme ones are over four, well ruffled, and finished with a velveteen binding. Alpaca and sateen are also made up with ruffles of the same or of silk, but sateen is apt to cling so unpleasantly that the moired percaline is preferred. This is sufficiently stiff to stand out, is light in weight and has the soft rustle of silk. The transparent summer gowns are usually worn over a petticoat and corset-cover of white or colored percaline or sateen, as taffeta silk is too expensive for general wear. French dressmakers make princesse slips of white for such purposes. The cheapest petticoats are those of striped seersucker. Luster wool of a wiry nature makes a serviceable petticoat for traveling and outing, as it shakes the dust and will not crush. White muslin and cambric petticoats are only worn in the house with thin summer gowns, so they are very dainty with their trimmings of lace and embroidery. Some of these are five yards wide and ruffled to the knees, with the faintest bit of starch, as a white skirt must not rustle, though one of silk or percaline should have this faint sound. — Ladies' Home Journal.

Combining Colors.

Black combines well with almost all colors, except those which are so lacking in brightness as to be too nearly like it. Black and pale pink, blue, yellow, green, red, lavender and even rather dark shades of blue, clear brown and green are excellent combinations. Brown combines well with yellow, gold and bronze if it is the shade of brown which has brightness. It is effective also with black and with certain tones of green. A chocolate-and-milk brown combines well with old rose and the dull shades of pink. Very dark green is effective when brightened by linings of narrow trimming of pale blue. A medium shade of green unites with old pink. Brownish green looks well with bronze and copper color. Dark blue may be brightened by lines of bright, rich red, by lines of old rose or of clear yellow. Blue of the "electric" and "cadet" varieties is best combined with black or with figured silks in which the same shade predominates. — Youth's Companion.

A TREE'S GROWTH.

Process of Development Scientifically Analyzed.

If you wish to become thoroughly acquainted with the tree's mode of growth, the first thing of importance is to keep in view the functions of the "cambian layer"—soft, spongy substance lying between the wood proper and the bark. The pulpy, porous substance is really a tissue of minute cells, visible only under the microscope and apparently all of the same size and shape in any given variety of tree. The cells lying nearest the bark contribute a permanent accretion to the tree's covering, while those which lie nearest the wood slowly change from "cambian layer" to the real tree fiber. In this way the bark becomes thicker each year, and at the same time the tree itself is permanently enlarged.

In the spring and early summer the bark on all trees is to a certain extent loosened to permit of the cambian layer exercising its functions, and when this wholly ceases the result is manifest in the "ring" of new wood and the thin layer of newly-formed inner bark. The ends of each limb have also grown perceptibly—from two inches to two feet, according to the species — but knots, marks, forks, etc., on tree trunks are no higher from the ground than they were the year before. If some one tells you that a limb which is now but three or four feet from the ground "will be high enough to walk under when the tree gets its growth" put him or her down as a person knowing but little of the natural history of trees.—St. Louis Republic.

Orange Chartreuse.

Make a quart of calf's foot jelly, flavor it with orange and keep in a liquid state; peel four oranges and divide into small sections, being careful not to break the inner skin; place the oranges in a flat dish and sprinkle powdered sugar over them and set aside for two hours. Pour about a teacupful of the jelly into a plain mold; let set and arrange upon it a layer of oranges; pour over these some jelly; allow it to set; then some more oranges, and so on till the mold is quite full. When quite firm turn out on a dish and surround the base with a border of whipped cream and sprinkle the latter with chopped pistachios.—Good Housekeeping.

—According to the statistics of the department of agriculture wheat land in Kansas rents at $2.10 per acre.

FLIES LIKE THE WIND.

An Electric Car Operated by the Third Rail System.

Eighty miles an hour over the tangent between Nantasket Beach and Hull, in Massachusetts, was the sensation to which Col. Heft, chief electrician of the Consolidated road, treated his company of investigators the other afternoon, and this in an open car in the teeth of a 15-knot breeze. At one time it seemed as if the sharp blasts of wind were about to tear every inch of clothing from the body.

This exhibition of the possibilities of the subtle current in its application to rail transportation was incidental to a very satisfactory test of what is known as the third-rail system, which has been installed on the line of the South Shore branch of the Old Colony division between Nantasket Junction and East Weymouth, a distance of 3½ miles. For the first time in the history of electrical development a surface car was propelled by means of this new device.

In determining upon the extension of the company's electrical system to East Weymouth the overhead trolley system was abandoned and the third-rail method of contact adopted as the most readily adaptable to ordinary railroad requirements.

The third rail is of a peculiar shape, the end view resembling a flattened A. It is laid midway between the two service rails of each track. Each section of the third rail is 30 feet long and weighs 93 pounds to the yard. It is supported by three ash blocks to each section, the blocks being let into the ties. Before use the blocks are boiled in vacuum pans with a tar compound, and thus each pore is filled with insulating and preservative material. The insulation is almost perfect. The continuity of the third-rail circuit is secured by attaching each end of one rail to that of the next by means of two heavy copper bands. The line between Nantasket Junction and Weymouth is absolutely distinct, electrically, from that between the first-named station and Pemberton. It is fed by its own feeders and provided with its own automatic safety appliances, which, in case of carelessness or accident to the third-rail section, enter into action and cut all electricity from it, rendering it nothing more than a peculiarly laid stretch of track.

The electricity is taken from the third rail by two sliding shoes hung loosely from the car, one suspended between the axles of each truck, immediately under the kingpin, by two links, which allow it to slide easily over the top of the third rail and make perfect contact with it all the time. The current is brought to the motors through the controllers and circuit breakers and returns to the track rails by the wheels. The continuity of the return circuit is secured by using a short, thick bond of copper cable to join together the ends of each pair of track rails, the end of the bond being fastened into the flange of the rail. The distance between each of the two shoes on the cars is 42 feet. No third rail being laid at the crossings, the circuit is continued between the broken ends by means of lead-covered cables. At the crossings less than 30 feet wide one of the shoes is always in contact; at wider ones the impetus of the moving car brings the shoes into contact again before the car can come to rest.

A good idea of the advantage of electricity as a motive power compared with steam may be gathered from the fact that the two locomotives burn each four tons of coal per day, while no more than four tons per day burned in the power house serves to generate sufficient power to operate the whole seven miles of line between Pemberton and Nantasket Junction by electricity.

It was on the return to Pemberton that Col. Heft showed the possibilities of the current, and those who rode with him will never forget their experience of 80 miles an hour in an open car.—Hartford Times.

A Unique Fence.

Years ago, when Thomas Thacher built his great Colonial house in Roxbury, Mass., it was one of the grandest houses in town. Mr. Thacher thought it would be a fine idea to have a continual fox hunt on his grounds, and he conceived the idea of having the fence running up over the terrace in front of the conservatory represent the chase. One of the men in the foundry followed out his suggestion, and the result was the most unique fence in the world. The fence is of iron, painted in natural colors, and consists of low running vines and branches which just brush the backs of seven hunters racing for dear life up the hill. The dogs are about five feet apart. The last dog is still a little distance from the fox, which has looked back for a moment to see how near his enemies are.—Chicago Chronicle.

THE NATION'S GUEST

Plans for Entertainment of Li Hung Chang Announced.

DETACHMENT OF CAVALY TO MEET HIM.

Will Be Received by the President at the Residence of Ex-Secretary Whitney in New York—Other Arrangements.

New York, Aug. 22.—The following programme respecting the visit of the Chinese viceroy, Li Hung Chang, has just been announced by Secretary of War Lamont: Earl Li Hung Chang, special ambassador from the Emperor of China, will arrive in New York by the steamship St. Louis on Friday, Aug. 28. Maj.-Gen. Thomas H. Ruger, United States army, commanding the department of the east, who has been designated by the president to act as his representative, will meet him on his arrival and escort him with a detachment of the Sixth regiment, United States cavalry, to the Waldorf hotel, where he will remain during his stay in New York as the guest of the nation. The state department will be represented by W. W. Rockhill, first assistant secretary of state. Gen. Ruger will attend the viceroy during his sojourn in this country and be in charge of all the arrangements pertaining to his visit. The president of the United States, who is to be in the city as the guest of ex-secretary of the navy William C. Whitney, will receive the special ambassador at Mr. Whitney's residence on the day following his arrival, the secretary of state, the secretary of the treasury, the secretary of war and possibly other members of the cabinet being present.

To Visit the East Only.

On Sunday a visit will be made to Gen. Grant's tomb at Riverside. Monday will be spent in a trip to the military academy at West Point by the U. S. S. Dolphin, and a sail under the Brooklyn bridge and up the East river. On Tuesday the party will be entertained at lunch by representative business men of New York, and later in the day an opportunity will be given Chinese residents of the city to meet the earl by arrangement with the Chinese consul. Wednesday will be occupied by a visit to Brooklyn on the invitation of the mayor of that city, and in the evening the viceroy will be tendered a review by the seventh regiment in its armory. On Thursday the party will go by the Pennsylvania railroad to Philadelphia, where suitable entertainment will be provided, and Friday and Saturday will be spent at Washington, and Sunday at Niagara falls, where the viceroy will be met by representatives of the Canadian government, who will escort him to Vancouver, from which port he will sail for home.

Li Hung Chang Sails.

Southampton, Aug. 22.—The American line steamship St. Louis, which sailed for New York to-day, took an exceptional list of passengers. In addition to Li Hung Chang, who is described on the passenger list as "ambassador, senior guardian of the heir-apparent, prime minister of state and earl of the first rank, with the title of Suy," Mr. and Mrs. Augustin Daly, Col. and Mrs. Eaton, Daniel Frohman and General Manager Pugh of the Pennsylvania railroad.

Continuous Mail Collecting.

Washington, Aug. 22.—A scheme for continuous mail collecting in cities will be put in operation in this city soon by Second Assistant Postmaster-General Neilson. A wagon specially constructed for the purpose is now being built at Hartford, Conn. It will be large enough to accommodate a carrier, independent of the assistant, who will do the driving and take the mail from the street boxes. This wagon will contain several apartments for "throwing" the mail.

The Spanish Budget.

Madrid, Aug. 22.—The senate has adopted the extraordinary budget as recommended by Gen. Azcirraga, minister of war, Admiral Beranger, minister of marine, and Senor A. Bosch, minister of public works. The liberal deputies declare that this is of the nature of a surprise vote and that they will therefore work with increasing energy and activity for the defeat of the government's money-raising proposition in the chamber of deputies.

Raines Law Receipts.

Albany, Aug. 22.—The amount of money collected under the Raines liquor law, according to returns from all counties up to August 15, is $10,180,895.50. Of this amount New York city has contributed $4,905,189.92; Kings county, $2,124,504.41, and Erie county, $835,977.71. It is confidently expected by Commissioner Lyman that more than $11,000,000 will be collected during the fiscal year the law is in operation.

Favor Baxter for Governor.

Elmira, N. Y., Aug. 22.—At the republican caucuses in Chemung county delegates were elected favorable to the candidacy of Col. Archie E. Baxter for governor. They are all for the state organization. The congressional delegates to be chosen at the Horseheads convention to-day will favor the nomination of William R. Compton of Horseheads for member of congress.

California Fruit in London.

London, Aug. 22.—Another consignment of California fruit, consisting of 4,280 half-cases, was sold yesterday. The prices were poor, owing to the fact that the fruit was too ripe, making the difference of 1s. a case. The pears averaged 3s. 3d. to 5s. 6d., the plums 5s. 3d. to 5s. 9d., and the peaches 4s. 6d. to 7s.

WEATHER INDICATIONS.

(Furnished by Weather Observer Neagle.)

For Tonight and Sunday Light Showers Followed by Clearing Weather Sunday; Stationary Temperature.

At 2 o'Clock Leggett's Thermometer Registered 75 Degrees.

This has been a season of weather extremes.

Mr. Platt still rules the Republican oost in New York.

Mr. Bryan is still human. Yesterday he caught a fish and took a tumble off a bicycle.

Li Hung Chang must be somewhat of a Beau Brummel. He carries some 300 and odd pieces of baggage.

The call for the Democratic State convention has been issued. The date is Wednesday, September 9th, and the place Taylor's Opera House in Trenton.

The astounding assertion is made that there is more gold in the sacred vessels, medals, chans, etc., preserved at the vatican than in the circulation of the whole of Europe.

The Daily Press can authoritatively state that James E. Martine is not a candidate for any office in the gift of the people at the approaching election. His activity in the present campaign is not prompted by any desire for political recognition; it is a matter of advocating principles which he believes to be right.

The consolidation of the Bell Telephone Company and Western Union Telegraph Company would make one of the most powerful combines in the country, before which small competition would stand still less of a chance for existence than they do now, and even now the conditions are not of a rosy hue for the small fry.

A TRAMP RAID.

Hobos Caught in Westfield Go to the County Jail.

A tramp raid Thursday night in the Ripley barn, near Westfield, led by Captain C. M. Hawkins, resulted in the capture of three men. As the men were being marched along the road in front of the Ripley homestead one of them named Murphy made a dash for liberty. Captain Hawkins gave chase and ordered the man to halt, to which he paid no heed. Then the Captain fired his revolver in the air, but Murphy only ran faster. The Captain did not fire again, but made a spurt and caught his man. They grappled and fell, with the Captain on top. Just as help reached him, Murphy struck the officer a powerful blow in the pit of the stomach that nearly caused him to collapse, but he held on until Murphy was safely ironed. Yesterday morning Murphy was sentenced by Judge Collins, of Westfield, to three months in the county jail The other two men, owing to their good behavior during the fight with Murphy, were allowed to go after being cautioned not to be caught in the township again.

Another of our neighbors had been sick for about a week and had tried different remedies for diarrhœa but kept getting worse. I sent him this same remedy. Only four doses of it were required to cure him. He says he owes his recovery to this wonderful remedy.— Mrs. Mary Sibley, Sidney, Mich. For sale by T. S. Armstrong, Druggist.

BABIES FEEL THE HEAT.

HOT DAYS AND NIGHTS WEED OUT THE SICKLY ONES.

Cholera Infantum Does Most Deadly Work in August—Trained Nurses Say Only Absolute Safety is in Lactated Food.

Wherever no especial precaution is taken in feeding children, hot weather is just as sure to multply the deaths of infants as the infants are to be born.

Babies and young children feel the disastrous effect of high temperature much more than others

Half the deaths in August are those of children under 5 years. Every summer more than a third of all who die are infants.

Where a failing off in th nourishing qualities of baby's earliest food is suspected, lactated food is the most perfect substitute for the healthy mother's milk. Physicians when called in cases of severe bowel affections, which come on so suddenly and so commonly prove fatal, put the baby without delay on a diet of this splendid nutriment, lactated food. It fully nourishes the child, yet does not irritate the intestinal tract that has been disturbed by hot weather, nor overturn the sick stomach. Weak, pining and fretful babies are quieted by lactated food. They take it eagerly and gain steadily in weight and size, without interruption because of hot weather.

Parents are apt to wait from day to day hoping for improvement in the condition of their child. It is this unwise delay that so often costs the child's life.

At the first indication that baby is not taking sufficient food for rapid growth, or when the child shows signs of weakness, its skin continually wet with prespiration, its lips and cheeks pale and its eyes heavy, it is imperative that the little one should be better nourished. Lactated food at once improves the appeiite and makes sure that the child's digestion is supplying strength and the means for steady growth. Babies grow big and strong on lactated food. Close observation of countless weaning babies, and of others not thriving because they cannot be induced to eat, or because their food does not nourish them, led to the preparation of lactated food.

The thousands of happy parents who write to the manufacturers of lactaced food that their babies thrive and keep well constantly after beginning to take the food regularly—these thousands are but a small number compared with the many who recommend it personally to their friends and neighbors. Mr. Walter B. Hall, of Lowell, Mass., sending a picture of himself, wife and child, says pointedly: "Our baby has always been fed on lactated food, and it has always agreed with him.

Practice physicians prescribe lactated food to be kept always on hand and used at once on the first indication of looseness or loss of strength or if baby is evidently not thriving on its present diet. Lactated food is the infant food physicians use in their own families.

THEATRICAL.

Scott Marble spun the thread of "The Cotton Spinner," Rick & Maeder wound it on the spools, and it goes on sale to the public as a reliable brand of cotton, wherewith the sons and daughters of toil can patch up the humdrum brown garments of their life, with the golden threads of love's romance, and the silver skeins of comedy's laughter. Come and see "The Cotton Spinner," it will ask you to solve no abstruse problems, and vex not your brains with the mathematics of existence. It will simply give you a human love story, with the heart of the universe throbbing through it, bordered alike with smiles and tears. It will put you more in humor with your own plain robes of life's reality, after you have embroidered them for an evening with the happy and heart touched threads of life s romance at Music Hall, Thursday evening, August 27.

THE WANDERING GOURD.

Wandering gourd! Where dost thou race
At such an unheard-of pace?
Do you look for brighter fields
Or for land that richness yields?
Stay thy run, there is no land
Brighter than the reddening sand
Of thy Jersey garden.

Many a waif has run to waste
That pined a foreign land to taste:
Must I nip that wayward bud,
That threatens to forsake the mud
Of its native, pleasant home,
And on broader fields to roam
Than its Jersey garden?

A youth untaught has often strayed
In paths of danger, undismayed,
Without a guiding hand: his way
Is dark and lone, he must not stray
Beyond our ken, beyond his home:
Forbid it, vagrant gourd, my own,
Stay in your Jersey garden.

J. C. Stanley, of North Carolina, left yesterday for his home after a very pleasant visit with S. B. Wheeler and A. I. Smalley, of North Plainfield. Mr. Stanley has been visiting each of these gentlemen for a week, and Thursday night a farewell reception was given in his honor at Mr. Wheeler's residence on Mountain avenue.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—The Catholics of Roselle are to have a new church, to be erected at the corner of Third avenue and Walnut street. The edifice will cost $9,000.

—Hedden & Sons, the Newark contractors, have laid off thirty-five men employed on the new tube works at Garwood, and a large majority of them are Plainfield carpenters and joiners.

—Richard A. Boyce, proprietor of the Maple avenue brick yards, began today to carry brick from his yard which are to be used in the construction of the Monroe Avenue chapel extension.

—Rolla Crews was not acting on the strict q. t. on Somerset street late last evening and Borough Marshal Wilson cared for him. This morning $3 fine was the sentence pronounced by the borough magistrate.

—Edward Love's place has more to do with wall-paper than any other place in the State. In the one building are carried on the designing, print cutting, wholesaleing, retailing and decorating in all its branches.

—Notices have been sent out for a special meeting of the Exempt Firemen's Association, to be held in the parlors at fire headquarters Monday evening. Business of great importance, especially to the members, is to come up for consideration.

—The next meeting of the Borough Council will be held on the first Friday in September. A special meeting may be called sooner, but this is quite unlikely, the councilmen say, inasmuch as the Watchung avenue extension is about the only matter of importance to be considered now.

Over $20 has been raised for John Case, whose barn was destroyed by fire last Sunday night. The money is to buy a few necessary articles.

The Horseman's Protective Association of Piscataway township will hold their annual picnic next Thursday on William Randolph's farm at Randolphville.

At the last meeting of the Borough Council a discussion arose concerning thew fire wells. It seems that the well driver who took the contract claims there is no profit in the job for him, and so hesitates about doing the work. Whether the Council will get the work done by the contract, or will go out of the borough for it, is not known yet.

NEW MARKET.

SCOTCH PLAINS.

The Republican primary will be held here Monday evening at Excelsior Hall. Two delegates to the State Convention will be elected.

The Check Was N. G.

Some stranger, who has thus far refused to give his name, went to a boarding house on West Second street a few days ago, boarded for a time and proffered a check for $20 in payment for board. He was given his change and yesterday he went away. The check was presented at one of the banks for payment, where it was pronounced worthless.

Ramsey Blair, of East Second street, spent a few days this week at his home, but has returned to Ocean Grove, where he and his family are spending the summer.

Mrs. R. Stern and Miss Mary Stern, of Easton, Max Stern, of Canton, O., and Miss Therresa Goodman, of Pittston, Pa., are visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Schwed, of Westervelt avenue.

A PLEASANT EVENT

Closing Banquet of the American Bar Association.

NEARLY 300 LEGAL LIGHTS PRESENT

Chauncey Depew Presided and Speeches Were Made by Lord Russell, Sir Frank Lockwood, President Woolworth and Others.

Saratoga, N. Y., Aug. 22.—The social side of the annual convention of the American Bar association found a most auspicious close in the nineteenth annual banquet held last evening in the ball room of the Grand Union hotel and which was attended by 260 members of the legal fraternity. From 7 until 8 o'clock a reception was held in the reception room of the hotel where Lord Russell of Killowen, lord chief justice of England, Sir Frank Lockwood and Montague Crackanthorpe received the guests of the evening. At 8 o'clock Lord Russell and Hon. Chauncey M. Depew of New York, under the leadership of Francis Rawle of Philadelphia, treasurer of the bar association, proceeded to the ball room of the hotel where the banquet was served. At the guests' table, which was upon a platform slightly raised above the main floor at the end of the room, were seated Chauncey M. Depew, who presided; at his right sat Lord Russell and at his left United States supreme court judge Rufus Peckham and president of the Bar association James M. Woolworth of Omaha, Moorfield Storey of Boston, J. C. Carter of New York, Judge Cox of Syracuse, Judge Shipman of Hartford, Conn.; Sir Frank Lockwood and Montague Crackanthorpe of London, Wm. Allen Butler of New York, Cortland Parker of Newark and Judge Bartlett and Bourke Cockran of New York city.

Lord Russell Introduced.

At the close of the five-course dinner, which was over at 9 o'clock, Mr. Depew in a few well-chosen words introduced Lord Russell as the guest of the evening, and his lordship in a brief address proved that he was equally as well at home as an after-dinner speaker as upon the bench. The toast "The Bar Association" was responded to by president James M. Woolworth of Omaha in an able manner. Sir Frank Lockwood of England, the peer of after-dinner speakers of that country, was then introduced, and in an address which abounded with wit and humor captivated the guests. His toast was confined principally to the English bar, and most ably did the distinguished jurist respond to it. Moorfield Storey of Boston then spoke as the retiring president. To James M. Becker of Philadelphia was accorded the honor of speaking for the "Junior Bar," and the selection proved to have been an admirable one. J. C. Carter of New York city followed and spoke at some length, touching lightly upon his association with Lord Russell in the Behring sea matter. The last speaker of the evening was Bourke Cockran. Following the dinner Lady Russell, Lady Lockwood, Mrs. G. S. Batcheller, Mrs. Moorfield Storey and Mrs. John Foster were admitted to the banquet hall to enjoy the speeches.

Officers Elected.

The American Bar association at its closing session elected the following officers: President, James M. Woolworth, Omaha; secretary, John Hinkley, Baltimore; treasurer, Francis Rawle, Philadelphia; executive committee, Alfred Hemenway, Boston; Charles Claflin, St. Louis; William W. How, New Orleans. The association also elected a vice-president for every state in the union and members composing local councils in each state.

Were Subjected to Indignities.

London, Aug. 22.—T. P. O'Connor's Sun prints a column sensational account of the conditions of John Daly, the Irish political prisoner who has been released from Portland prison. It says: "Without forestalling what Daly will eventually divulge relative to his treatment, it is certain that Daly will be able to prove that the Irish dynamiters have been subjected to indignities and punishments that the vilest criminals in her majesty's prisons have escaped."

Col. Crofton's Case.

Chicago, Aug. 22.—A morning paper says: "The decision of the army returning board, so far as can be learned, seems to be in favor of Col. Crofton. It is tacitly admitted that he will be permitted to remain in the army, but no one about army headquarters in the Pullman building will say so plainly or consent to discuss the case."

War Correspondents' Memorial.

Gapland, Md., Aug. 22.—The army correspondents' memorial, erected in Crampton's gap on the Antietam battlefield, will be dedicated on Oct. 16. Papers will be read by S. Cadwallader, Edmund C. Stedman, Junius Henri Browne, Judge James Seney of Virginia, George Alfred Townsend, and others.

Navy Yard Accident Inquiry.

Washington, Aug. 22.—Secretary McAdoo of the navy department will defer final action on the findings of court of inquiry that investigated the causes of the accident to the Brooklyn dry dock, pending the receipt of further information on the subject.

M. E. Ingalls for President.

Cincinnati, Aug. 22.—The Times-Star announces that there is a movement to press M. E. Ingalls, president of the Big Four and Chesapeake & Ohio railways for the nomination of the national democratic party for president.

GOSSIP OF DAME FASHION

Fads and Fancies for the Fair Daughters of Eve.

What the Summer Girl Should Wear—Fashions for the Coming Fall—Two Types of Gowns—New Styles in Sleeves.

[COPYRIGHT, 1896.]

The popularity of flowers is on the wane. As the summer sun dries the blossoms that grow in the sands of the south, so the blossoms of our hats seem to have shriveled up, for it is only too true that those which look so well in the cool days of spring quickly fade and droop under the summer heat.

Many of the flowers remain, however, and a favorite hat for the summer girl is a large white leghorn, massed with American Beauty roses and pink ribbon.

A hat whose length and width seem to be reversed is a broad-brimmed leghorn, turned up sharply in the back, like a Napoleonic hat. The top is swathed with green tulle, and over each side hang vivid green paradise plumes.

Feathers and silk trimmings of all kinds will be fashionable. One hat is completely trimmed with cream white taffeta silk, accordeon plaited and tied in a huge bow at the center of the crown.

A charming design from London has a broad brim, turning up slightly at each side. A series of ribbon loops about the crown give the broad effect so essential to an up-to-date hat, while a stiff aigrette and ostrich plumes give it height.

With all the fluffs and furbelows of the present season, the tailor-made girl misses her native gowning. It is in the pique costumes, however, that she finds consolation. They are now trimmed with military braid and buttons, and have all the severity affected by that type of girl.

A pique gown having some of the softness of the season is made with large velvet sleeves, green in color. It also has a loose velvet belt and a front of soft green chiffon.

The skirt is full and adorned with frogs, while the bodice shows a similar decoration. A large white hat, with green plumes, gives an exceedingly smart effect.

As an offset to this gown is one of dainty organdie, made with three deep tucks about the bottom of the skirt. These tucks, by the way, are the very latest thing. Hand in hand with them are triple cordings, which adorn skirts about four inches up, and are fastened in a waving line.

To return to our muttons: This organdie gown has a plain yoke of yellow silk mull, with two flounces of the same on each shoulder, giving an extra fullness to the sleeve. A fall of lace is below, and partly conceals the plaited blouse.

Velvet is introduced in belt, sleeves and stock, for without that material about it would the costume be incomplete (at least so say our English cousins); for these gowns are now being worn by two of London's brightest gems.

It is the old story over again. Not a bastite, but the edict has fallen. No more does the empire succeed the reign of the Louis. No more is the hour glass waist fashionable. Jackets will be seen less and less, and finally disappear. Skirts now have lace flounces, bodices round waist, with tight-fitting sleeves, and short-waisted effects will prevail.

Of course, it will take some time to effect so radical a change, but surely are long waists going out.

Narrow belts are not now the latest. Into their domain has crept the loose velvet Empire belt, and before autumn is fairly here they will extend from armpit to waistline. Not below that, however, for under no circumstances will the long waist be countenanced.

But there is not much hint of this in the gowns worn at present. Here is a gown of to-day, whose vagaries might well be copied by the summer girl for her campaign.

A skirt of ample proportions; a sheer material, pale green in color. Beneath the shimmer of golden silk, and below a flounce of lace, creamy and soft, two tabs of the material—one each side the back—are edged with lace and fall stiffly to the flounce below.

TWO TYPES OF GOWNS.

A bodice with corsage of golden brown silk, and tight-fitting lower sleeves of the same; huge velvet puffs on the upper arm, of a shade in which the golden brown and green are combined; a yoke of pale green, crossbarred with gold embroidery.

Little cares its owner about coming modes. She is content in the present, knowing well that she has one of the prettiest gowns of the season.

Dame Fashion has turned her back squarely on all but the very Four Hundred. By none other could the new sleeves be worn, for how could a woman so much as put on her hat with her hand inclosed in a case of silk, softly lined with lace and tied with ribbon. Yet, with the fall, the new sleeve will be popular. It will be puffed above the elbow, skintight below, and bulging out at the wrist to make room for the hand and a fall of lace.

FASHION'S NEW SLEEVE.

A jacket which combines the Louis and Empire modes is of white silk, striped broadly with heliotrope. It opens in front with narrow revers, and reveals a soft front of green crepe de chine. The heliotrope velvet belt is gathered softly about the waist, but is hardly so broad as that which we may expect.

And the sleeves! Nothing can describe them but the word "smart." At the very top a large puff, made as short as possible; a few inches of tight-fitting sleeve and a smaller puff of the white silk just above the elbow; then discarding altogether the jacket material, a tiny puff of white silk, dotted with maidenhair fern, a tight-fitting lower sleeve, and a hand bell overflowing with lace until my lady might safely wear nothing but finger gloves, finishes this wonderfully designed arm covering.

THEATER MISERY IN VIENNA.

What a Parliamentary Commission About Women Workers Has Learned.

Austria has a parliamentary commission, which was appointed early last winter, to investigate the condition of women workers in the empire. This commission has turned up a vast amount of hidden Vienna life, to the horror of humane inhabitants of the imperial city. It has learned, for instance, that young women in the feather industry usually have to be content with $1.50 to $2 each week, although the most skillful ones mount after years of practice into a $3 class; that the hours of work are 12 to 16 a day, and that coffee with dark bread is the unvarying menu at all meals, year in and year out. Similar conditions were found in 20 or more other industries which are largely in the hands of women. As women in Austria's industrial life are not expected to obtain much more than a bare living, these revelations have not excited a remarkable amount of comment, but the information given the commissioners regarding women on the stage, who heretofore have passed in Vienna for well-fed and well-clad persons, has caused a little sensation and no end of newspaper writing.

Chorus girls, actresses and theater directors were brought before the commission. They all said the rush to the stage had been overdone by Austrian women in recent years. Vienna had more than 40 schools of acting and operatic singing, which were crowded with girl students. The pressure of young actresses and singers was so great that at 30 the working actresses and singers were regarded as too old for much more use, and were relegated to obscure parts, or put off the stage. In the last two years 20 or 30 such actresses had become beggars. A few of them had died on the country roads along which they had been begging for food.

The young girl graduate of a Vienna school of acting, the witnesses told the commission, begins work at a first-class theater for $25 a month, and in many cases must provide her own costumes. A chorus girl, if in the best luck, gets $24 a month; that is the maximum. Many chorus girls receive but $5 each a month, and those who receive $15 each a month are supposed to be doing well. In the Court opera the chorus girl at the beginning of her career has a salary of $12.50 a month. Her salary is increased with each succeeding year of service until after 15 years in the chorus she gets the royal and imperial sum of $30 a month. In the Theater An der Wien the chorus girl's pay is from $5 to $22.50 a month; in the Carl theater, from $10 to $22.50; in the Josephstadt theater, from $2.50 to $22.50; in the German People's theater, from $175 to $300 a year. One young woman who had worked three years at the conservatory before going on the stage told the commission she had been lucky enough to get a place in a chorus at a salary of $5 a week. Another young woman, who had studied with musical professors of high reputation for six years, confessed that she had been unable to do better than $5 a month.

One director told of ten girls in his chorus who received no salaries whatever and must provide their own toilets. The best paid of his chorus girls received $15 a month.

The commissioners were anxious to find out how all these young women of the stage were kept from starvation. The answers to questions on this point were varied. Some of the girls did fancy work at home; others plain sewing. The vast majority, however, were obliged to look out for what the Viennese call "cavaliers."—N. Y. Sun.

Naked Savages to Go Bicycling.

The naked savages of the South Pacific islands are to taste the delights of cycling. Oscar Pomare, prince of the island of Bora-Bora (one of the largest of the Society group), having been educated in Europe and learned to cycle himself, is returning with a dozen machines, which he intends to introduce among the aristocracy of Bora-Bora, to whom he will set the fashion as a wheelman. Here is an idea for the unenterprising British trader. If the nigger will not buy our cotton goods and blankets as much as before, and looks askance upon our offers of cheap Bibles and hymn books, perhaps he will buy our machines? If the subject races of mankind were once bitten with the cycling craze, what tons upon tons of ivory and ship loads of oil and fiber might be obtained in exchange for a few pneumatics! It is, perhaps, unnecessary to say that Prince Pomare is not taking English machines out with him. His wheels are of the Amerian make—St. James' Budget.

Delicate Dress Goods.

Some gowns are so dainty in the weave, so delicate in tint, that they seem to soil by being looked at—one or two wearings making them unpresentable, NOT USELESS. We make a specialty of cleaning fine fabrics, the more delicate the material, the better the results. Sometimes an accident will ruin a gown, without injuring the texture. We dye them then, sometimes we get a prettier effect than the original color. Fine goods stand redyeing. The finer the material the better the new color. We charge so little for cleaning or dyeing, that even if you are in doubt as to the result, it's worth while to experiment. Want a new evening gown for a dollar or two? Laundry drivers will receive your work.

A GIGANTIC DEAL.

Reported That the Western Union Has Gobbled Up the Bell Telephone.

Boston, Aug. 22.—The Boston Commercial Bulletin will say to-day regarding Western Union and Bell Telephone: "We understand upon the best authority that the Western Union Telegraph company controls at the present moment the American Bell Telephone company. The importance of such control will at once appear to every one who appreciates how the two have come into competition during recent years. The Western Union dividends had become threatened through the competition of the Bell company, and of the Postal Telegraph company, but it has long been a fully arranged plan for the Western Union company to secure control of the telephone company. The two together can probably make it very warm for the Postal Telegraph company or the final outcome of a combination of all three. J. Pierpont Morgan has been the largest purchaser of Bell Telephone stock at auction here, but the manner of purchase has been very cleverly concealed. Western Union stock has ruled weak on the New York Stock exchange during the past few days, but this weakness is thought to be part of the programme of those conducting this gigantic deal. The combination of these two concerns will mean an almost impregnable monopoly of both the telegraph and telephone business in the same hands."

FLOODS IN COLORADO.

Railroad Tracks Washed Away and Dams Broken.

Denver, Aug. 22.—A great amount of rain has fallen in Colorado the past three days, causing heavy floods in various localities. The principal damage has been railroad washouts, which have been quickly repaired and trains are running regularly on all lines. A flood came down Cherry creek through this city last night, but very little damage was done. At Sunset, Boulder county, a flood in Four-Mile creek washed away the town hall and part of a store. The placer mines are ruined for the season. The dams clear down to Boulder are washed away, and the county road destroyed. Without warning the almost dry creek-bed became a raging torrent. A wave at least six feet in height with a huge mass of trees, stumps and wreckage of all kinds, was the forerunner of what was coming. No loss of life is reported.

SATOLLI'S SUCCESSOR.

Shortly after his consecration the archbishop will proceed to the United States where he will succeed Cardinal Satolli as papal delegate. The ceremony of consecration will be performed by Cardinal Rampolla, papal secretary of state.

VISITORS CONTINUE TO ARRIVE

The Republican County Committee Approves a Statement Refuting the Truthfulness of Dispatches Sent Out by Silver Advocates.

Canton, O., Aug. 22.—A dispatch is being widely circulated in the western, central and southern states which contains an alleged letter from Canton purporting to have been written in answer to some one who asks if it is true that Canton democrats have formed a large Bryan silver club which contains many republican members. This dispatch, which has been given wide circulation, has caused more than two hundred letters to be sent to the republican committee inquiring if the statements in the letter are true. Some of these statements have come to Major McKinley. Last night one of the leading republicans of the county, Hiram Dell, made a statement which is officially approved and endorsed by the county committee, Mr. Doll says: "The silver club in Canton is composed of populists and democrats, and the leading democrats are not in it. The silver club at its organization was only claimed to have a membership of 200 or 250, upon the statements of its officials to the press associations. When it is remembered that Stark county has a population of nearly 100,000 and this city nearly 40,000, the magnitude of the club does not appear very great, comparatively speaking. A sound money, non-partisan railroad club in this city, composed largely of democrats as well as republicans signed 300 members the night of organization. The same night the McKinley marching club was organized with 1,000 members. A poll of the precinct that Major McKinley has lived in since his return from Columbus, which has always been a democratic precinct, out of 340 votes polled, shows McKinley 190 and Bryan 150, a republican gain over combined Bryan vote, including populists and democrats, of 74 in a single precinct."

Major McKinley's Busy Day.

Major McKinley put in a day of solid work yesterday. He looked over some of the revised proof sheets of his letter of acceptance and spent several hours in work upon speeches which he is to make to-day and Monday. Among Major McKinley's callers last evening was Maj. John B. Hayes of Meadville. One of the most interesting visitors Major McKinley has had for a long time is M. A. Meindors of New York city, who called last evening and made an eloquent and pathetic address on behalf of the Poles of the United States. He said his fellow countrymen were too poor to send a delegation to call upon Major McKinley and had empowered him to assure the republican candidate that the naturalized Poles in this country would cast their ballots for him.

SPEAKERS ASSIGNED.

Progress of the Work at Republican Headquarters at New York.

New York, Aug. 22.—Among the callers on Chairman Hanna at republican headquarters yesterday afternoon was Maj. J. Henry Gould, chairman of the Massachusetts republican state league. Major Gould spoke confidently of republican successes in New England. Gen. Clayton announced the following additional assignments: Senator John M. Thurston of Nebraska will speak in Burlington, Vt., August 25, and in Middlebury, August 27. He then goes to Syracuse for September 3, returning to New York for September 5. On September 7 he will speak in Baltimore. Hon. O. V. Tousley of Minnesota will go to Maine for one week beginning September 7, filling the engagements of Hon. William Alden Smith, who finds he will be unable to go to Maine at that time. Gen. Cyrus Bussey of Washington, ex-assistant secretary of the interior, will speak in Montpelier, Vt., August 27 and in Middlebury, August 28.

A Notorious Burglar.

New York, Aug. 22.—The man who lies wounded in the Long Island hospital in Brooklyn, and who is believed to be one of the men engaged in the postoffice burglary at Bedford Station, N. Y., has been identified by Detective Sergeant McCauley of this city as John Gilmore, alias Clare, alias George Price, one of the most notorious burglars in the country. He is a professional postoffice burglar, and Captain O'Brien is satisfied he is one of the men shot by young Adams.

SPORTS

SATURDAY, Aug. 21. Sun rises 5:17 a. m., sets 6:48 p. m. Lanterns must be lighted between 7:48 p. m. and 4:17 a. m.

Cyclists desiring to join the League of American Wheelmen will be furnished with application blanks and necessary information by addressing the Cycling Department of the Daily Press.

CYCLING COMMENT.

The Victor Wheelmen will hold an important meeting Monday evening to arrange details for the club's 25-mile road race Thursday, September 3d.

It would be well if the police could find a way of interfering to prevent the use on bicycles of bells similar in tone to those on the ambulance and city fire department apparatus. The scorcher class has got hold of them in large quantity. They make a needless din in the streets, increase the nervousness of timid riders, and will soon destroy the efficiency of the warning in its legitimate place.

It is interesting to note that cycling sometimes has the effect of thinning the obese and fattening the thin, and this may be partly explained by Murchinson's observations that excessive leanness, as well as excessive corpulence, is often caused by inaction of the liver, and the stimulus of regular exercise, setting the functions of that organ right, causing the disappearance of what was only a symptom.

A good piece of advice was noticed in some publication the other day: "Keep as far to the right of a road as you can get, if you want to or else go slow. The quick riders generally know enough to pass on the left and usually ride on that side. But when you discern a 'wobbler' ahead of you, let all other rules go except to keep as far from the machine of erratic movements as you can get in passing. Whatever you do, do not remain directly behind such a rider."

AROUND THE BASES.

Carty's nine was beaten by a score of 26 to 18 by Pruden's nine yesterday. The batting features of the game were the heavy hitting of F. McIntyre and E. Sutton. Harry Hook did excellent field work and made many double plays. Curly McLeron was pitching for Pruden's nine and but few of the opponents could get onto his curves. P. Ross was scorer and H. Mollison umpire.

The baseball nine of the Plainfield Athletic Club will play the Dunellen team this afternoon if the rain stops in time. On August 29th a game has been scheduled with the Bound Brook Athletic Club. On Sept. 5th, probably the last game of the season for the P. A. C. team, they meet the Y. M. C. A. nine of this city on the latter's field. As the P. A. C. have won nine games and lost only two, the game is likely to be a good one and attract a large crowd. It will be the first meeting of these rival teams.

WITH ROD AND GUN.

Phillip and George Macintyre, of the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company, returned late Thursday evening from their fishing trip to Prince's Bay. They had about thirty-five porgies and some bluefish, but the weakfish wouldn't bite.

AMONG THE STEPPERS.

Hudson County Sound-money Democrats Will Make a Vigorous Campaign.

Otto Crouse and Dr. Leonard J. Gordon, Hudson county members of the Provisional State Committee of the Sound-money Democrats of New Jersey, sent out a statement yesterday that it will be impossible for want of time to hold the proposed mass meeting in Jersey City before the date fixed for the State Convention. They say in their statement:

"A fight for honest money and for the preservation of the Democratic party and its principles is to be carried on in Hudson county and throughout the State during the present campaign. A Provisional State Committee has been formed, subject to change at the State Convention to be held in Trenton on Wednesday, the 26th inst. At that time also delegates to the National Convention in Indianapolis on September 2d, will be chosen. Owing to the shortness of time it is impossible to hold a sound-money mass meeting before the date of the Convention. A meeting of the sound-money Democrats of Hudson county will be held at Taylor's Hotel, Jersey City, on Monday next, August 24th, at 8 p. m., for the purpose of conference, the selection of delegates, and for the consideration of other matters looking toward permanent organization and a vigorous campaign."

EARTH'S GIANT VALLEY.

Fierce Natives Indulge in Strange and Disgusting Customs.

The greatest valley in the world, according to Dr. J. W. Gregory, an English explorer, is the Great Rift Valley, which is an immense depression or trough which runs through eastern Africa 4,000 miles "from the Lebanons almost to the cape." "The Great Rift Valley" is the title of Dr. Gregory's book, which has just appeared in London, which is the newest, most comprehensive and important of the works that have appeared on this region.

One of the most fascinating portions of this record of travel is that relating to the Masai, the most ferocious of the African races. You never can be sure of your Masai, even when you have spat upon him and he upon you. That is how they swear eternal friendship. Dr. Gregory says—the harder one spits the more the other feels flattered. How it is done and what the Masai equivalent for handshaking is the traveler explains in this wise:

"The chief came up, and for the first time held out a 'knobkerry' cut from a rhinoceros horn for me to shake. I, of course, shook it, glad of this expression of friendliness, though quite aware that if it stopped at this it meant nothing. But as I walked down the slope from the camp after the men he came up again, and this time not only held out his knobkerry, but as I shook one end he shook the other. After walking a few yards he repeated this more vigorously. Then at last he held out his hand; we shook hands, at first coldly, and then more cordially. Finally, after we had walked a couple of hundred yards, he repeated the process and the chief spat upon me, a salutation which I returned with perhaps unnecessary vigor. I had been warned that whenever Masai retire from a conference without spitting the spit of peace squalls may be expected. I was, therefore, much relieved when the friendly rite had been performed."

But all this meant nothing, for that very night a band of Masai warriors, led by this same chief, came crawling snakily through the grass, bent upon massacring the camp. But the traveler was ready for them and they crawled back, leaving several of their dead upon the field.

Dr. Gregory's botanical and zoological observations are full of interest. He seems to have solved one of the problems that have vexed African explorers for a long time: Why there should be in some places vast heaps of bones of animals all mixed together. Some writers have attributed this to the action of a deluge, but Dr. Gregory says the bones are the remains of animals that in season of drought have fought around the water holes for their last drop.—N. Y. Journal.

HOW GUNPOWDER IS MADE

The Part That Each of the Three Ingredients Plays.

Gunpowder then steadily developed as mechanical skill constructed better and better weapons in which to use it, until to-day it has reached a perfection of manufacture for various purposes which allows its effects to be foretold in any weapon, even to the time it takes a grain to burn, and to the distance it will drive a shot.

Roger Bacon's gunpowder was made of saltpeter, sulphur and charcoal. Saltpeter is chemically called niter, and is a natural product found bedded in the earth in different parts of the world, chiefly in India and China. Sulphur, too, is found in a natural state in many volcanic countries, like Sicily, while, as is well known, charcoal is made from wood or woody substances by heating them almost to a burning heat in an airtight vessel, thus driving off everything in them but carbon.

Saltpeter, sulphur and charcoal are still the only ingredients of the gunpowder in common use, although a new gunpowder made of different materials is undergoing successful experiment. A mixture of saltpeter and charcoal alone would form an explosive, and sulphur is added chiefly to make it plastic, or capable of being pressed into cakes and shapes. All three ingredients have to be purified by the most careful chemical skill before they are combined. Then an exact proportion of each has to be measured out according to the kind of powder to be made.

For the gunpowder generally used you would find in every 100 pounds, if you could separate the ingredients, 75 pounds of saltpeter, 15 pounds of charcoal and ten pounds of sulphur; but it would be almost impossible to separate the ingredients, for they are not merely mixed together as you might mix pepper and salt, but they are ground and rolled and stirred and pressed together by special machines until they are almost sufficiently united to form a single new substance.

This mixing process is called "trituration," and the powder is thus made into the form of big cakes, called press cake, and then broken up, and screened into grains of special sizes, or ground to the fine powder used for shotguns and revolvers. The large-grained powders are still further stirred together until the grains become highly glazed, and these are called cannon powders. A lighted match may be held to a grain of cannon powder and it will be found almost impossible to set it on fire, but once ignited it flashes off very suddenly and violently.—Lieut. John M. Ellicott in St. Nicholas.

Young Seals Afraid of the Water.

Young seals do not know how to swim. They have to become gradually accustomed to the water, either by entering it to paddle about themselves, or by being carried into it in their mother's jaws. They have great fear of the waves that break into foam, and as soon as they see one approaching take to flight in terror, and do not turn round until they have ascended to a very high place above the sea.—St. Louis Republic.

An Example.

"You will kindly give us an example of the general law of averages, Mr. Peabody," said the professor of mathematics, after his lecture on the doctrine of chances.

"I'm—why—there's the speed of the telegraph and the lack of it in the messenger who delivers it," said Peabody, in a vague, hesitating way.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Dressy puffed sleeves for afternoon as well as evening wear reach only just below the elbow, where they are finished either with a twist and bow of black velvet ribbon or a deep frill of lace, reaching nearly to the wrist. Sleeves of transparent material are lined with tarleton to keep them in place. When black velvet ribbon is used at the neck, belt and wrists, black suede gloves are worn with the toilette.—St. Louis Republic.

WHERE THE ACTORS TROD

A PROSPEROUS SEASON OF MUSIC HALL IS ANTICIPATED.

The House Has Been Thoroughly Cleaned and the Best Seats Will Be Sold For 75 Cents—Good Attractions Booked.

When the doors of Music Hall are thrown open to the theatrical public next Thursday evening to witness the first production of the 'Cotton Spinner," the house will exemplify, in a way, that axiom which reads "A thing of beauty and a joy forever." "A thing of beauty" because water, brushes and muscle have transformed the house, from pit to dome, into a temple of cleanliness; "a joy forever" because the new management are here to make a success, and to accomplish that, will present meritorious performances at popular prices with all the little details of the business cared for in a manner that their mature experience in the profession will prompt.

Messrs. Ball and Willey have taken charge of Music Hall with the intention of making it a continuous success to the end of the season. Their first step towards this was to give the house a thorough overhauling. Every nook and corner of the building has been washed and scrubbed, and yesterday when a Press reporter visited the auditorium not a dingy or sombre-hued spot met the eye.

The most important decision on their part, however, was the one to lower the scale of prices. It has been generally conceded in seasons past by those connected with the hall that one dollar for the best seats was more than the average Plainfielder would pay, and in many cases if they couldn't have the best they stayed away entirely. This disadvantage which former managers have labored under has been obviated as much as possible by Messrs. Ball and Willey, who have made the best seats seventy-five cents and the gallery seats twenty-five cents.

The class of attractions which have been booked for the season is such as will appeal to the local theatregoer. The seats will be sold at the box office, regular hours for the purchase being maintained.

MRS. NINGER DIGS UP $6,000.

It Was in Gold, and Had Been Buried in the Cellar by the Counterfeiter.

The cottage at Flaggtown which was occupied by Emanuel Ninger, the expert counterfeiter, up to the time of his arrest, has been sold to Gustavus A. Weldenmayer of Newark, and Mrs. Ninger and her children have gone to live near the Erie penitentiary, where Ninger is confined.

The belief among Mrs. Ninger's friends that she had been left almost penniless by the confiscation of all the bonds and money found in the house was dispelled today, when, just before her departure, she dug up about $6,000 in gold, which had been buried in the cellar.

It has recently transpired that Ninger disposed of most of his penmade bank notes in real estate transactions. Henry Reimer, a real-estate agent of this place, who sold Ninger the cottage at Flaggtown, says that Ninger made him a payment of $3,000 in new fifty-dollar bank notes. This money was taken without question by the local banks, and it was not until Ninger's arrest that Reimer became convinced that the notes given to him by the penman were counterfeit.

Ninger is known to have made other purchases of real estate, in payment for which he gave new bills. His real estate transactions were puzzling to experienced agents, and he was known among them as a losing speculator. But it is now believed that he made a practice of purchasing real estate with counterfeit money, which enabled him to dispose of it in large amounts with little risk. The land was afterward sold, usually at a loss. Reimer has specimens of Ninger's writing in the shape of personal and business letters, which are marvels of fine penmanship.

REPUBLICAN DELEGATES.

North Plainfield Primaries Select Representatives to the State Convention.

The Republican primaries in North Plainfield were held in the basement of the public school building on Saturday evening, and the attendance was unusually large. Assessor Spencer called the meeting to order and Peter A. Emmons was made chairman. Thomas H. Thomas was the secretary. The object of the meeting was to elect delegates to the State convention to be held at Trenton next Thursday. The following delegates were chosen: From North Plainfield township, Phillip Acker; from the borough, first district, John MacLaughlin; second district, W. H. Howland. There was no opposition to the selections, so they were made unanimous. Dr. Cooley was mentioned as a candidate, but he

GOT BUT LITTLE BOOTY

THE OFFICE OF J. E. TOWNSEND ON SOMERSFT STREET BROKEN INTO.

No Money Was in the Safe, and the Only Thing of Real Value Taken Was the Day Book—Entered Through a Back Door.

J. E. Townsend, the marble dealer on Somerset street, was surprised yesterday afternoon when he went to his office to get a package of cigars which he had left on his desk the day before. Mr. Townsend found, upon entering, the safe door open, and his papers, including contracts, receipts, etc., scattered on the floor.

Fortunately, however, there was little, if any money in the safe, and the thieves got but little, if anything, of value for their trouble. And old and valued meechaum pipe, prized very highly by Mr. Townsend, had only been taken from the safe on Saturday, and aside from the papers and books, this was the only thing of much value in the safe. The day book was carried away, and this was the principal loss to the owner, inasmuch as it had not been posted on the ledger for some three weeks or more.

Mr. Townsend says he generally carries his money home at night, or else deposits it in the bank before closing hours. So on this account he leaves his safe door closed, but not locked, so that access is handy for for safe breakers.

Entrance to the place was effected through the back door by means of prying up a stout cross-bar which is the only means of locking the door.

Mr. Townsend is under the impression that the robbers are local ones, and had probably been well acquainted with the location and working of the shop. Not a window had been tampered with, and this gives additional weight to his theory. The North Plainfield authorities have been notified, but as yet no arrests have been made.

WON A DRESS DESIGN PRIZE.

Miss Margaret Burnett Offers a Rainy Day Outfit for Women.

The New York Journal has been conducting a contest among its readers for the best design for a dress for a rainy day. The committee having charge of the contest was composed of Dr. Grace Peckham Murray, Mrs. Donald McLean and Mrs. Jenness Miller. After several hundred designs had been submitted, they decided that Miss Margaret Burnett, of this city, had designed the most practical dress to be worn on a rainy day.

The costume is simple, stylish and sensible. It is short enough to escape the mud and soil of a rainy day, and yet short enough to render the wearer conspicuous. The material suggested for dress and leggings, a strong waterproof cloth, also meets with approval, and the skirt is not full enough to drag on the hips and tire the wearer. The weight of a dress is a matter of vital importance, and one that usually meets but little consideration. The hat is small, light and without trimming, which is the proper sort of a rainy day hat, and the waist is double-breasted. This brings the warmth of the jacket just where it should be in stormy weather—over the lungs and other vital organs.

The Journal says of the prize winner: Miss Burnet, who wins the prize, is a young art student at Cooper Union. She is the daughter of Charles Burnett, of Plainfield, and her home has been in that town all her life. She is not old enough to have experienced the discomforts of long skirts for a great length of time, but she says that during the last year the necessity of some rational rainy day gown was borne in upon her. The frock which she designed is to be made in mixed brown waterproof cloth.

FAREWELL TO CAMP LEVEE."

It Now Exists Only in the Memories of the Campers.

"Camp Levee" is no more but it ended Friday night with a blaze of glory. The "annex," as the board hut adjoining the tent, was called, was filled with inflamable wood late that evening and the torch applied. By the light of the brilliant conflagration that followed, the campers gathered their traps together and bid farewell to the site of that famous camp that will probably remain in their memories for many a day.

A grand dinner was given that night before the fire that would have astonished the most critical epicurian and the guests of the campers were greatly pleased with "Chef" Angleman's final effort.

If you have ever seen a little child in the agony of summer complaint, you can realize the danger of the trouble and appreciate the value of instantaneons relief always afforded by DeWitt's Colic & Cholera Cure. For dysentery and diarrœa it is a reliable remedy. We could not afford to recommend this as a cure unless it were a cure. For sale by L. W. Randolph

THE CLUBS WILL BE IN IT

VISITING WHEELMEN WILL BE PLENTY AT THE DAYLIGHT CARNIVAL.

Local Wheelmen, Too, Are Taking a Great Interest in the Decorated Part of the Parade and Will Surprise the People.

Less than two weeks now remains before Plainfield's great event, the Daylight Bicycle Carnival is to take place. The various sub-committees of the general committee are now hard at work preparing for it. The response from out-of-town clubs has been particularly favorable and Plainfield will have to entertain a larger number of wheelmen than she has seen for some time. The large number of valuable prizes has induced many of the large clubs to turn out to compete for the club prizes, while their members will try for the individual prizes.

A number of local wheelmen have promised the committee that they will give their fellow townsmen a big surprise. Elaborate decorations are being quietly planned and only a selected few are told of the secret, for Plainfield is going to be well represented in the parade and it will be strange if several of the prizes do not remain here.

One well known wheelmen came to a member of the general committee, one day last week, looking as if he had just passed through a long illness. He confidentially told the committeeman that the cause of his poor appearance was that a great friend had just confided to him his idea for a burlesque getup for the parade and he had laughed so hard over it, "it was the funniest thing I ever saw" he explained, that he hadn't been feeling well ever since. And it is said that there are others just as funny.

Stopped on the Highway.

A middle aged man who claimed to work for a Mr. Martin between Scotch Plains and Westfield, was stopped by a highwayman on East Front street, near Cole's hill, late Saturday night. The man had been to this city making some purchases, including a pair of boots which he carried in his hands. When the highwayman approached him and first asked for money and then for tobacco, it seemed to the Scotch Plains man that he was about to be attacked, so he dropped his parcels, and with his new cow-hide boots in hand made the highwayman beat a hasty retreat. The latter is described as a man of middle-age, with full beard and poorly dressed.

These Dogs Should be Muzzled or Shot.

Woe be unto the man, woman or child who has occasion to pass over Cole's hill, between this city and Scotch Plains on foot at any time during the day or night. There are a couple of vicious appearing and dangerous dogs, which take a delight in chasing, growling and snapping at drivers and other passersby. A little warm lead would put an end to the complaints, and a person would be perfectly justified in shooting them.

Cranford's Carnival Postponed.

The general uncertainty of the weather, Saturday, effectually stopped the river carnival at Cranford, that evening. A meeting of the committee in charge of the affair was held Saturday afternoon and it was decided to postpone it until next Saturday. Quite a number from this city had planned to go, but thanks to the Daily Press bulletin, they learned of the postponement in time. There will be quite a delegation to go next Saturday.

CHARLES S. A. DAVIS PASSES AWAY AFTER A LONG LIFE.

Had Not Been Seriously Sick and His Death Came as a Surprise—Known As a Man of Energy and Intellect.

By the death of Charles Sherlock Austin Davis, which occurred at his home, 1220 Watchung avenue, at 7:25 o'clock last evening, Plainfield loses one of its oldest and most respected citizens. Ailing as he was only for a short time, his death was not expected. But he passed away surrounded by kind and loving members of his household, and was conscious until the last.

The decedents illness was of long standing, but it was not until last Tuesday evening that he was considered in any way dangerous. Dr. W. C. Boone was called in, and did all in his power to save the patients life, but it was of no avail, and he passed quietly away.

Friday he was taken with a hemorrage of the nose, yet on Saturday he rallied and was apparently in the best of spirits. Last night at 6:30 o'clock his lungs effused and his death followed soon afterward. The funeral will be Wednesday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock.

The surving members of the family are two sons Thomas H. B. Davis, of Sandusky, Ohio, vice-president of the Middletown Plate Co., of Middletown, Conn., and Major Charles E. L. B. Davis of the engineering Corps, U. S. A., who is now located in SanFrancisco, and two daughters Miss Louise S. and Miss Ellan Fitch Davis, both of whom live at home. Mrs. Davis departed this life some five years ago.

Mr. Davis was born in New Haven Dec. 11th, 1807, and he was therefore eighty-eight years and eight months old at the time of his death. He was the son of John and Mary Fitch Davis. In early life he took to the real estate and insurance business in the town of his birth, and had lived there up to seventeen years ago this spring when he came to Plainfield. Here he has lived a retired life, and until overtaken with infirmities was a prominent and much-beloved companion on the streets. His knowledge of national and other affairs has often been sought by politicians, although he never aspired for political notoriety.

In 1846 he was appointed by James K. Polk Surveyor of the Port at New Haven, which position he most honorably discharged. He served in this capacity for four years or more. What little interest he took in politics was from a Democratic standpoint and from his early life he had always advocated the principles of Democracy. He was an able writer, and among his latest productions was one entitled "The Political Situation and Colonial History."

Water Runs Into the Street.

The drinking fountain on West Second street between New and Liberty streets, has proved a God-send to both man and beast during the hot days we have just experienced. But there should be some steps taken to prevent the children who play around the fountain and stop up the outlets in the basins with stones and sticks, thus allowing the water to flow over into the gutter, where there is no grade to carry it off. The fountain is almost directly in the centre between Liberty and New streets, and there is a sewer through each of these thoroughfares, yet the water from the basins of the fountain remains in the gutter and becomes stagnant.

JEALOUSY THE CAUSE

LUCIE WILLIAMS HAS HAD HER LOVER ARRESTED.

She Says He Skipped With Her Money and Went to New York With Another Woman—And Now He Is Locked Up.

Jealousy is the cause of endless trouble among the colored denizens of Hetfield row, Arlington avenue, and now one of them, Richard Caldwell, is in jail, where he declares he will remain until he dies, rather than marry Lucie Williams, while she has those "radical" ideas in her head.

Two years ago Lucie Williams came to this city from the south and soon after she met Richard Caldwell. It was apparently a case of love at first sight and they continued to keep company until now. He asked her to become his wife and swore eternal fidelity to her. Now, sorrowful to say, Miss Williams is of an exceedingly jealous disposition, so much so that Caldwell states: "Whenever I dress up and put on a clean white shirt she thinks I am going to see some other girl."

Last Friday, at her request, Caldwell packed her sewing machine on a wheelbarrow and carted it down to Frucht's store on West Front street, where he sold it for $10. Saturday he left for New York with the money in his pocket and Miss Williams declares another woman by his side. It seemed a case of desertion and robbery to her and so she started a breach of promise case in Judge DeMeza's court. When Caldwell returned this morning, Chief Grant awaited him with a warrant and took him before he Judge.

He had the $10 in his pocket and declared that "the other woman" was another of his fiance's "radical ideas." She was at the Judge's office and proposed that they get married at once. He refused until she gave up those "radical ideas." The Judge sent them in his private office hoping peaceful settlement could be made but neither would give in and the law took its course.

He admitted her kindness to him, saying that she had loaned him considerable money, she says it amounts to $40, and he declared that he loved her, but objected to the "radical ideas."

He was locked up for trial Saturday morning as he could not raise the necessary $200 bail.

She has been married nine years. Before her marriage she resided in this city on West Front street. Her uncle, S. H. Peer, resides on West Front street at present Her husband's mother, Mrs. Violet VanWinkle, resides on Central avenue, and he has several brothers in this city. Excise Violations.

The question of licenses will be open once more the second week in September. Again we call the attention of Prosecutor Voorhees to the fact that the violation of the Sunday law by both of the taverns in South Plainfield is open and flagrant. He has ample time to send over and procure evidence on which to revoke their licenses and have indictments found by the next grand jury.—Metuchen Recorder.

Logic and Oratory.

Rev. Albert H. Howe occupied the pulpit in All Souls church yesterday, and delivered two strong sermons. He has marked oratorical ability and made a favorable impression on the congregation. He was formerly associated with the Methodist church in Westfield but left that society, it is said, because it did not countenance dancing, which he does.

AN AWFUL NIGHT OF IT

LOUIS MILLER CLAIMS TO HAVE FALLEN IN WITH A BAD LOT.

After Becoming Inebriated He Claims His Companions Stole His Valuables and Then Dumped Him Out into the Road.

It is not a usual sight to see a man, minus one shoe and with his clothes considerably rumpled, chasing a hack down East Front street, but that was what happened Saturday evening, and the pursuer did not seem afraid to use his voice. Patrolman Vanderweg was on duty on East Front street, near Richmond, late Saturday evening, when he heard the sound of horse's hoofs and the rattle of a carriage. They were coming at a rather rapid pace, while a voice sounded in the rear yelling "Stop!" "Murder!" and similar remarks. The officer stopped the hack and the man that was following it.

There were three men in the hack besides the driver and they all appeared quiet. The man who had disturbed the evening quiet with his yells was evidently a German, considerably worse after an encounter with some fiery liquid. One shoe was off, his clothes were torn and disarranged, while sundry blotches of mud suggested a too close contact with the road. He was greatly excited and tried to tell the officer that somebody had robbed him and threw him out of a hack.

It was too evident that the strong drink had gone to his head, so Patrolman Vanderweg marched him off to the lockup after ordering the men in the hack to appear this morning as witnesses in the case.

When the prisoner recovered from his temporary debility, he told the police authorities that his name was Louis Miller and that he lived on Rahway road, opposite the old Benton place. He is employed in Rheaume's planing mill.

His story was that Saturday evening he hired William Kennedy's hack and started out to spend a pleasant evening according to his own ideas. He was first driven to the Manhattan Hotel in the borough and tried to have a good time there. After getting outside of several glasses of a fermented fluid he returned to his hack and, so he states, Kennedy returned with three men who unceremoniously took possession of the remaining space in the hack. Then away went the hack up to East Front street and along that thoroughfare to the little village of Scotch Plains.

They all went into Emery's Hotel and evidently partook of more than was good for them as they all came up rather unsteadily. Into the hack they all climbed with difficulty and then the hack started towards Plainfield.

All went pleasantly for a time when poor Miller was suddenly pounced upon by the other men. They went through his pockets, removing watch, about $8 in cash, several insurance papers and Miller's honorable discharge from the navy. On several occasions Miller has carried considerable sums of money in his left shoe and the men evidently knew this for, according to Miller, they removed it. After thoroughly searching him they quietly opened the door of the hack and ejected Miller without further delay.

The rather damp and muddy place on which Miller landed effectively aroused him and he set out in pursuit of the hack, shouting lustily. Then Patrolman Vanderweg appeared on the scene and the rest has been told.

The three men who joined Miller without his invitation, consisted of Thomas Stephenson, Charles Nelson and Warner Pierson. All except Pierson appeared before City Judge DeMeza. Miller pleaded guilty to the charge of being drunk, owning up to his part in the affair, and made a counter charge against the witnesses. They, in turn, declared that they had done nothing and pleaded not guilty. Miller, they said, was drunk, removed his own shoes and fell out of the hack. His story was, according to them, the creation of a disordered brain. Miller was very sure of the contrary, however, and retained Lawyer Charles J. McNabb to fight the matter to an end. The men were held in $50 bail to appear for trial Saturday morning.

Dr. Talmage Still a Member.

Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, who has been spending a few days in Bound Brook, expressed himself as surprised and pleased that the clerk of the Reformed church had found his name still on the church roll of membership, and offered to give an address at the church's semi-centennial celebration, which is to be held Thursday. The society will observe the occasion with anniversaay exercises in the evening as well.

THE BOW IN THE CLOUD.

All day long the clouds had lowered,
And the rain had swept the earth,
Till it lay all fair and lovely
As when God first gave it birth;
And the sunset splendor falling,
Set a rainbow in the sky;
And I learned life's hardest lesson
As the clouds were drifting by.

For the radiant sunset glory,
Falling on my raptured eyes,
As the clouds were lifted, thrilled me
With a rare and sweet surprise.
But if life were all fair weather,
As the fleeting days go by,
We should never know the beauty
Of the rainbow in the sky.

As the sun seems all the brighter
For the troublous clouds that rise,
So our tears but clear our vision
For the rainbow's glad surprise.
And our hearts are all the purer
For the Father's chastening hand,
While our faith grows clearer, trusting
Where we cannot understand.

So if hearts were free from sorrow,
Eyes were never filled with tears,
We should never know the rapture
When the Comforter appears—
When we rest upon His bosom,
As the passing moments roll,
And the Father's smile caressing,
Sets a rainbow in the soul.

A RECONCILIATION.

BY MARY CLARKE HUNTINGTON.

The grass in the front yard had been newly mown, lending an added trimness to the well-kept place. Tulips in the borders on either side the long gravel walk made riotous patches of color under the morning sun. Suggestion of lilies of the valley drifted from the south garden wall. Above the open front door tall lilac bushes touched tops, and the heavy odor of their blossoms spilled itself upon the hush that seemed to hang over everything.

In the instant during which he glanced about the familiar surroundings this hush smote keenly upon the senses of the man descending from the rickety stage, but he turned with an unchanged face to assist his companion in alighting. She was a tall, well-built woman of 35, whose eyes and mouth betrayed habitual dissatisfaction, and whose vivid coloring was set off to advantage by her fashionable black. She kept step with him as they went up the walk.

"I feel quite tumbled to pieces from driving three miles in that demoralizing stage. It is ridiculous that the people here in Bloomingdon do not insist upon a better conveyance from the station to the Center. It is positively a penance to have to come here."

She spoke petulantly, glancing at her husband as though he were to blame for the occasion that had brought them. He did not seem to hear, and from an irritated desire to gain his attention, she went on: "Do tell me, Gerard, if I am all in a muss."

"You can go at once to your room and attend to your toilet," was his brusque reply. Then he went eagerly up the steps to meet an elderly woman who appeared in the doorway.

"Aunt Ann!" He stopped to kiss her, still keeping her hand.

His wife held out the tips of immaculately-gloved fingers, and, only waiting for affirmative answer to question as to their room being ready, swept her soft draperies upstairs. Miss Ann Boynton led the way into the sitting-room, and sank upon the long haircloth-covered sofa. Gerard took a large chair opposite.

"I began to fear you were not coming," she said, tremulously.

"Only illness would have kept me from coming. Your telegram reached me duly, but Marguerite thought it necessary to order new black, and that delayed me." There was a ring of impatience in his voice as he said this. "Is there not something I can do? Are all preparations made?"

"All."

"At what hour is it to be?"

"At three this afternoon."

"I ordered some flowers sent on."

"They have come, and are arranged. Will you see them?"

He made an almost womanish gesture of dissent.

The sweetness of lilac bloom filled the silence that fell between them. Gerard remembered many springs ago of picking every blossom, and cutting the bushes, which were slender then, as whips for himself and Henry. Despite his two years' junfority he was ever the one who rushed first into forbidden things. He remembered also the punishment that followed—as it usually did follow his many heedless acts of mischief—and of how, while he was still smarting from acquaintance with the lilac whips which he had unwittingly cut for his own undoing, his father had sought him again, and holding his hot, wet, angry face against a broad shoulder whispered how sorry he was to have to punish his little boy—whispered also of a circus in town the next day, and that he and Henry might go. Then he remembered walking down through the orchard with small clinging fingers clasped in large tender ones, and tears dried by happy certainty that after all his father was the best father in the world.

The blur passed from his eyes, and he found himself looking at a picture hung above the sofa in an oval frame. It had been taken during early manhood, but Gerard could trace strong resemblance to the face last turned to him in fatherly welcome. Beside it was the picture of a pretty young woman with flowing curls—his mother. She had died while he was very young, leaving him only a dream-like recollection of kisses and soothings, and touch of loose hair against his cheek. Aunt Ann was the only mother he had known. She, seeing now where his gaze turned, took a small leather case from the old-fashioned stand beside her.

"This is the best picture your father ever had taken. He was 40—just your age. The sands of his life ran a long time. He would have been 88 in June."

Gerard took the case. The grave eyes seemed looking back into his own with familiar kindliness.

"Tell me about it. Was he ill? Did he suffer much?"

"Had he been ill I should have written so. My letters told you of his gradual weakening of body and mind through many months. He missed you and Henry greatly as he failed. He would sit hours at a time by his window here and look down the road. I think he was watching for one or both of you to come. And then, toward the last, he sat oftenest on the back porch, with a lingering expression in his eyes. He seemed to be taking a farewell of the hills he had always known and so soon must leave. He did not speak often of you or Henry. You know he was a reticent man. The morning of the day he died he asked when you were coming home, and then he said: 'If I could only know them reconciled—my two boys.' An hour or so later I came in, and he was sitting where you sit now, with the album on his knee. I spoke, but he did not answer." Tears were falling fast over Miss Ann's withered cheeks. "He had died looking at the picture of you and Henry, taken together as children."

A blur passed again before Gerard's eyes. He could not see the tintype in his fingers.

"Do you think that Henry will be here—in time?"

"He has been here through it all. He came the day his father died."

The pronoun "his" touched Gerard. It seemed to put him at an immeasurable distance from the still form which, without asking, he knew lay in the closed parlor. As mischievous little boy, as wild young lad, he had received the larger measure of tenderness, perhaps because followed by the larger measure of anxiety, but in the ten years of estrangement between the brothers Judge Boynton had turned most to the elder son. This had not been unnoticed by Gerard, though his rare visits home kept him from feeling the difference. New interests had crowded out the old. Excitement of hours spent on 'change had put the even tenor of Bloomingdon days far in the background. Until this moment he had not realized with what strong bonds home associations still held him. The life of which he had grown to think as narrow and primitive and slow now seemed to have held the essence of true existence. The rich broker, noted among business men for his keenness and sagacity, having an influence that extended widely beyond his palatial home and that had brought him many responsible positions, suddenly felt himself pitifully alone. He thought of the woman upstairs with the beautiful face and the haughtily-poised head, but the thought brought no sense of nearness to any human being. Then he met his aunt's eyes—still wet and shining with almost maternal tenderness. He was not alone, after all. He got up and went over to her, putting a hand on her shoulder.

"I will go in and see him now."

Shut into the darkened parlor—before him only that coffin covered with the costly flowers which he himself had chosen, Gerard Boynton stood still. He felt something keeping him back—something that stood between him and the dead man, and that would not let him look upon the quiet face. And he knew what it was. The estrangement that had grown between two brothers fronted him now like a visible thing. It was taunting him with its power to hold him away—it was reminding him that his was the blame.

He remembered well how it began. He had come for a summer vacation, and found at the old home a girl whom Henry had brought as his fiancee—a girl delicate and shy, with the sweetest smile in the world. And because of the smile, because Miss Ann petted her, and his father talked of her, and Henry followed her with looks of devotion, he had slipped into a way of trying to please her more than anyone else could please—succeeding so well that one day Henry paused in the library door with gray eyes blazing black in colorless face, and quivering lips hurling such words as "traitor" and "scoundrel" at the brother who stood thus holding a frightened girl in his arms and giving back defiance for indignation. There were tears from Miss Ann and reproaches from the judge; Henry shut the bitterness of a heart made void into his own room for days; the girl with the smile went back to her people, and Gerard went also.

But while with Henry it had been the love of a life time, with Gerard it was only a phase. His passion dulled with distance; his letters grew less frequent, and stopped altogether after one evening at a club reception when a pair of magnificent black eyes looked into his own. He married the eyes and a fortune with them. The fortune invested had been many times doubled, had brought him the reputation of being a peculator who always came out gilded, but the eyes had brought him only a splendid creature, who threw over her fan at some ballroom gallant such smiles as she never bestowed upon her husband after the novelty of married life had worn off, and left his great house to the devices of servants for months at a time while she flung herself into the gayety of watering place and mountain resort, or visited some foreign city of note. What disappointment Gerard Boynton might have felt concerning his marriage he accepted with consciousness of a girl's smile chilled unto death and a brother's days embittered because of his faithlessness.

It was knowledge of being in the wrong that made Henry's intense, pained words so rankle in his mind. He had never forgiven that last interview where such bald truths compelled his ear. He had gone out from his brother's presence with a set and sullen face, and had never spoken to him again. If the two chanced to meet on home visits they avoided each other, and neither Miss Ann nor the judge deemed it best to notice their averted eyes. Under stress of such emotion as these sad hours aroused, Miss Ann, for the first time, had spoken to Gerard of the long estrangement. She had touched upon this subject often with Henry, but he always answered that he could not be reconciled to one who did not wish reconciliation.

Gerard knew that the attitude of the one injured had been his. After that last interview there was no reproach in his brother's manner, simply a waiting for such confession as was his due to receive. Gerard's stubborn pride had refused this confession—but he was making it to himself now with a bitter sense that wrong-doing brought the heaviest penalty on the wrong-doer. Surely Henry's life could not be more empty of something to be desired than was his own.

A door closed so softly that he did not connect the sound with entrance. He heard the piteous whine of a dog in the hall outside, and knew that Shep was mourning the stilled hand and voice of his master. He turned to quiet the animal, as though sound could disturb the sleeper's eternal calm, and saw his brother standing inside the room with hands full of lilies of the valley. It had been some time since they had met. With a kind of shock Gerard noted the slight stoop of shoulders, the eyes spectacled from close study, the hair beginning to turn gray. But Henry noticed the other's air of increased prosperity rather than the few wrinkles upon the handsome face. Shep whined again, more insistently. Henry spoke through the closed door. His voice partook of the hush in the dim room, but both heard the patter of soft dog feet turning obediently away.

The elder man went around to the further side of the coffin and placed the lilies upon the white satin pillow. To Gerard came vivid remembrances of some boys searching for these same blossoms along the sunny slopes of a garden wall, and shouting over each fragrant token of spring as only children with the season's freshness thrilling every pulse can shout. The feeling of old comradeship swelled up in his heart, breaking down the last barrier which was keeping him afar from that still presence. He went quickly forward, and bent over the coffin a face in which every best emotion struggled for the mastery.

Henry did not lift his face from that fine old countenance, touched with the immeasurable dignity of death, yet holding such semblance of life that it seemed those closed lashes must lift and the sealed lips speak. A lock of the thin white hair had fallen over the forehead, and Gerard put it reverently into place. The motion stirred Henry to perception of a difference in the man standing opposite. He looked up and their eyes met in a way that brought their hands together.

Again Shep whined at the door. A woman's voice spoke sharply to him from the landing. Mrs. Gerard was coming downstairs, and she disliked dogs. Shep's feet pattered slowly away to the sitting-room where Mrs. Ann still sat with the judge's picture on her lap. In the darkened parlor, amid the hush and perfume of rare blossoms, the brothers bowed with clasped hands over the open coffin, and the aged face within seemed rapturous in its divine content.—Springfield Republican.

HARD WORK AHEAD

Major McKinley Expects To Be Uncommonly Busy This Week.

WILL MAKE TWO SPEECHES TO-DAY

Big Delegation of Farmers and Another of Potters from East Liverpool Coming — Many Requests Received for Political Literature.

Canton, O., Aug. 24.—Major McKinley expects to be uncommonly busy this week. He will make two speeches to-day, one to a delegation of farmers from Knox county, O., and the other to a number of potters and other citizens of East Liverpool. There have been a great many farmers in several of the delegations which have come to Canton, but there has been no delegation composed exclusively of farmers, and the one coming to-day will be the first of that description. The farmers have not come in large delegations for the reason that they have been very busy since the convention with their harvests. During the months of September and October a large number are expected to call on Major McKinley. About a thousand are coming on one excursion, and a number of letters have been received here from farming communities indicating a desire to see the republican nominee. Major McKinley's speech to the farmers who will call on him to-day has been scanned with unusual interest, for it will be his fisst direct talk to this class, which is said to be most generally and seriously in favor of free silver. The demand for political literature is rapidly increasing. Not only are all committee headquarters receiving many requests for documents, but Major McKinley's mail contains daily a number of letters asking for them. These letters are always referred to the state or national committees, and the writers would save time by so addressing them in the first place.

Will Make Several Speeches.

Between the first of this week and the third day of November Major McKinley expects to make a great many speeches, probably not fewer than fifty. He has already made half a hundred since his nomination and they have been collected and printed in a neat paper bound booklet which will be ready for distribution here to-day. There will be another edition of his speeches about the first of October. The demand for them has been so large that it has been found necessary to print them in book form. Major McKinley still insists that he will take no holiday during the campaign, but he has promised to go to Zoar, about eighteen miles from Canton. When he goes he hopes to remain two or three days. He will also make brief visits to Cleveland during the campaign, and all the rest of the time he will spend in Canton.

Mr. McKinley's Quiet Sunday.

Major McKinley enjoyed a day of absolute rest yesterday. The weather was inclement in the morning and remained so throughout the day. In the afternoon Mr. and Mrs. McKinley went out for a drive. Charles C. Dawes, member of the national executive committee, and Major Dick, who is also an important factor in the western headquarters, came to Canton to consult with Major McKinley. They had a long talk over the situation in the west, which seems to present many more difficulties than that in the eastern states.

NEW YORK REPUBLICANS.

Situation To-day in the Struggle for the Nomination for Governor.

Saratoga, N. Y., Aug. 24.—The gubernatorial situation is practically unchanged, that is, so far as the probable action of the 758 delegate to the republican state convention is concerned. Everything seems to depend upon the decision of Mr. Platt. The latter was astir early this morning. He had breakfasted before any of the candidates were in evidence, but was soon besieged with callers. The supporters of Mr. Platt, who yesterday began to press him to accept the nomination himself, were later joined by some of the anti-organization leaders. He, however, positively declined to stand for the nomination and said that no friend of his would further agitate the matter. The other candidates, it was said, would withdraw if he would consent to run. There was some talk of stampeding the convention and forcing the nomination on him, but he declared that that must not be done. Mr. Aldridge went to Mr. Platt six weeks ago and asked him if he would advise him to continue in his canvass for delegates or withdraw. The friends of Mr. Aldridge assert that Mr. Platt said to him: "I would not withdraw if I were you." On this suggestion Mr. Aldridge kept on in his hunt for delegates and claims to have the support of nearly 325 of the 575 organization delegates. It will take 380 votes to nominate. Hon. Hamilton Fish, the speaker of the assembly, is as confident as ever of his ultimate success. He says that he has a large number of delegates at his command and that he had no fear of Mr. Aldridge's candidacy. Some of the delegates express the opinion that Wadsworth will carry off the nomination. Secretary of state John Palmer will arrive today. He has telegraphed state committeeman William Barnes, jr., that he will be a candidate for governor before the convention.

HOKE SMITH AMUSED

Laughed at the Comments of the Press on His Resignation.

ANXIOUS TO GET BACK IN ATLANTA

First Assistant Sims To Take Charge of the Interior Department After Sept. 1, Unless Mr. Smith's Successor Is Appointed in the Meantime.

Washington, Aug. 24.—Secretary Smith had just returned from a five-mile spin on his bicycle last evening when he was seen by the United Associated Presses reporter. He said he had no further information to add to that already made public about his resignation from the cabinet. He was much amused at the varied comments of the eastern press on it, and was free to confess that he had learned a good deal about his early life from reading their various accounts and editorials that up to this time he was ignorant of. The interior department will be left in charge of First Assistant Secretary Sims on Sept. 1 next, unless, in the meantime, the president names a successor to Secretary Smith. He will return to Atlanta just as soon after the first of next month as he can arrange his private affairs to get away. He declined to-day to say just what active part, if any, he would take in the present campaign.

SEVERAL KILLED BY LIGHTNING

Fatal and Destructive Storms in Ohio and Indiana.

Chicago, Aug. 24.—Dispatches from points in Indiana and Ohio report that the storms of Saturday night were accompanied by much destruction of property by lightning and some fatalities. Telegraphic communication is still very much impaired and full reports are hard to obtain. At Indianapolis the wind reached hurricane velocity, but no serious property loss was sustained, nor were any lives lost. The rainfall was very heavy. Near Rome City, Ind., a large barn was destroyed by fire, and Arthur Foss, aged 15, was killed. At Ellwood, Ind., lightning demolished Rev. T. J. Wright's residence. All the family escaped injury but Mr. Wright who was horribly burned and paralyzed from the waist down. Greensburg, Ind., reports heavy damage to crops and several bridges washed away. Mrs. John Baumgardner of Wabash was struck by lightning and fatally injured. Lester Bliss and Neill Bliss, at Delphoss, Ohio, were killed by lightning. At Hobart, Ind., the dwelling of a man named Smith was demolished by lightning and the entire family of three persons killed. Wallace's show tents at Huntington were wrecked. The horses and menagerie stampeded and much property was ruined. The elephants caused a panic. The storm unroofed several buildings and blew down a wall of the new Griffith block.

Visitors to German Schools.

Berlin, Aug. 24.—The German government requests Americans desiring to visit the German schools to make their applications for permits through the government in Washington instead of making them through the United States embassy in Berlin, where there is an inevitable delay which often prevents the use of the permits.

Shot at a Dance.

Lebanon, Ky., Aug. 24.—At a negro dance last night, because some one stepped on the train of his partner's dress, George Mays shot and killed Charles Warner and Charles Pipes, a by-stander, and fatally wounded Bud Hardin. Mays is still at large. All are colored.

Brush Fires in British Columbia.

Vancouver, B. C., Aug. 24.—Bush fires are raging with unabated fury in the main land of British Columbia. New Westminster is surrounded, and as firemen cannot be at all places at once it is feared some part of the city will be destroyed by the oncoming flames in spite of them.

Drowned at Atlantic City.

Atlantic City, N. J., Aug. 24.—Herbert B. Cook, the 25-year-old son of George Harvey Cook, president of the Brigantine Rrilroad & Transit company, was drowned yesterday while bathing with a party of friends in front of the Holland house, Brigantine beach. His body was recovered.

Miss Clemens' Funeral.

Elmira, N. Y., Aug. 24.—The funeral of Miss Olive Susan Clemens, daughter of Samuel L. Clemens (Mark Twain), was held yesterday afternoon from the residence of her uncle, Gen. J. C Langdon. The Rev. Thomas K. Beecher officiated and the remains were interred in the family plot at Woodlawn.

Rubber Companies Resume.

Waterbury, Conn., Aug. 24.—The rubber factories of Naugatuck, which have been closed many weeks, are about to start up again. Factories No. 1 and 2 of the G. M. R. Shoe company started on full this morning on new orders. The Glove company resumes work soon after September 1.

Brooklyn Arrives at Boston.

WEATHER INDICATIONS.

(Furnished by Weather Observer Neagle.)

Generally Fair Tonight and Tuesday; Cooler Tuesday Morning.

At 2 o'Clock Leggett's Thermometer Registered 77 Degrees.

It is probable that the National Convention of Republican clubs, which convenes in St. Louis tomorrow, will support Col. E. A. McAlpin, of New York, for president of the organization.

The Republican State Convention will be held at Trenton next Thursday. The indications are that it will be a large convention, and that Governor Griggs will open the campaign in the State by delivering a speech for the National candidates.

Senator Foster M. Voorhees has declared that he will not be a candidate for re-election under any circumstances. This practically leaves the Republican honor to Sheriff George Kyte. Frederick C. Marsh will doubtless receive the Democratic nomination.

For the first time in several years a North Plainfield Republican primary was not presided over by ex-Mayor Charles Place last Saturday night. For several years his executive ability in presiding over a body of voters has been recognized by the Borough G. O. P., but his absence from town last Saturday made it impossible for him to receive the honor.

The State Committee of the Sound Money Democrats met in executive session at Taylor's Hotel Saturday to discuss plans for the State Convention, to be held at Trenton on Wednesday next. It was decided to adopt the sound money platform adopted by the Democrats in May last. It was announced that ex-Secretary of the Treasury Fairchild would address the convention.

A section of the election law provides that no compensation shall be paid to any election agent or challenger, but requires Board of Freeholders to fix and pay a reasonable compensation for the services of County Boards of Election, and provides the secretary of the Board may receive one-third more compensation than the amount paid the other members of the Board.

Teachers' salaries in New Jersey show some curious variations. The average for male teachers per month is $82.59 and for female teachers $47.04. Among the counties Essex pays the highest average to male teachers, namely $160.64 per month, and Sussex the lowest, $46.75. The highest average to female teachers is $61.65 in Essex, and the lowest $34.92, in Salem. Hudson comes next to Essex in salaries of male teachers, namely $129.54, and Union third with $117.10. Union pays female teachers an average of $49.33, and Hudson an average of $46.71. All other counties are below the hundredth figure in male salaries and below fifty in female salaries.—Newark Advertiser.

A Talented Preacher.

Rev. Dr. James McLeod, of Scranton, Pa., was yesterday greeted by large congregations at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church. Dr. McLeod was one of the supplies last summer during Dr. Richards' vacation, and his vigorous, incisive sermons were much enjoyed. He will preach again next Sunday morning and evening.

Mrs. Rhodie Nash, of this place, was taken in the night with cramping pains, and the next day diarrhœa set in. She took half a bottle of blackberry cordial but got no relief. She then sent to me to see if I had anything that would help her. I sent her a bottle of Chamberlin's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy, and the first dose relieved her. Another of our neighbors had been sick for about a week and had tried different remedies for diarrhœa but kept getting worse. I sent him this same remedy. Only four doses of it were required to cure him. He says he owes his recovery to this wonderful remedy.— Mrs. Mary Sibley, Sidney, Mich. For sale by T. S. Armstrong, Druggist.

THEATRICAL.

"Thoroughbred" is repeating its former tremendous success at the Garrick Theatre, New York, and the management is making every effort to put the piece on for a run at some other local house, as Albert Chevalier, who is anxious to appear at the Garrick on account of its suitableness for entertainment, of a necessity crowds the comedy out. Never before in the history of the Garrick has business been so good as since the revival of "Thoroughbred." New ditties are being added every week. Seabrooke, Williams and Humphreys are still the favorites.

WESTFIELD WAFTINGS.

Incidents in Westfield Life That are of Passing Interest.

The Republican voters of Westfield township, including the borough of Mountainside, will hold a primary meeting this evening at 8 o'clock for the purpose of electing two delegates and their alternates to the Republican State convention to be held at Trenton next Thursday.

The members of the I. O. S. are to have a rare treat on the evening of Sept. 11th, when two of their members will debate on the silver question. The question of debate will be: "Resolved, That the free coinage of silver would be the ruination of the finances of the United States." L. Thompson will maintain the affirmative against Robt. V. Hoffman, negative.

Wm. Perrine, of Westfield, was arrested Friday night by Officer Marsh Perrine went into the laundry run by Sing Wohy, and offered to clean out the place. Last week Perrine canvassed the town with a subscription paper, in which he promised to leave town for one year, provided he received donations to the amount of $25. The scheme was not remunerative, and when its failure was a certainty he got drunk. He will be out of town for the next thirty days. Officer Marsh took him to the county jail Saturday morning.

Officer Pickell had a lively chase Friday after a fellow whom he discovered lying on the bank of the railroad at the bridge between Fanwood and Westfield. The officer, in company with Capt. Hawkins, was walking towards Fanwood when he noticed the fellow. He was poorly dressed and looked like a tramp. He started to run as the men approached. Having suspicion as to his character, the officer and Capt. Hawkins ran after him. He did not obey their orders to stop, and to frighten him two shots were fired. Still he ran on, but he was caught at the Fanwood station. He was brought to Westfield and locked up over night. He gave his name as Wm. Davis, of Elizabethport. Saturday morning Justice Collins sent him to the county jail for 30 days.

SCOTCH PLAINS SIFTINGS.

A Pole Raising at the Public School an Event of Saturday.

Wm. Stelle, of Jersey City, is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Lee.

The Hon. George Kyte has been or will be asked to appoint deputy marshals for Fanwood.

The Young Stars go to Plainfield to play ball with the Fourth ward team on the Y. M. C. A. grounds, Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock sharp.

The main thoroughfare from Fanwood to Scotch Plains, it is understood, cost some $1,900. But it is a lasting improvement and one appreciated by advocates of good roads.

The summer guests about Flanders' boarding house held an informal dance Saturday afternoon. The weather was warm, but the dancing continued until the dinner bell rang out.

Quoit pitching is quite a favorite pastime for some of the guests at Billy Lee's hotel, and there is a movement on foot to have a series of games there for prizes within a week or two, if it can be arranged.

The rain on Saturday caused a postponement of the ball game between the Somersets of Plainfield and the Scotch Plains team. Next Saturday is the time now set for the Somersets to be wiped from the face of the diamond. So some of the local baseball cranks here think.

At Emory's there is a full-grown parrot which can do almost everything but wait upon the table. The bird can whistle far superior to an ordinary human being; it can say "Hello, Bill" to passing bicyclists, and "Ah, there," to ladies unattended by their husbands or best fellow. The bird is the source of much amusement for the guests and others about the hotel.

"Bob" Walpole and George Lyons inadvertently heard that there were a few more sunfish and bass in the Passaic river, so they went over for them early yesterday morning. But the fish evidently heard of their coming, so they stayed at home all day, and "Bob" and George returned home crestfallen and with the usual fisherman's luck. Then again it was Sunday, and the fish that they didn't get may have taken a day off on a tour through Newark Bay and the KillVon Kull.

Capt. Tuzo, of Terrill road, has presented a 60-foot flag-pole to the public school and on Saturday afternoon the pole was erected on the lawn directly in front of the school building. Members of the board of education and others of the village turned out to see George Adair and Randolph Drake put up the stately and beautiful pole, and there were a few appropriate remarks by the several members of the Board. The Stars and Stripes will hereafter float from the flag-staff, except in stormy weather.

Water must be getting low at Scotch Plains. Within thirty minutes' time yesterday afternoon four persons, all residents of the place, went to the town pump and carried away a vessel of water. And with a single exception they were all women. It has been suggested that a tap be placed in the Feltville dam and the inhabitants supplied by means of hose. But this would hardly do, for the hose might burst some night and Plainfield would need another pyrotechnical display to let the people know that a portion of the Feltville dam had given way.

Why is It,

if catarrh is a blood disease, as some claim, that physicians frequently advise change of air and climate to those suffering? Catarrh is a climatic affection, and nothing but a local remedy or a change of climate will cure it. Ely's Cream Balm is so efficient as to do away with the necessity of leaving home and friends, causing instant relief and is a real cure of catarrh.

BRYAN TO MEET HILL

Will Dine at the Senator's Home To-morrow Night.

THE VISIT TO BE VERY BRIEF

Hill Not To Preside or Speak at the Albany Meeting—Mr. and Mrs. Bryan To Bid Good-bye to Upper Red Hook This Afternoon.

Barrytown, N. Y., Aug. 24.—According to present arrangements William J. Bryan will lunch with Senator David B. Hill in Albany to-morrow afternoon. Mr. Bryan will not say so, but the statement is nevertheless true. When the representative of the United Associated Presses asked the democratic candidate about the matter this morning Mr. Bryan answered, after thinking a minute or two, that he was not fully informed concerning the arrangements for his Albany visit, and would not give any information on the subject. That was all he would say. It is understood that the meeting between the nominee and the senator was provided for by friends of both without any direct communication between the two principals. The negotiations were conducted quietly and with the greatest secrecy. Mr. Bryan and Senator Hill will have little time to talk politics in Albany. There was a rumor at Upper Red Hook the day Mr. Bryan accepted the invitation to be the guest of Chairman Hinkley of the state democratic committee at Winnisook lodge in the Catskills that Senator Hill would meet him in the quiet of that mountain camp, where they would be free from interruption and from the likelihood of having too much public attention drawn to their conference. As Mr. Bryan has promised to stay over the night at the lodge the idea seemed more reasonable than a meeting in Albany with all the rush and bustle that will probably attend the candidate's short stay there. He is down for a speech in Capitol city, and a handshaking reception is also contemplated, so that the call on Senator Hill at Wolferts Roost, the senator's residence, must necessarily be of short duration.

Good-bye to Upper Red Hook.

The lodge consists of a number of cottages situated in an isolated locality on Slide mountain. Thomas E. Benedict, public printer at Washington, is the president of the club which owns the cottages, and nearly all of the members are prominently identified with the democratic party in New York state. Mr. and Mrs. Bryan will say good-bye to Upper Red Hook early this afternoon and proceed to Rhinecliffe by carriage. A tug will be at Rhinecliffe to carry them across the Hudson to Rondout, where they are to take the Ulster & Delaware railroad for Big Indian. It is ten miles by mountain roads from Big Indian to Winnisook Lodge, and the candidate and his wife are likely to be late in reaching their resting place. To-morrow they will leave Winnisook Lodge in time to catch the New York Central train leaving Rhinecliffe at 2:20 p. m. They are scheduled to arrive in Albany at 4:05 p. m., and will start for Syracuse at 7:55.

At Divine Service.

Rain was pouring down when Mr. Bryan left the residence of his host, Mr. Perrine, to attend service at the Upper Red Hook Dutch Reformed church yesterday. The church is situated about a hundred yards from Mr Perrine's house, and the candidate walked over with Mr. Perrine by his side. There was no unusual crowd present. Rev. G. D. Lydecker, the pastor of the church, conducted the services and in his prayer thus referred to Mr. Bryan: "And specially bless Thy servant whom we have in our midst, Thy honored servant; fill him with wisdom and power for the anxities and fatigue of the coming days, and fill him with hope and confidence in all Thy purposes concerning him and these people." The sermon was preached by Dr. Robert H. Barr of the Associated Reformed church of Newburgh. He made no direct references to the democratic candidate. After the services both ministers came down from the pulpit and shook hands with Mr. Bryan, many of the congregation doing the same.

Will Not Speak at Chautauqua.

The position taken by president Lewis Miller of the Chautauqua assembly concerning the report that the democratic candidate would speak at Chautauqua next Sunday is endorsed by Mr. Bryan. Several newspapers contain a statement from President Miller denying that Mr. Bryan would speak there unless an arrangement could be made to have Major McKinley appear, and when this was shown Mr. Bryan he said: "I shall not speak there. Being interested in Chautauqua work, my wife and I will avail ourselves of the opportunity to see the parent association. The work of the association is non-partisan, and the president is quite right in saying that neither candidate should speak there unless both are invited."

Will Be Dined by Hill.

Albany, Aug. 24.—Former senator Norman T. Chase, chairman of the democratic city committee, was asked this morning whether he knew anything about the story that Mr. Bryan was to be entertained by Senator Hill at Wolforts Roost while in Albany. Mr. Chase said: "Yes. As a matter of personal courtesy to the distinguished visitor at Albany, Senator Hill, through the committee has invited Mr. Bryan and his wife and a few personal friends to dine with him at Wolforts Roost on Tuesday afternoon at 5 half past 6 o'clock on City Hall square when Mr. Bryan makes a speech, Mr. Chase said: "The meeting is to be very simple in its character and of brief duration. Mr. Bryan will not speak for more than half an hour and possibly not longer than twenty minutes. Almost immediately after he finishes, it will be necessary for Mr. Bryan to start for the railroad station. The people will be anxious only to hear the democratic candidate for president. No one could address the audience in advance of Mr. Bryan with advantage and after he concludes his address, it is likely that every one will wish to shake hands with Mr. Bryan. The committee of arrangements does not think it best to ask Senator Hill to speak or preside at this time.

American Barbed Wire Ahead in Japan

Washington, Aug. 24.—A report received at the department of state from Consul Warner at Cologne, shows that Americans are under-selling the Germans in barbed wire and wire nails in Japan. Hamburg importing houses are forced to buy the American wire because their customers have begun to purchase it directly from the United States. American competition, though felt elsewhere, has been especially noticeable in Japan.

Cleveland Has Not Written to Bynum.

Indianapolis, Aug. 24.—Chairman Bynum of the national democratic executive committee said yesterday: "Any rumor to the effect that Mr. Cleveland has written to me or has in any way indicated any indisposition toward the nomination of a ticket is utterly without foundation. Furthermore, this convention will without any manner of doubt nominate a democratic candidate for president and vice-president upon a democratic platform."

THE BRAIN

Parts of the Cerebellum May Be Destroyed and Rest red.

Visual Lobe of the Monkey Replaced—Possibility of the Future to Grow a New Brain as a Lobster Grows His Claw.

[COPYRIGHT, 1896.]

Recent experiments by M. Vitzou, a French physiologist, lead to a somewhat sensational conclusion, and may possibly explain some wonderful and inexplicable recoveries from brain injury that have been reported in the past. That conclusion, briefly stated, is that a part of the brain, when entirely destroyed or removed, may be replaced by the growth of new brain cells. If this be true, then the brain—the dominating organ of the animal economy—possesses a property that is shared by none of the lower organs over which it presides, namely, that of natural replacement after injury. If a man's finger is cut off by a circular saw, no one expects to see a new finger grow out in its place; if he loses an eye, we do not look for another to replace it, yet if M. Vitzou is right, the destruction of an important lobe of the brain, for instance that which presides over sight, need not be hopeless—the cells will gradually form again and respond to the visual impressions received through the optic nerve, as before.

This property of regrowth is common among the lower creatures. If a lobster's claw be taken off, a new one will grow in its place. With still lower organisms the removal of almost any amount of tissue is scarcely a serious affair, and its replacement is largely a matter of time. Now it appears that the higher animals share this power, at least with respect to one organ, and that the most important of all.

This is not altogether a new idea. It has been advanced before, and has even been made the subject of somewhat heated controversy, but M. Vitzou's experiments are so apparently decisive that they may settle the matter, although in science all questions are open and no one may consider that he has said a permanent "last word." However this may be, these are the experiments that seem to settle the matter. They were tried, not on man, it is necessary to say—for it is not yet legal to scoop out even part of a human brain while the owner yet lives—but on some of his nearest relatives among the lower animals, namely, monkeys. The opponents of vivisection would doubtless raise their voices in energetic protest at the cruelty shown to these creatures. That experimentation of this kind must necessarily be cruel, few will deny, but to the enthusiastic physiologist cruelty is quite justifiable when it leads to the asquisition of scientific knowledge.

In this case, that part of the brain was removed from each of the monkeys, that presides over the sense of sight, the part without which any one of us would be quite as blind as if his eyes were put out. It was quite evident, after the operation, that the animals were, in fact, totally blind. They were kept and cared for, and as the months went on they seemed to be on the way to recovery. Finally in about a year's time it was evident that they saw, if not as perfectly as before, at least partially; that is, something was performing the functions of the removed brain tissue. So far, the experiment can hardly be said to be conclusive, for cases have been known where one part of the brain has been able to perform the duty of another part. It may have been, then, that the task of responding to visual impressions had been learned by some other part of the brain. The monkeys were therefore operated upon again—part of the skull was removed, and the brain was examined. The part that had been taken out was found to be partly replaced by a growth of new cells, so that it seems practically certain that it was this new brain-growth that had been the cause of the partial restoration of sight.

What will this all lead to? If it will be of any benefit to the human race, then the poor monkeys suffered and died in a good cause. If a monkey's brain cells can grow again, so, undoubtedly, can a man's, and this fact gives us reason to hope for recovery in cases of serious brain injury that before seemed hopeless. Again, if such growth is possible, means of fostering and stimulating it are probable, and will doubtless be the objects of future research. Some old, in which case startling and sensational results may follow—though this may seem to be looking too far into the realms of mere possibility. But why should not a weak part of the brain be cut out and replaced with a new and healthy growth of brain cells? Why should not the idiot be given in this way a new thinking machine, and the imbecile, the paranoiac, the crank, be fitted out with new mental apparatus?

In the days to come the statement that John Smith has just been growing a new cerebellum in the hospital may be heard, with no more surprise than is now caused by the news of an operation for appendicitis. The question would then arise: Who is the reconstructed John Smith? Has his personality altered? Is he the same or another? But this must be left to the physiologists and the courts of law of the year 1950—or thereabouts.

HOARDS IN OLD VESSELS.

Some Rare Finds When They Are Being Broken Up.

The utilization of apparent waste is well exemplified in the breaking up of ships of various kinds, for every nail and every chip are put aside for sale; but in the case of vessels of considerable tonnage, and especially of very old craft, finds both curious and valuable are by no means rare. To give a recent instance, an old wooden vessel that was broken up near Greenwich only a few months back revealed a very curious sight when some old planking in the forecastle had been torn down. Here, nailed up, were the two mummified hands of a negro, and in the palm of each hand, and transfixed by the same nails that held the hands, were two counterfeit silver dollars. The hands had been hacked off roughly. A year or two ago the breaking up of an old schooner near Sheerness brought to light beneath the inner "skin" of the hull quite an elaborate armament of a very old-fashioned kind, and a friend of the writer secured, from among the many weapons included, a splendidly-made bell-mouthed flintlock musket, the stock being marked with a representation of arm and leg fetters, and the name "Philip Steyne, Boston, Lincolnshire." The most curious part of this find was a set of books—a privateer's books evidently—showing the capture of various French vessels. Tied up in a canvas bag 190 guineas in gold were found a year or two back during the breaking up of an old vessel lying between Birkenhead and New Brighton. With the money were found, too, a most curious and unique set of foreign playing cards, some loaded dice and three magnificent pieces of amber. All these were found in the false bottom of a wooden bunk.

But even during the breaking up of quite modern vessels which have become wrecks, remarkable finds, particularly relating to smuggling contrivances, are by no means rare. In a portion of a considerable wreck on the southeast coast only the winter before last the shipbreakers found, hidden in a part of the engine-room, a quantity of valuable jewelry and a number of newspaper clippings and published portraits relating to a murder and robbery at St. Louis, in the United States. The jewelry found was that described in the reports as missing. Two of the men employed in the engine-room were drowned in the wreck, but, so far as all inquiries made by the police could show, there was no clew to attach either the drowned men or the other engine-room hands with the published descriptions and portraits of the murderer. The mistery was never cleared up. The manager of a shipbreaker, a man who has been 40 years in the business and who was especially sought out by the writer, told the latter that he could cite some hundreds of cases where hiding-places for small articles smuggled by officers and men had been found, these being connected with nearly every part of the hulls broken up, and he produced several articles that had been found by himself or his men. Many of these were false or duplicate bills of lading, and there were counterfeit foreign coins, a pair of heavy gold earrings with a turquoise in each—probably stolen by one foreign seaman from another—a hand grenade with a cap to it, an old wig with three small gold nuggets wrapped in it, and many other small trifles. "At Rotherhithe, some years ago," said he, "in the forepeak of a very old wooden merchantman, we found the skeleton of a lad jammed behind the skin of the vessel. The lad had been a stowaway in all probability. A gentleman at Rotherhithe keeps the skull now, or did till lately."—Cassell's Saturday Journal.

Delicate Dress Goods.

Some gowns are so dainty in the weave, so delicate in tint, that they seem to soil by being looked at—one or two wearings making them unpresentable, NOT USELESS. We make a specialty of cleaning fine fabrics, the more delicate the material, the better the results. Sometimes an accident will ruin a gown, without injuring the texture. We dye them then, sometimes we get a prettier effect than the original color. Fine goods stand redyeing. The finer the material the better the new color. We charge so little for cleaning or dyeing, that even if you are in doubt as to the result, it's worth while to experiment. Want a new evening gown for a dollar or two? Laundry drivers will receive your work.

GERMAN MINISTRY

A General Shaking Up Expected Before November.

HOHENLOHE WANTS TO GET OUT

Two Parties Within the Government Fighting Each Other Desperately—Bieberstein and Several Others Destined To Be Elbowed Out.

Berlin, Aug. 24.—Before the reichstag reassembles in November it is certain that there will be important changes in the cabinet if, indeed, an entire revision of the ministry does not take place. Despite the persistent semi-official denials that Prince Hohenlohe, the imperial chancellor, is on the eve of retirement from office, the Boersen Zeitung hits the mark squarely in stating that the chancellor asked the emperor for his dismissal at the time of his recent visit to the kaiser at Wilhelmslohe, knowing that the Hahnke-Lucanus cabal prevailed against him, but the emperor induced the prince to remain in office until after the visit of the czar and czarina to Breslau. The Freisinnige Zeitung (radical), in an article discussing the character of the future cabinet, asserts that during the emperor's recent trip to the Nordland Count Botho zu Eulenberg, master of ceremonies at the imperial court of Germany, accompanied by his cousin, Count Doenhaff, followed the kaiser's route throughout his majesty's tour and kept up constant communication by telegraph with his brother, Count Philip Eulenburg, German ambassador to Austria, who accompanied the kaiser in the capacity of representative of the foreign office. The motive of the Freisinnige Zeitung in making this statement is to depict the emperor as the central figure in the intrigues for a change in the chancellorship, and this opinion of the matter has obtained the ready support of a large number of persons in and out of official life, in view of all that is now transpiring in official circles.

The Two Parties Fighting Desperately.

The feature of the existing imbroglio is that two parties exist within the government which are fighting each other desperately. First there is Freiherr Marshall von Bieberstein, minister of foreign affairs, whose inspired organ, the Cologne Gazette, declares that it is impossible to consider the kaiser's military cabinet as identical with the emperor himself, and second, there is the practically governing Gen. von Hahnke, the chief of the kaiser's military cabinet, who, through the medium of the Reichsanzeiger, the official gazette, states that the military cabinet only exercies the emperor's behests. Freiherr Bieberstein himself seems destined to be elbowed out of the cabinet, and Dr. Lucanus, the chief of the emperor's civil cabinet, is mentioned as having a very good chance of being promoted to a higher office. Nobody connected with the semi-official press nor anybody connected with the government has hitherto supposed that Dr. Lucanus held the inside of the track, but that personage is now accredited with being fully informed of everything that the kaiser intends to do.

Outlook of Crops.

Although the statistics of the current harvests are still incomplete a sufficient number of reports have been received at the department of agriculture upon which to base an estimate that there will be a medium crop of wheat and rye in Germany and a fine harvest of both of these grains in Austria-Hungary. The general failure of the cereal crops in Russia and the prohibition of time operations on the bourses in Germany are leading to speculative transactions in import orders upon the chance that a demand for the grain thus purchased will spring up. The agrarian newspapers are advising home producers to hold on to their grain with the assistance of bank advances and the position points to reaction with keen competition between home grown and imported grains. Concerning the state of the crops in Russia the consensus of opinion is that the harvest there is an absolute failure. The crops in the great southern area are fair, but in the basins of the Volga, Dnieper and Don the general average is very bad. It is reported that a famine exists in the Kherson districts of southern Russia and that the local authorities are appealing to the government for relief, else the people must die from starvation.

United States To Investigate an Outrage

The United States consular agent at Kiel has informed the representative of the United Associated Presses that the United States attorney general has taken up the case of the steamer Hermann, which shipped at Libau, Russia, on January 20, 1896, thirty emigrants, who were put on board the ship and treated in such an inhuman manner that six of them died and the others narrowly escaped the same fate. It appears that the six who died were locked in a close compartment of the vessel and expired from suffocation a few hours after the ship had left the harbor of Libau. The bodies of the dead men were thrown overboard and the survivors were threatened with being brought back to Russia if they revealed the fate of their companions.

Wail Over Samoa.

The Hamburg Correspondent, a semi-official organ, demands that energetic steps be at once taken to protect German interests in Samoa against the encroachments of American adventurers. The paper asserts that Americans are actively seizing the trade in Samoa, ignoring the international arrangements entirely. The Freisinnige Zeitung, replying to this article, says that Samoa is not worth quarreling over with the United States and England.

To Protect the Czar.

The Russian police will co-operate with the Berlin police in the matter of guarding the czar and czarina upon the occasion of their coming visit to Breslau. A large number of members of the Russian secret service police will arrive at Breslau several days before the arrival of the imperial party. The railways touching Berlin will suspend freight traffic during the presence of the czar in Germany, and a special watch will be kept at Hamburg, Bremen and other ports to prevent the entry of suspicious persons or explosives. These precautions are being taken upon the strength of reports that the anarchists in London have been plotting against the czar's life.

REW ALIVE AND WELL.

The Cornell Student Who Disappeared in 1894 Now Returning from India.

Buffalo, Aug. 24.—Grederick Gordon Rew, the Cornell student who disappeared on Oct. 2, 1894, and was supposed to have met with foul play, has been heard from. His father, Esbon B. Rew of this city, received a letter from him yesterday dated in India, stating that he was in good health and bound for home. His reason for leaving college was that he found that his knowledge of French and German was limited and was confident he would be unable to keep up with his class, and rather than fail he believed it would be better to go among the people and learn the language. For five years he had been crowding himself in his studies, and says he did not feel able to longer continue the strain, and one afternoon while at the lower end of Cayuga lake, and out for a walk, there came over him a desire that was irresistible, and, discouraged and tired, he followed this resistless force and left the country. After leaving Cornell he went to New York, engaged passage on a cattle ship and worked his way to Bordeaux, France. At this place he secured employment with an electric firm that was to erect an electric plant in Central America. He sailed from Honduras in the early of 1895, visiting Jamaica, Martinique and Cuba, and then returned to France, where he contracted to look after the electric machinery of a tramp trading ship bound for the East Indies. His knowledge of mathematics, physics and Latin has kept him employed and enabled him to see much of the world. The knowledge of his son's safety has brought great joy to the family of Mr. Rew.

JUMPED OVERBOARD AT SEA.

Suicide of Mrs. H. M. Stephenson of Boston—The Body Not Recovered.

New York, Aug. 24.—Mrs. H. M. Stephenson of Boston, accompanied by her son Walter, were saloon passengers who embarked on board the Netherland-American line steamer Spaarndam at Boulogne-sur-Mer, France, on August 13. On the 20th at 6:30 p. m., the vessel being then in latitude 44.16, longitude 55.48, Mrs. Stephenson ordered the steward to serve her dinner on the hurricane deck, stating at the time that she was somewhat ill. When the steward returned to the deck he was just in time to observe Mrs. Stephenson jump from the rail overboard into the sea. An alarm was instantly given and the steamer stopped and backed. A boat was quickly launched but nothing was seen of the unfortunate woman. Mrs. Stephenson's husband resides in Boston. She was about 42 years of age.

Miss Nellie Schutt, of Duer street, has purchased a new Crescent wheel from the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company.

Dr. J. C. Condit and F. Pettint, of New Brunswick, rode to this city Saturday evening, and when coming through the mud near the city line on Park avenue Dr. Condit punctured a tire. The bike was doctored up by a local bicycle physician and the owner was able to ride it home.

A delegation of eight of the members from the Bayonne Rowing Association Cyclers, headed by Captain Taylor, came to this city yesterday and dined at W. J. Stephenson's on North avenue. Some 150 or more of the members will come here next Sunday on a run, and they will be entertained at the same place.

Charles Anthony, of New Germantown, rode his bike to this city yesterday afternoon on his way to New York where he is employed with the wholesale commission house of W. J. Myers & Co., of Washington street. Mr. Anthony reports the roads heavy in many places, but the Plainfield roadbeds he prounced as par excellence.

There is soon to be a hill-climbing contest on one of the steep hills which abound in New Jersey. It is to be hoped that such contests will end there, as they are a detriment to all who take part, and any ordinary rider on a bicycle who has had any experience in touring knows only too well the effect which the climbing of hills has upon him. There are many wheelmen who, from the novelty of the contest, are likely to enter, but have no business to do so, and on whom the effect is more than likely to result in a permanent injury. A short time ago a wheelman who was spending his vacation in Sullivan county, N. Y., and near whose house there was a steep hill, made the boast that he could ride it. The attempt was made, and successfully, but in less than two hours he died from the effects of the exertion. To all appearances he was strong physically and in the best of health.

WITH ROD AND GUN.

President John Goff of the local branch of the State game and Fish Protective society has called a meeting for to-morrow night in Percy C. Ohl's office in the Babcock building at eight o'clock. All the members are requested to be present, as business of vast importance is to come up for consideration.

AROUND THE BASES.

The Elizabeth Athletic Club's baseball team did not come to this city Saturday owing to the uncertainty of the weather and the muddy condition of the grounds. Consequently the Y. M. C. A. boys did not play.

Want a Band Stand.

Nate Guttman has a petition in circulation seeking to raise enough money among the business men to build a band stand to be used at the free open air concerts. It should meet with a hearty response from those solicited.

Broke His Arm.

Samuel Vail, one of the Western Union Telegaph messenger boys, met with an accident Saturday morning. He was walking through the fish car and was just about to jump out when he caught his arm on a projecting iron and broke it several inches above the elbow. He is now recovering from the effects of the accident at his home, 405 Watchung avenue.

TO AID THE DESERVING POOR.

A Scheme to Have Them Clear and Cultivate Land For Themselves.

Frederick Gardner, the General Secretary of the Orange Valley Young Men's Christian Association, is the originator of another novel plan to provide work and shelter for the poor of that vicinity. He is accepting offers of the use of woodland property in the mountains and vicinity from property owners who wish the land cleared. This land he will turn over to the deserving poor, with the stipulation that if they clear off the tract assigned to them they may have the timber and also the land for four years, for which term a lease is to be made, and which will insure the improvement of the property for the benefit of the owner as well as the occupant. Considerable property, including a large tract of woodland owned by George Spottiswoode, has already been turned over to Mr. Gardner in furtherance of the project.

The vacant lots and tracts of land which were given over to the poor for cultivation at the commencement of of the season under the supervision of the Bureau of Associated Charities, and a committee of citizens, of which Thomas B. Burnett, the Overseer of the Poor, is Chairman, have all borne good fruit, and the yield of vegetables, largely potatoes, on the many garden patches will be big.

Some 500 bushels of potatoes have been raised, and Mr. Burnett, who is arranging for a display by these farmers from necessity at the State Fair at Waverly, is confident that some of their products will win premiums.

USED A SQUIRREL FOR BAIT.

Californian Pulled a Rattlesnake from His Hole with a Bushytail.

"I have always been an enthusiastic lover of the rifle," said ex-Senator Sprague at Sacramento the other day, "and during my hunting trips through the mountains have had numerous encounters with rattlesnakes, some of which were simply hair-lifting, and I think I can safely lay claim to having killed the largest rattlesnake ever seen in this portion of the state.

"It was on the headwaters of Cash creek, in Yolo county. My brother and I were returning to camp after an unsuccessful trip for deer, and discovered the snake curled up in a recess among the bowlders that littered the canyon we were passing through.

"As it was impossible to get a shot at the snake, owing to its sheltered position, I procured a pole and stirred it up. After rattling angrily for a few seconds it came out and threw itself into the creek, swimming handily, with its head and six inches of its body out of the water. We shot the snake, fished it out of the creek, and found that it weighed 24 pounds and had 19 rattles, several having evidently been taken off.

"Another occurrence is seemingly impossible of belief, yet I can vouch for the truth of the story. Once while hunting in the sink of Cash creek my attention was called to the peculiar action of a ground squirrel. I watched it a minute and then shot it. Hurrying to the spot, I nearly stepped upon a large rattlesnake, which had evidently been engaged in charming the animal.

"The snake turned at my approach and escaped down a squirrel hole. The thought struck me that possibly I could attract the snake out of the hole by means of its intended prey, so I cut the squirrel open with my hunting knife, put a rough stone in its interior to give it weight, took a piece of twine and tied it around the body of the squirrel to retain the rock, attached it to the dried limb of a tree and inserted it in the hole.

"The squirrel slipped out of sight, and shortly afterward when I attempted to withdraw it I found that my scheme had been successful.

"The resistance of the snake was simply wonderful, and I had to exert considerable strength to pull the reptile out. When it came out, it was with a jerk, and to prevent it from striking me in the face, I threw it over my head. The end of the limb snapped, and the snake flew through the air and lodged in a thicket of buckthorn brush, which it was impossible for men to penetrate, and so the snake escaped.

"The following summer, while hunting in the same vicinity, I shot a large rattler, and noticing a peculiar swelling in the body, I cut it open, and found in the interior the same rock I had placed in the body of the squirrel, which I identified by a thread of quartz running through it, the only difference being that all the sharp angles were worn away, the stone being perfectly smooth, probably from the effects of food digestion during the year."—San Francisco Call.

BOLTERS ARE NOT BOLD.

DISSENTING DEMOCRATS HEISITATING OVER A THIRD TICKET.

It is Said That Many Gold Democrats Fear the Notoriety Attathed to the Movement for a New Party Organization.

The Herald this morning published the following concerning the "sound money" movement in this State:

The plans for the Sound Money Democratic State Convention are all completed. The members of the Provisional State Committee are now at work raising the cry throughout the State for the gold Democrats to come and help them. There are doubts whether the convention will be a success numerically, because of the lack of courage on the part of some of the gold Democrats and indifference of others.

The convention will take place in Taylor's Opera House, Trenton, tomorrow afternoon. Former Senator Henry D. Winton, of Bergen, who is chairman of the Provisional State Committee, will preside. Twenty delegates to the Indianapolis Convention will be selected, and an address will be made by former Secretary of the Treasury Charles S. Fairchild, who served during Cleveland's first administration. There will be no other speakers. It is probable that a new State Committee will be chosen, but that all depends on the size of the convention.

It is a matter of surprise to many that the most prominent sound money Democrats have so far kept aloof from the movement. Senator McPherson has returned from the Far West, much restored in health, expressing much surprise that so many Democrats have gone over to the silver craze. He stiffens up the spinal column of the gold Democrats by speaking in no uncertain terms in favor of gold, but he does not say a word in the way of indorsement of the movement inaugurated by his friend Senator Winton.

Secretary of State Kelsey has started on a six weeks' trip to Europe, and when he left was still in doubt whether a third party movement was the wisest thing to do. Former Senator Jonathan Blackwell, of Trenton, will not serve on the Provisional State Committee, because he says that he has no time. County Collector Samuel Walker, an original gold man, has not identified himself with the new movement, although he has left the regular Silver State Committee.

R. V. Lindabury, formerly of Elizabeth, but now of Newark, who was prominent in the Citizens' League movement against the race tracks, has declared against silver, and announces that he will resign as a member of Senator Smith's State Committee, but in his letter to the public does not state what he will do about the move of the gold Democrats. Allan L. McDermott, who urged the new organization, is silent. Senator Smith, who led the gold Democrats at Chicago is in retreat at Carlsbad.

E. F. C. Young, of Jersey City, declares for gold, but beyond this he does not intimate whether he will assist the Provisional Committee. Daniel T. Campbell, a prominent business man of Newark, has come out for gold, but he has not lent a helping hand to Senator Winton's committee. Stephen Meeker, who has had several good State appointments, is out in a card against the Chicago platform; so is Major General Joseph Plume, division commander of the National Guard.

MARSH OUT FOR BRYAN.

Cannot Indorse all the Platform, but Says "I Am a Democrat."

Former Senator Frederick C. Marsh proposes to support the Democratic nominees for President and Vice-President, and he wants it understood that he is not whipped into line.

"There are some features about the Chicago platform," said Mr. Marsh last evening, "that I decidedly dissent from, but I have received too many honors from the Democratic party to desert it in this emergency. I have not said anything since my return from the Chicago Convention because I did not see that it was necessary. I am a Democrat and stand by the action of my party as such, even while I cannot subscribe to all the declarations of the Chicago platform. I expect to cast my vote for Bryan and Sewall."

Judge Brown Missing.

Judge Fred Brown, of the borough, was missing this morning at the opening of the Cracker Barrel Club meeting, and his whereabouts were unknown. Several of the members gathered in H. N. Spencer's store and waited patiently for the Judge until 11 o'clock, and as he did not show up it is surmised that he overslept. Such audacious and unexplained actions will not be tolerated in the future.

THREE BURGLARS IN FIVE HOUSES

Trio of Industrious Cracksmen Make the Rounds at Somerville.

Three masked burglars entered five houses on the outskirts of Somerville at an early hour Saturday morning. They first tried the house of Policeman Koch while the officer was asleep, but his wife heard them before they had taken anything, and when the policeman got down they had gone. They next entered the cellar of ex-Sheriff William Ross, and, going to an upper room, opened a drawer in which was a roll of bills. About that time a watch dog made such a time that they fled before finding the money.

David Hardenburgh, who lives near by, was awaken by the burglars' efforts to enter his house, and he pursued them in the moonlight for a quarter of a mile with a rifle. He saw their masks, but did not get an opportunity to fire.

The burglars subsequently entered James Kinsey's house and secured $16 and some clothing. Returning toward Somerville they entered the house of David Holmes. They went to his bedroom and took $5 from his trousers and two pocketbooks.

The house of William Oppie, of South Somerville, was entered a few nights before, while the family was absent, and stripped of all the silver and other valuables.

SOON TO BE REMOVED.

The Old Freight House Will Soon be Transported to Another Spot.

The removal of the old freight house will soon become a reality, and in the course of a few months Plainfield's commuters and others from the southeast side of the track can drive to and from the North avenue station without molestation from puffing and snorting locomotives.

Station Agent Joseph Haynes assures The Press that a gang of men will be put to work today laying the nencessary tracks and turnouts for the removal of the old and obnoxious looking freight house. This building, while it had served the public for many years, had become an eyesore to most of the commuters, and it was through their efforts that the building is to be removed.

The local truckmen, it is said, are about to organize among themselves and raise the price for carrying freight. This action, the truckmen say, is due to the fact that the distance is now three times greater than it was heretofore.

THEIR EIGHTH ANNIVERSARY.

Mizpah Lodge, I. O. O. L. Celebrate it With a Dance and Festival.

Mizpah Lodge, No. 1, I. O. O. L., celebrated the eighth anniversary of its organization last night with a peach and ice-cream festival in Red Men's Hall, West Front street.

The principal feature of the evening was dancing which began early and continued until long after midnight and despite the warm weather which prevailed the floor was at all times filled with dancers and all were loathe to depart for home when the time for closing came and all voted it a most successful anniversary celebration.

The music was furnished by Prof. Frazee.

The committee in charge consisted of Mrs. A. Cox, chairman, Mrs. Randolph, Mrs. H. W. Angleman, Mrs. Page and Mrs. James Radin.

Justice Newcorn's Court.

Justice Newcorn's court has been a busy place the last few days. Yesterday quite a number of cases came up for trial. The cases of VanWinkle against Johnson, on contract, and Johnson against Huffman, on contract, were settled. The cases of McVey against Johnson, on contract, Sherman and others against Kennedy, on contract, and Sherman and others against Laster, in tort, were adjourned for one week. Judgment was rendered in favor of the plaintiff in the following cases and an execution or dispossess warrant issued in each case: Runyon against Hann, on contract, White against Coddington, landlord and tenant, and Hand against Daume, on contract.

Eloped From Perth Amboy.

Laura Hanson and J. F. Humphries, both of Perth Amboy, were united in marriage last evening by Justice Frazee at Rahway. They said they came here to be married because friends objected to it. After the ceremony the Judge kissed the bride, and the couple started for Perth Amboy.

A SON OF ITALY'S TRICKS.

"MISTRESS" TOBIN IS AFTER HIM WITH THE ROD OF LAW.

He Occupied One of Her Houses and Besides Failing to Pay Rent He Caused Damages By Burning Out the Chimney.

Nearly a month ago The Daily Press readers were told of a certain Italian, living in this city, who stole his own wagon from a wheelwright in Elizabeth who had just repaired it. The brilliant plans of this long-headed native of sunny Italy were suddenly shattered by the quickness of the Plainfield police and he was finally brought to justice. His Italian name is unpronounceable, but its nearest approach in English is Pulitiso. His first name is Michael or Gabriel, according to circumstances.

At the time of his little unpleasantness he lived in a house on West Fourth street, owned by "Mistress" Jane L. Tobin, as she prefers to be called.

Evidently Pulitso has a hankering after getting something for nothing, hence his wish to get his wagon back without paying for the repairs.

His landlady has discovered that he has been putting up some kind of a game on her also. When he lived in her house he kept putting off the question of rent until finally she made him leave the premises, as he showed no intention of paying. Then she wanted her back rent and he smilingly informed her that he might possibly pay it at the end of two years.

Then "Mistress" Tobin's ire rose and she consulted with Constable Mattox as to the best plan to recover the rent. He recommended an interview with Justice Newcorn and to that officer "Mistress" Tobin went this morning, appropriately attired for such an important task.

Not being specially well versed in law, some of her sugestions were rather startling. The Justice finally managed to learn that the amount of rent due was $8.75, and that this same tenant had, according to Mistress Tobin, set fire purposely to the chimney and partially destroyed it. She wanted to sue Pulitiso for both the rent and damages together, but the Justice said that it would require two seperate cases.

When asked if she wanted that, she beemed on the Justice and remarked that she didn't. "I don't want to let you justices and constables make too much money." The Justice smiled.

It was finally decided that suit should be brought against Pulitiso to recover the $8.75 of rent. Mistress Tobin was not exactly sure where her former tenant was to be found but thought he was living among the Short Hills. He, still drives a horse and wagon and may be in Elizabeth even now on the lookout for another bargain in somebody's back yard.

Capitalists May Locate Here.

It is stated upon most excellent authority that several capitalists are willing and about ready to place considerable money in this city for manufacturing purposes. The plant, it is understood, will eclipse the Singer Sewing Machine Works at Elizabethport, and most of the employees will reside here. So it seems that Plainfield is rapidly forging to the head as a manufacturing centre, and although its water facilities are limited, there is plenty of room for factories of this magnitude.

After the Garden Sass.

Daniel Vermeule, of Watchung avenue, takes great pride in his garden, which he has filled with a variety of choice vegetables. A night or two ago someone went into the garden and carried away about three dozen ears of fine sweet corn, besides a lot of horseradish. The thief left the corn stalks, but "Dan" has neither horse or cow to feed them to, so they are only now in the way. If the thief will exchange addresses with Mr. Vermeule the latter will send the cornstalks around to him free of charge.

Last Excursion of the Season.

The last excursion of the season from this city to Ocean Grove will be that of Warren Chapel on Thursday, August 27th. Those in charge have every assurance that the weather will be fine, and as the train does not leave the Grove until 5:50 p. m. a long day is promised the excursionists there. Tickets are $1.25 and children 90 cents.

MORE POLLUTION FOUND

HEALTH INSPECTORS FIND A NEW SEWER RUNNING INTO THE BROOK.

The Test Showed That a House Owned by L. W. Serrell, a Member of the Board of Health, Was Connected With Brook.

By the investigation conducted by William N. Pangborn and Peter Weaver, Health Inspectors of the borough and city, this morning, L. W. Serrell is to be put in the embarrassing position of violating a law which, as a member of the Board of Health of this city, it is his duty to assist in enforcing. The inconsistent position of Mr. Serrell is brought about by a renewal of activity on the part of the borough officers in suppressing what little remains of the pollution of Green brook by the running of sewers into its channels.

Though the North avenue sewer was the principal offender in this respect, its disuse for the last few months did not entirely end the nuisance. It was known that there were other short sewers running into the brook, and one of these was the Giraud avenue one which drained a number of houses on Plainfield avenue.

For some time past the borough officials have been anxious to locate the property owners using this pipe, but they wanted the city to join with them in finding the offenders.

This morning Inspectors Pangborn and Weaver took several bottles of the coloring fluid, which the former used when securing evidence against the users of the North avenue sewer, and went to Plainfield avenue. They selected a house owned by Mr. Serrell and poured a bottle of the red fluid into one of the wash basins. Then they went to the outlet of the sewer and after sometime the colored fluid came flowing out of the pipe with the tint which proved the source from which it came. This was all the evidence they desired.

Inspector Pangborn will make a report to the Borough Board of Health. As in the North avenue sewer case, they will instruct Corporation Counsel Reed to bring action before the Court of Chancery to issue a mandamus to compel Mr. Serrell to stop using the sewer.

There are several other houses connected with the sewer, but an action against one is sufficient to stop all.

A BRILLIANT BLAZE.

A Burning Haystack Calls Out the Department.

A bright glare illuminated the fields near Netherwood last evening soon after eight o'clock, and the good Republicans who had been attending their primaries, flocked in that direction. Then the fire alarm whistle startled the town with its deep tones. There was something the matter, however, for the whistle blew but once. Out came the fire department, as much at a loss as the crowd regarding the whereabouts of the fire.

Charles W. Runyon, the local manager of the N. Y. and N. J. Telephone Company, was sitting in his office when the one blow sounded. He realized that something was wrong and hurried to the fire department headquarters. The instant he reached the battery room, his practiced eye saw a broken zinc that had been eaten away by the acid in the cell. The defect was just corrected in time for another alarm to come in from Box 27, which had been pulled by Ben Sutton. The first alarm had been sent in from Box 23.

The fire proved to be of little account. A stack of rye, not yet threshed, belonging to Noah Terry and on Thomas Mimford's property near the corner of Woodland and Putnam avenues, had caught fire and was blazing merrily. A line of hose was laid from Watchung avenue and the fire extinguished. Its origin was probably incendiary.

Wedded Very Quietly.

Washingtonville society was a little bit surprised yesterday when it was whispered in their circles that William H. Smith had taken a wife. It was announced that Cupid had ended Mr. Smith's bachelorhood days last Saturday when Miss Wolf became his wife. The nuptial knot was tied at the home of the bride's brother in Washingtonville. Last night the happy couple's friends gave them a merry serenade when the groom responded gallantly and served the party with ice cream and lemonade.

A Menace to Pedestrians.

There seems to be an unnecessary delay in the laying of one hundred and seventy-nine feet of flagstone sidewalk on South avenue west of the Netherwood station, and in the laying of a portion of the curb on LaGrande avenue. The stone has been ready for several weeks and in its present position is a menace to the pedestrians safety at night.

STILL TALK OF MARTINE.

Notwithstanding the Orator's Declaration the Sentiment is in His Favor.

Notwithstanding that James E. Martine has declared that he is not a candidate for the Democratic Congressional nomination in this district, the talk in his favor still continues, as will be seen from the following taken from the Newark News yesterday:

It is announced in political circles by the friends of James E. Martine that the "Farmer Orator" of Plainfield is sure of the Democratic nomination for Congress in the Eighth District. They claim he will have the delegates from Rahway, Plainfield and all the townships of Union, together with Orange, South Orange, and most of the townships of Essex.

Elizabeth, it is believed, will elect a majority of Martine delegates, but Bayonne is as yet an unknown quantity. It is thought that city will have a candidate of its own, perhaps Judge Thomas F. Noonan.

Politicians here declare that the talk of renominating ex-Congressman Dunn is all nonsense, and that the latter at present is out of politics. Mr. Dunn is unpopular with the Democrats of Plainfield and several of the Union County townships, and they would fight him should he seek a Congressional nomination.

Thomas F. Lane, of Summit, is spoken of as a prospective Senatorial candidate, as it is hinted ex-Senator Fred C. Marsh has no desire this year to be an aspirant for the place.

So far as Sheriff is concerned, the Democrats are all at sea and likely to remain so for some weeks to come.

DRINK LED TO DISHONESTY.

Baker Confessed to a Crime and Was Sent to Prison for a Long Term.

John Baker, of Bound Brook, has been taken to the State Prison to serve one year and nine months for entering the residence of G. De Witt Garretson and stealing family jewelry.

No one suspected Baker, who for three years had been working for th farmers and was considered a capable and honest young fellow. To the surprise of all, he went to Mr. Garretson and confessed that he was the thief. He said that that evening he was intoxicated, and "rather guessed he must have done it." He proved his story by returning the property, and was promptly arrested.

The authorities, on taking charge of his effects, found that he is a young man with a very interesting history. His parents are wealthy and reside in a New York village. Becoming addicted to drink and feeling that he was disgracing his family, and especially his young sister, he left home and his boyhood associatians with a determination to reform. After three years of sobriety he yielded to the the temptation. An effort will be made by the temperance organizations to secure his pardon.

SUDDEN DEATH.

Michael Larkin Suddenly Stricken Down With Heart Failure.

Michael Larkin, aged 75 years and 8 months, died at the home of a relative, No. 237 Somerset street, yesterday at 2 p. m. His death was sudden and unexpected, inasmuch as he was about the yard an hour before his death, and he told some of his friends that he never felt better in his life. Suddenly he was stricken down with heart failure, and he never rallied Dr. Probasco was the attending physican, and he found the patient in possession of his faculties to the last. Two years ago the decedent was similarly stricken, but it did not prove serious.

Mr. Larkin was born in Ireland and came to this country to follow no particular occupation. For two years he boarded with J. B. Bovey, and was always considered a man of careful speculation and one of means. He was the last one of the family in this country.

REPUBLICAN DELEGATES

PRIMARIES HELD IN THE CITY WARDS LAST NIGHT.

Resolutions Passed Favoring the Candidacy of Ernest Ackerman for a National Elector From This State.

The candidacy of Ernest Ackerman for a National Elector for New Jersey from the Eighth district was given a boost at the Republican primaries held in this city last night, when two wards passed resolutions favoring his nomination and the sentiment in the other two was all in his favor. The results were as follows:

FIRST WARD.

The First Ward Republican primary was called to order in the Republican Association rooms, last evening, and J. F. MacDonald was made the chariman and Joseph B. Coward secretary. The call for the meeting was read and George W. Moore and Alex D. Matinson were unanimously chosen as the delegates to the State convention, and they were authorized and empowered to fill vacancies. The prevailing sentiment at the meeting, and afterwards was that Ernest R. Ackerman, of this city, would be one of the electors from this State.

SECOND WARD

The Republican Primary of the second ward was held in the Bryant school house last night. George D. Patten acted as chairman; Arthur C. Baynon, secretary; Israel C. Pierson, judge of election; Edwin H. Frost and Jules E. Erickson, inspectors of election. Edwin H. Frost and W. H. Drayton were elected delegates to the State convention at Trenton to nominate Presidential electors. On motion of Judge Vincent E. Nash a resolution was unanimously adopted favoring the nomination of Ernest R. Ackerman as elector for this district. Over one hundred voters were present, and after a liberal contribution to the school janitor, the primary adjourned.

THIRD WARD.

It did not take long to transact the business of the Third Ward primary. The meeting was called to order at the Casino by Roger F. Murray, of the city executive committee. J. W. Murray was elected chairman and Harry C. Runyon secretary. Only two nominations, Charles J. Fisk and Roger F. Murray, were made for the delegates to the state convention and they were unanimously elected by acclamation. The following resolution was then unanimously adopted.

Resolved, that our delegates be instructed to use all legitimate means to secure for our fellow-citizen, Ernest R. Ackerman, the nomination as presidential elector for the eighth Congressional district. The meeting then adjourned.

FOURTH WARD.

Judge Newcorn called the meeting to order and he was made chairman, and William Wallace Coriell, secretary by unanimous consent. Abram Angleman and Messrs Vanderhoof and Stewart were declared the judge and inspectors without opposition. A list of the nominees and the vote for delegates to the State convention follows: William Newcorn, 14; W. W. Coriel, 14; William Fisher (colored) 28; Arthur A. Venable (colored) 28. The two latter were declared elected.

W. S. Angleman thought it eminently proper to appoint a committee to fill vacancies, and Mr. Coriell favored the election of alternates. But neither of these suggestions went into effect, and before the result was announced four-fifths of the voters filed out of the meeting place.

VICTIM OF A SAWDUST GAME.

John Beerbower, of the City Hotel, is Filled With Remorse at Being Duped.

John Beerbower, proprietor of the City Hotel, has been made the victim of a sawdust game. His loss is not large, but he makes up for it in remorse at the thought of being duped as he was.

Some two weeks ago a stranger walked into the hotel and registered. He gave Clerk Rogers a nice looking package which he said he wanted sent up to his room that night as he said he intended to be there for sometime. The package was put under the counter and the stranger went into the dining room and partook of a dinner. He returned in the evening and enjoyed a hearty supper. Then he departed and returned no more. But the package still remained, causing much curiosity as to its contents.

Yesterday Mr. Beerbower was in an inquisitive frame of mind and he resolved to open the package. He carefully untied the strings and folded back the paper which protected the box. Then he tenderly opened the box, and almost fell over with astonishment. The box was full of sawdust.

POLITICAL CAMPAIGN

Movements and Doings of the Active Workers.

BRYAN'S VISIT TO CHAIRMAN HINKLEY

Republican National League Convention at Milwaukee To-day—President McAlpin May Not Be Re-elected—At the Headquarters in New York.

Big Indian, N. Y. Aug. 25.—Winnisook Lodge, high up in the Catskill mountains, ten miles from a telegraph station, and as perfect in isolation as it is beautiful in situation, sheltered William Jennings Bryan and his wife last night. They were the guests of Major James W. Hinkley, chairman of the democratic state committee; Thomas E. Benedict, the federal printer; Charles A. Shultz of Rondout, and other members of the club which maintains the lodge. It was at 6:30 o'clock last evening when Mr. and Mrs. Bryan, under escort of Mr. Shultz and Mr. Preston, examiner of state banks of New York, reached the lodge after a long drive over mountain roads from Big Indian. The bevy of sojourners gave the club yell when Mr. and Mrs. Bryan arrived and the candidate and his wife bowed their thanks. Mr. Benedict and his daughter, Mrs. French, took them in charge and conducted them to the Benedict cottage, which is charmingly situated overlooking the pretty little lake which forms one of the chief attractions of Winnisook lodge. Mr. and Mrs. Bryan had supper in the club house with their many hosts, and later in the evening they were entertained there informally. Mr. Bryan, late in the evening, had a conference with Chairman Hinkley and others, but what was discussed cannot of course be learned.

CAMPAIGN WORK.

What Is Going on at Republican Headquarters in New York.

New York, Aug. 25.—Melville D. Landon (Eli Perkins) called at republican national headquarters yesterday afternoon and said that he expected to go to Iowa and speak in thirty-five county seats of that state on the silver question. Hon. Richard C. McCormick, formerly governor of Arizona, was another caller at republican headquarters. He expressed himself as well pleased with the outlook of the campaign. William M. Randolph, a well known colored lawyer of Pittsburg, another caller, said that while republican victory was certain in Pennsylvania, an earnest effort should be made to surpass all records in the size and significance of the republican majority this year. "In Alleghany county alone," said Mr. Randolph, "we have about 10,000 colored voters. Quite a number of them voted for Cleveland four years ago, led away by some notion or another, but their experience under this administration has cured them of all democratic tendencies." Hon. H. Clay Evans of Chattanooga, Tenn., has arrived. He has been making several speeches in Indiana and he reports a strong movement in favor of protection principles in cities where he appeared.

At Democratic Headquarters.

New York, Aug. 25.—The only news given out from democratic headquarters at the Bartholdi hotel this morning was that John Gilmore Boyd of this city is a candidate for the democratic nomination for governor. He is a lawyer and a bimetallist. There were a number of prominent callers at headquarters last evening and this morning.

REPUBLICAN NATIONAL LEAGUE.

About 1,000 Delegates at the Convention in Milwaukee To-day.

Milwaukee, Aug. 25.—Delegates and visitors to the republican national lague convention which opens here this afternoon have been streaming into the city since early morning. Most of the eastern state delegations are present in full force. There will be 1,000 delegates in attendance. The fight for the presidency has been narrowed down between Col. McAlpin of New York and Charles V. Gordon of Chicago, with the chances in favor of the latter. The leaguers seem to favor a more direct and robust participation in the nominating affairs of the republican party. To this Col. McAlpin is opposed. He considers the league only a cog in the republican party. Last evening the Wisconsin state league held its convention in Lincoln hall to select delegates to the convention. The report of President Harper showed that the league was in good shape and was growing in the Badger state

Gold Party's Platform.

Indianapolis, Aug. 25.—The platform of the national democratic party is in course of formation. Chairman Bynum of the executive committee has a number of letters from democrats in different parts of the country making suggestions on this subject and some of them have forwarded complete drafts of platforms embodying their views. These he will turn over to the resolutions committee to be appointed by the convention in order that it may have the benefit of it in drawing up a platform.

Demands Sewall's Withdrawal.

Raleigh, N. C., Aug. 24.—The Progressive Farmer, the official organ of the National Farmers' alliance, says editorially: "Millions of populists will refuse to support Bryan if Sewall is not taken down. The populists have met the silver democrats more than half way, but if Sewall is not taken down a presidential candidate is certain. This feeling is in the north and west as well as in the south."

LOOKS LIKE PLATT

Will Probably Be Nominated for Governor To-day.

UNDERSTOOD THAT HE WILL ACCEPT

Anti-Platt Man Slated for Lieutenant-Governor—Situation at Saratoga Just Before the Hour for Calling the Republican Convention to Order.

Saratoga, N. Y., Aug. 25.—The morning of the day of the republican state convention found the situation practically unchanged from that of last evening, and, barring accidents, before to-night Thomas C. Platt will be the nominee of the republicans for governor of the Empire State. Ever since the arrival in Saratoga of the Tioga statesman he has been busy trying to stem the tide which was pushing the gubernatorial nomination his way. He declared with every evidence of sincerity that he would not have it. He stated most emphatically that he was not a candidate, that he did not desire the position, and said that he would only be placed in the embarrassing position of refusing the nomination in case his friends were so unwise as to stampede the convention to him. He held his position until last evening, when a conference of leaders decided that the sentiment for Mr. Platt's nomination was too strong to be opposed. Leaders from all parts of the state said that the best interests of the party would be served by Mr. Platt himself assuming the responsibilities of the governorship. These representations were made to Mr. Platt in such form that he was taken seriously into consideration the acceptance of the honor. He did not give a final answer to the leaders who waited upon him, and what he said to them led to a rumor that he had acquiesced in the verdict of the conference. This was not so. Mr. Platt simply reserved decision.

Aldridge Remains Hopeful.

Late last evening he sent out word from his cottage, where he was closeted with party leaders, that he would make no announcement at present. It is pretty generally accepted by the leaders who are nearest to Mr. Platt that he will accept the nomination unless some unforseen circumstance arises. George W. Aldridge, who leads the other candidates for the the place, says he has not given up hope, and there are still some anti-Platt people here. When word was passed around the corridors, where hundreds of politicians had congregated discussing contingencies, great was the sensation caused by the news that Mr. Platt would probably stand.

Second Place on the Ticket.

The name of John N. Scatcherd of Buffalo is coupled with that of Mr. Platt. It was not positively known that Mr. Scatcherd had any ambition to be lieutenant-governor, and the fact that he has been counted with anti-Platt forces causes some surprise. Mr. Scatcherd is a wealthy Buffalonian, who has never held public office. He was a member of the state committee a year ago. He was non-committal this morning as to any arrangement to place his name on the slate, but there are persistent rumors that it is there just the same. It was also said this morning that unless Mr. Platt upsets the programme he will be placed in nomination by his former antagonist, J. Sloat Fassett, and the seconding speech will be made by Lieut.-Gov. Saxton.

Photographing from the Clouds.

Boston, Aug. 25.—William A. Eddy, who intended to make some interesting experiments in taking photographs of this city yesterday from mid-air by means of a camera hoisted by a team of tailless kites, was obliged to abandon his plans on account of the light wind, but will try again to-day. Late in the afternoon he sent up several lighter kites by means of which he made a number of experiments as to the temperatures at various heights.

Would "Reorganize" China.

London, Aug. 24.—The Daily Mail publishes an interview with an anonymous Russian statesman, in which the latter is quoted as suggesting that Great Britain co-operate with Russia to "reorganize" China, Russia taking the benefits concurring in the northern half and Great Britain in the southern half, by means of a great China company which would form the nucleus of a future government, as in the case of India.

THE SEWING-ROOM.

It Is a Good Thing to Establish in Every Household.

A large room is not needed for this purpose. Indeed, the smaller one is more desirable, as all the appliances of the work can be kept more easily at hand in it. The small hallrooms in city houses are good for this purpose, and in many homes are so used. If the house happens to be stove heated, one of the advantages of a small room is that it can be easily heated by opening the door into an adjoining room. When this is impossible, a tiny gas or oil stove will give ample heat.

Carpets on the floor of any room are getting in pretty general disfavor, though there are many who think that their absence gives the apartment a sort of unfurnished look. There can hardly be a question, however, about the sewing-room floor. This should decidedly be a bare one, stained or painted. Oilcloth or matting is next best, and give up the threads and lint without the labor which must be expended on the carpet. When the floor is bare it is comparatively easy to brush up the dust and scraps and wipe it over with a dampened mop.

A sewing-room needs all the light obtainable. A north light is best to sew by; therefore, if possible, the room should be on the north side of the house. Light should not be obstructed by window hangings. Shades should always be used, and these so arranged that they are able to rise to the full height of the window.

A low chair is best to sew in, and if it is a rocker so much the better. The piazza chairs that many of the stores are selling so cheaply this summer can be used very well for this purpose.

The cutting-table should be low also. To hold up the arm while cutting for even a short while is very fatiguing, but if the table allows the arm to fall on a level with the waist line a great amount of cutting can be done without disagreeable effects. Such a table should be on casters, so that it can be moved at will, and it should be three feet wide and from four to five feet long. These dimensions will permit the cutting of cloth of different widths without inconvenience. The cutting tables that are shown in the shops are very handy because they fold up and can be put aside to save space when the cutting is over. These tables have one edge marked off in inches like a tape measure, and are very convenient indeed.

Of course, the important factor in a sewing-room is the sewing machine; but besides this the room should contain a scrap basket, a rag bag, a piece and pattern bag, a chest of drawers and some footstools. The basket and bags and even the footstools can be of home manufacture, so need not add to the expense of the room. A discarded bureau from one of the bedrooms will do well for the drawers.

A small covered board for pressing is an absolute necessity in a sewing-room where efficient work is to be done. A flatiron, an iron holder and a rest accompany the board, of course, and it is well to have a one-burner oil or gas stove in the room, so that the iron can be heated without frequent trips to the kitchen.

It is seen, then, that a separate sewing-room can be obtained at a very trifling expense, while the comfort it gives can hardly be reckoned. The seamstress or dressmaker who comes to do the family sewing knows how to appreciate this nook where she may work undisturbed and quietly, and the family itself more comfortable when one of its usual rooms is not invaded by an outsider.—St. Louis Republic.

How Miles Fooled the Hens.

Miles Gearhart's hens would not hatch, and that being his only way of incubating he was quite at a loss to know how to increase his stock of poultry. Finally, says the Pittsburgh Commercial-Gazette, he struck on rather a unique plan, with flattering results. Selecting the biddies that did not lay and were inclined to hatch he made them a close-fitting cap of heavy cloth, which completely blindfolded them and was impossible to shake off. When a chicken is blindfolded it will squat down and stay there. Thus reasoning, Miles altogether has set five hens, each day liberating them for food and exercise. To date three hens have brought out all the eggs intrusted to them except three, and are as proud of their families as though they voluntarily contracted them.

"The Foot of a Fly"

says an eminent English doctor, "will carry enough poison to infect a household." In summer-time, more especially, disease germs fill the air, multitudes are infected, fall ill, die; multitudes escape. These messengers of mischief do not exist for millions. Why not? Because they are healthy and strong—protected as a crocodile is against gun-shot. It is the weak, the wasted, the thin blooded who fall; those who have no resistive power so that a sudden cough or cold develops into graver disease. We hear of catching disease! Why not catch health? We can do it by always maintaining our healthy weight.

Scott's Emulsion

of Cod-liver Oil, is condensed nourishment; food for the building up of the system to resist the attacks of disease. It should be taken in reasonable doses all summer long by all those whose weight is below the standard of health. If you are losing ground, try a bottle now.

NEW CRUISER BROOKLYN.

Develops a Speed of Nearly Twenty-one Knots on Her Preliminary Trial Spin.

Boston, Aug. 25.—In the preliminary or practice trial the cruiser Brooklyn developed an average speed closely approximating 21 knots. There were, of course, no official figures which could have any impartial or valuable bearing. Watches were held by all the officers aboard and also by those members of the government trial board, and close calculations were made from buoy to buoy in the run of 83 knots. A comparison of these different figures showed an agreement that the cruiser had averaged a few one-hundredths less than 21 knots. The computations ranged from 20.95 to 20.99, the majority, however, settling on 20.97. The trial was made over the government official trial course from off Cape Ann, Mass., to a point off Cape Porpoise, Maine, and return. Edwin S. Cramp, the member of the ship-building firm who is in charge of the vessel, was not exactly satisfied with the reports from the engine room when the imaginary starting line from Cape Ann was crossed and the big ship made a side turn and came back. The signal was then given and the cruiser on her second attempt sped across the line at a rapid rate at 11:10 o'clock. The water was comparatively smooth, the wind light and the atmosphere perfectly clear. The tide was with the vessel on the outward run and against it on the return. As each buoy was passed it was seen that the cruiser was moving at a rate beyond 20 1-2 knots. Those on board could scarcely realize that the vessel was cutting the water at this high rate of speed. There was no perceptible vibration and the big cruiser was carrying herself so steadily that the rapid motion was as stated, seemingly unnoticeable. The engine worked superbly at all stages of the run and the officers of the vessel believe she will, on her official trip on Wednesday, add at least a half knot to her record of yesterday. Edwin S. Cramp, after the return, expressed himself as entirely satisfied with the behaviour of the cruiser, but would make no prediction as to the possibilities of the official test tomorrow.

Toledo, Aug. 25.—The attempt to sail the first international race between the Canada and Vencedor, for the inter-lake yachting championship on Lake Erie, off Toledo, yesterday afternoon, resuld in a failure on account of the lack of wind, as the regatta committee declared the race off after the yachts had drifted about for four hours. When the race was called the Canada had the lead.

Woonsocket, R. I., Aug. 25.—Mayor Green has received a letter from S. P. Gluttonous Eskimos.

The eating powers of the Esquimaux, if the tales told in the books of northern exploration are to be believed, are most extraordinary. Sir W. E. Perry tells of a young man, scarcely full grown, who ate four pounds and four ounces of frozen seahorse flesh and four pounds and four ounces of seahorse flesh broiled, one pound and twelve ounces of bread, and one and one-quarter pounds of rich gravy, in twelve hours. Besides eating the above, he also drank one pint of grog, three glasses of raw spirits and nine pints of water.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

HELPING A BASHFUL LOVER.

When Sue's Mother Took a Hand the Affair Was Settled Right Off.

It was a two-roomed log cabin, and after supper Mrs. Coots and I sat down in the front room and left her daughter Sue, a girl about 18 years old, to clear away and tidy up. She had just finished when a young man slipped into the kitchen. His headgear was a 'coonskin cap, the bottoms of his trousers were tucked into his boot legs, and he was as awkward and ungainly as a cow on ice.

"Howdy, Joe," saluted the girl, as he entered.

"How—howdy?" he replied, as he sat down on the edge of a chair and fumbled with his cap.

"That's her beau," whispered Mrs. Coots to me, over her knitting. "Joe's pert 'nuff, but powerful shy. Bin coting Sue fur nigh a y'ar now, but hain't done axed her to marry him."

The girl took a seat on the far side of the room, and for ten minutes not a word was spoken between them. Then she finally queried:

"How's b'ars, Joe?"

"Hain't seen a b'ar in three months," he replied.

There was another painful interval, and then Sue asked:

"How's 'coons, Joe?"

"'Coons is plenty," he replied, as he avoided her glance.

"That's the way it goes," whispered the mother. "They jist sot and sot and sot, and talk 'bout b'ars and 'coons and sich, and I do declar' I'm gittin' all upsot!"

Five minutes later, just as the young man seemed on the point of leaving, Sue kindly inquired:

"Killed any 'possums lately, Joe?"

"Nary one," he replied as he stared at his boots.

"I can't abide that no mo'," muttered the mother, as she laid aside her work and arose.

"What are you going to do?" I asked.

"Git 'em together or skeer him off."

She walked out into the kitchen and stood before the young man, and sternly demanded:

"Joe Skillman, did yo dun cum over yere to borrow an ax?"

"N-no, mum," he stuttered.

"Did yo' come to cote Sue?"

"Y—yes, mum."

"Sue, do yo' want to be coted?"

"Reckon I do," answered Sue.

"Then yo' all jist listen to me. Joe, yo' git over on t'other side. Sue, you snuggle up to him. I'se gwine to blow out the candle and leave yo' in the dusk, and me'n the stranger gwine to sot on the fur side of t'other room and talk loud. I'se got mighty tired of this fussin' 'round, and yo' all has either got to fix or unfix things this very night."

An hour later, when Joe went home, Sue called her mother out and held a whispered conversation with her, and when Mrs. Coots returned to me she smiled grimly and explained:

"They all are gwine to be married next week."—Truth.

"FORTY WINKS."

After-Dinner Naps Conducive to Health and to Proper Digestion.

Well dined humanity will feel relieved to hear the decision of the medical professor that the time-honored institution of "forty winks" after dinner is conducive to health and a beautiful recuperative process. Plethoric, full-blooded people have feared to indulge in this tempting settling of a heavy feed several English practitioners have made a severe attack on the siesta as tending to apoplexy or nightmare, but the Medical Press declares this idea is founded on a misapprehension of the physiological functions of the stomach and brain, and this is what it says answering the question. "Is it harmful thus to fall asleep after a meal? By no means. The process is merely a physiological one, and as such when it occurs is quite natural. When digestion is in progress, nature arranges that all the available blood in the body shall be collected in and about the digestive organs. Consequently the blood supply to the brain falls to a low ebb, and thus sleep is easily induced. On the other hand, physiologically, it is wrong for brain work to be attempted immediately after a solid meal." Which is a most comfortable doctrine, but one that offers a new development in the attractions of dinner parties or public banquets. How would it be possible for guests, after tossing off the pousse cafe, to recline with comfort in the straight back chairs of modern fashion? Would these heavy diners be able to restrain the snores with which nature afflicts the children of men in their unconscious moments? If the "40 winks" method is to receive public and immediate postprandial adoption, another order of dining-room furniture must prevail. People who are in the habit of dining not wisely, but too well, must insist on the introduction of the classic Roman style of couch or triclinia round the mahogany, and on that extend themselves as gracefully as may be until the digestive organs have done their duty. Beneficent sleep! It would work well even at the dinner dance, for then guests, however light of foot, would awake refreshed, and their general happiness be promoted, because indigestion would be avoided.—Boston Herald.

Boston, Aug. 25.—Eugene H. Newhall, aged 37, a clerk employed in the American Express company's office, is under arrest for forging the name of E. M. Dunmore, money order clerk of the express company, to a receipt for a package of money containing $72.60. Newhall confessed and says he took the money simply because he was short and wanted it.

VOYAGE OF THE FOX.

Reception at Havre of the Tiny Craft Described by Consul Chancellor.

Washington, Aug. 25.—Dr. Chancellor, the American consul at Havre, has sent to the state department an elaborate report on the successful voyage of the rowboat Fox across the Atlantic, illustrated by photographs of the two seamen Harbo and Samuelson as they arrived and several days later and characteristic scenes of their greeting in Havre. The consul says they accomplished the voyage from New York to Scilly, nearly 3,000 miles, in fifty-five days, thus establishing a record in daring seamanship and human endurance hitherto unknown to the world. The success of the enterprise will at least serve to inspire confidence and hope in those who from one cause or another may hereafter be forced to resort to open boats on the open sea. The consul describes the approach of the Fox, which was signalled some hours before her arrival at Havre, and as she entered the dock opposite the consulate, the stars and stripes defaced and tattered but glorious even in rags, floating proudly at the stern, as if rejoicing in this new and hard-won victory on the sea. As they were destitute, the consul gave them food and clothes out of the fund for destitute American seamen in foreign ports.

SOLD THEIR CHILD.

The Parents Were Poor, But Now the Mother Sues for Its Return.

Bridgeport, Conn., Aug. 25.—Mrs. Ida Porter of Fairfield is trying to recover her 4-year-old daughter, who was adopted by Mrs. Ashabel Penny of Black Rock, three years ago. Mrs. Porter's husband was at that time in poor circumstances and went to the west. Now Mrs. Porter is able to care for the child and wants it. Mrs. Penny surprised the authorities by showing a genuine bill of sale of the baby. The consideration is not mentioned. The paper was drawn up by attorney Howard Joyce, who is now in Yonkers, N. Y., and the money was paid to the child's father before he went west. Mrs. Penny says she will fight to the end before she will relinquish the little one.

Another of our neighbors had been sick for about a week and had tried different remedies for diarrhœa but kept getting worse. I sent him this same remedy. LIVER CLOGGING.

WHEN YOUR STOMACH CLOGS YOUR LIVER SEE TO YOUR DIGESTION.

Not one person in a thousand knows that the cause of billiousness is the clogging of the liver by the poisons of indigestion. Nor that the only proper cure for it is a tonic to aid the stomach.

But modern medicine declares the truth of it. And the Shakers have proved it by the wonderful success of their Shaker Digestive Cordial.

One of the most important uses of the liver is to arrest and destroy all poisons which try to find their way into the blood. When it's clogged, it can't do this.

Undigested food ferments and putrifies in the stomach, and the poisons of putrefaction clog and paralyze the liver, after which they find their way into the blood.

Here is the true explanation of all the distressing disorders and complications caused by indigestion.

Shaker Digestive Cordial is the only tonic cordial which aids the stomach in a natural way to digest its food. By this means, it cures indigestion, restores the liver, and frees the body from poison and disease.

Headache, dizziness, neuralgia, mental depression, weakness, bad taste fever, flatulence, costipation, loss of appetite, anæmia, rheumatism, and many other disorders are relieved and cured by Shaker Digestive Cordial.

All druggists. Ten cents for a trial bottle.

THEATRICAL.

"The Cotton Spinner," the new play by Scott Marble, which Rich & Maeder produce at Music Hall, Thursday night, is laid in the romantic region of South Carolina. With such a fitting background for sentiment, the author has woven a charmingly human love story, interspersed with quaint types of character and delightful comedy. The plot briefly told, is the effort of a young wife, secretly married to the engineer of her father's mill, to gain the millionaire parent's consent by loving strategy and thus assure a portion of his wealth for her young husband. To this end, she causes her baby to be placed on the parental door-step, with the design of ostensibly adopting it, relying upon the strong combination of baby influence and daughterly love, to gain her success. The loving little plot is, however, foiled by the villain, superintendent of the mill, who rejected by "Eada," the young wife, and suspecting in part her secret, designs to use it to his own ends, cause her disinheritance and marry her elder sister, "Elsie," who is in love with him. At a critical moment, when to divulge her marriage would mean ruin to all her hopes, he charges "Eada" with being the mother of the child. To save her, "Sukey" a supposed orphan, whose heart "Eada" has won by her kindness, claims the child as hers and voluntarily accepts the shame of unwedded motherhood. The skillful unravelling of all the resulting complications to a happy denouement holds the audience to the fall of the curtain.

It is stated that argument is being used with the Board of Freeholders to get the route through St. George's avenue, although the taxpayers in that vicinity object. It is also proposed to have the route through Elizabeth avenue, but on account of its being so near the Pennsylvania Railroad it will not be as acceptable for building purposes as other routes.

DONS THE VICTORIOUS CAP.

Mountain Park Inn Has Enjoyed a Fairly Prosperous Season.

As the month of August draws to its close, the Mountain Park Inn dons the victorious cap and looks out into a very promising future. There are a goodly number of guests at the Inn at the present time, and the demand for accommodations is continually increasing. The prospects for the months of September and October bid well to keep the house filled until a very late date in the fall.

During the oppressive weather of August the difference in the registrations of the thermometer in Plainfield and on the mountain shows that the new hotel is situated up where the refreshing breezes are always in circulation.

Among the amusements at the Inn, the guests have taken greatest pleasure in the hops which have been given frequently during the season. These were so popular that the management deemed it wise to institute a weekly dance, and now the fantastic toe finds pleasure and satisfaction every Saturday evening.

During the summer a number of the prominent people of Plainfield, Newark, New York and Brooklyn, have registered as guests at the Inn. The company is so well assured of the success of the new enterprise that it will make several improvements and build a number of additional cottages for the coming year.

The sympathy and co-operation which the Plainfield people have shown the new enterprise from its inception, are indicative of their appreciation of the benefits which are sure to follow such an undertaking.

Bridge Needs Repairing.

An unsightly and dangerous plank protrudes from the driveway over the Washington avenue bridge. Last night one horse stumbled and fell, barking its knees. The bridge is supposed to be kept in repair conjointly by the Freeholders of both Union and Somerset counties, and just which body is responsible for the repairs now needed has not yet been definitely fixed. At any rate something should be done at once, and before an accident happens which may lay one or the other of the counties liable.

A Big Stone Contract.

Messrs. A. I. and N. B. Smalley, of the borough, will have completed in a day or two their contract for furnishing 900 tons of crushed stone for the macadamizing of West Eighth street, between Plainfield and Grant avenues. The roadbed, when completed, will be a magnificent driveway and one of the most level ones in the city.

Why is It,

if catarrh is a blood disease, as some claim, that physicians frequently advise change of air and climate to those suffering? Catarrh is a climatic affection, and nothing but a local remedy or a change of climate will cure it. Ely's Cream Balm is so efficient as to do away with the necessity of leaving home and friends, causing instant relief and is a real cure of catarrh.

RACING WITH

BY W. L. ALDEN.

The train was crossing a vast prairie. The single line of rails ran as straight as if it had been drawn with a ruler, from one horizon to the other. On each side the coarse grass, green with the tint of spring, waved breast-high. There was no sound except the monotonous beat of the wheels, as they passed from one rail to the next, and the steady swish of the grass, as it bent before the rushing wind of the train.

I was sitting on the platform of the observation car, with half a dozen other passengers. The conversation fell upon prairie fires, and each man appeared to have read his Cooper, or his Mayne Reid, there was a general agreement of opinion that in case one were to be caught out on the prairie in the path of an advancing fire, the only method of securing safety would be to start a fresh fire, and let it burn up the grass that would otherwise serve as fuel for the larger fire.

"That's all very well," said a grizzled, hard-featured man, who had previously taken no part in the conversation, "but the man who invented that plan didn't know much about prairie fires. If he had, he would have known that when a prairie fire gets near to you, the wind draws in towards it from all directions, and if you light a fire the chances are that you make things a good deal worse than they would be if you didn't meddle."

"Have you ever seen a prairie on fire?" I asked.

"I've seen this identical prairie blazing for all it was worth, and I had a mighty narrow squeak for my life, for the fire went clean over me. If I'd tried the plan of lighting an independent fire, I shouldn't be here to-day.

"It was along in 1874, when this road was a-building, and I was one of the engineer's assistants. We began at the western end, down by Bucephalus, and we had laid about 40 miles of track in a straight line across the prairie, and had got to within, say, ten miles of where we are at this identical minute. It was an easy job, for we had just laid the sleepers down on the ground and spiked the rails to them, calculating to ballast the track when we got good and ready. I had a big gang of Irishmen under me, and we used to average a mile a day of track laying. One July day we had a strike among the laborers, and all hands quit work. I was down at Bucephalus at the time, and the chief engineer asked me to take a locomotive over the line and see if the strikers had done any damage before they left us.

"I started out in the morning, with nobody except the engineer in charge of the locomotive, I agreeing to take turns with him in shoveling coal and watching the engine. We came along slow and easy, for the track was too rough for any fast running, and about noon we got to where it ended. There were no signs that the strikers had meddled with the track, and, as it was a pretty hot day, Sam and I, after we had had our lunch, lay down alongside of the engine in the shade of the cab and took a nap.

"I woke up a little before two o'clock, and as I was filling a pipe and making up my mind to wake Sam and to start for home a big wolf bolted out from the high grass and ran across the track not two yards from us. His tail was between his legs and the foam was dripping from his mouth, and he was making about as good time as any wolf ever made before or since. He never so much as looked at me, and when he had vanished I called Sam and told him that I had seen a mad wolf. While I was speaking about a dozen prairie dogs rushed past us, and then there came another wolf and a couple of hares. All of them were doing their level best, and they paid no more attention to us than if we had been a couple of corpses.

"'What on earth is the meaning of this circus?' says I 'Are those animals just racing for the championship, or is there somebody after them?'

"Sam didn't answer, but I saw that he looked scared. He sprang up, and climbing on his engine, looked over the prairie to the eastward. Then he sang out to me to get into the cab quicker than lightning, and started to open the draught and set the fires blazing.

"'What is it?' I began to ask, as I climbed into the cab. But I didn't need to finish my question. I could see for myself what was the matter. The whole prairie east of us, as far as I could see, was in a blaze; and, as there had been a strong east wind all day, and the fire wasn't more than three or four miles away, I calculated that it would be down on us in a very few minutes.

"'Hadn't we better start a fire and burn some of this grass off before the fire gets here?' I asked Sam. You see, I had read about that way of stopping a prairie fire, and knowing that Sam had been born and bred on the prairie, I calculated that he would know all about it.

"'Better start h—l!' says Sam. 'Can't you see that the wind has all gone down here, though it's blowing a gale where that fire is? That means that the air has begun to draw in towards the fire, and that in the course of a few minutes we'll have what you'll take for a breeze from the westward. Hold on, now, for I'm going to open her out, and we're going to do some tall running.'

"With that he pulled open the throttle and the engine started with a big jump, as if she had seen the fire and was badly scared. We went down the track for about a mile at a pretty good gait, and then we had to stop while Sam tightened a nut in the connecting rod.

"'Do you mean to run away from the fire?' I asked.

"'I calculate to try it,' said Sam 'since it's our only chance; but I don't much believe that we can run as fast on this track as the fire can. That fire is coming on at the rate of 20 miles an hour, and whether this engine will keep on the rail at such a rate as that I have my doubts. Hullo! here come the snakes.'

"The ground was all alive with snakes. There were rattlers and blacksnakes, and hognoses, and copperheads, and every sort and size and condition of snake. When they struck the track they seemed to see the advantages of it as a highway, and they turned and pointed for Buchephalus without stopping to ask the way. They were just full of business, and hadn't the least time to take notice of one another or of us. Blacksnakes and rattlers are generally spoiling to fight one another, but this time they were jostling and running over each other, and nobody was saying: 'Where are you shoving to?' or so much as offering to bite. One big rattler climbed into the cab, and Sam just shoved him out with his foot. I needn't tell you what that snake would have done if he hadn't had his mind set on getting away from the fire.

"The sight made me fairly sick, for I hate a snake as I do an Injun. I knew then how a poor devil feels who has the delirium tremens, and if I hadn't been a sober man, which I always was, I'd have sworn off then and there.

"Well, we started on again, running over snakes by the dozen. Some of them got twisted into the driving wheel, and the engine lashed the ground with them as if they were whipcord till they were worn out. We had lost only two or three minutes by stopping, but the fire seemed to have gained on us about half the distance that it had been when we first saw it, and we were near enough now to hear the crackling and the roaring of the flames. I saw the fire strike a big tree, and, if you'll believe it, that tree burst as if it had been filled with gunpowder and vanished clean out of sight in less than a minute after the leaves began to frizzle. The wind was drawing towards the fire, but we could see by the way the flames acted that a high east wind was bringing the fire down on us at an awful rate. The flames would shoot up 30 or 40 feet into the air and wave just as if they were hurrahing at the prospect of catching us.

"Our engine was going at least 25 miles an hour and was swinging from side to side and bumping over the joints—for we didn't have any fishplates in those days—as if she was bound to jump the track. We had outrun the snake procession, and the only live thing we could see was a coyote who was loping down the track 50 yards ahead of us, without so much as turning his head to see what was after him.

"'How long will the track stand this sort of thing?' says I to Sam, as he finished shovelling fresh coal into the fire.

"'Don't know,' says he. 'It's 18 miles from here to the Wachusetts river, and if we can get across the bridge ahead of the fire, there is a fair chance that it won't cross. I don't much believe that we shall fetch the bridge, but if we don't it won't be because I don't drive this hyer engine for all she's worth. We're dead men if she jumps the track, and we're dead men if we stop short of the river. So we might as well let her go, and take our chances.'

"I don't know if any of you gentlemen have ever traveled over a track that was laid on a prairie without any ballast. If you haven't, take my advice and don't ever try it. There were times when the swaying of that engine made the whole track, sleepers and all, slide sideways. It wasn't merely that it felt as if the track slid. It actually did slide, and I could see places that we had passed over that ought to have been straight, but that were curved in and out, just like a snake that is trying to get away from you, and twists itself into a letter S so as to confuse you and keep you from hitting it. Sam hung on to the lever and I hung on to the edge of the cab window. Neither of us could have kept our feet without hanging on to something. I am free to say that first along I was pretty badly scared, but finding that the engine didn't leave the track, for all her slewings and jumpings, I began to think she would carry us through. So far as I could see, the fire didn't gain any on us, but then we didn't seem to be gaining anything to speak of on the fire.

"Presently Sam swore in a general sort of way, and sung out to me to rake up the fire. I did so; and then, supposing that something must have dissatisfied him, I asked him what was the matter.

"'That derned coyote's the matter,' said he. 'We don't gain an inch on it, and I do most everlastingly hate to be beat by a coyote. Here! you take the lever, while I ile her jints a little. I'm bound to beat that coyote between here and the river, or to pile up this engine. I never see such an impudent derned brute since I took to railroading.'

"Well, Sam went out on the engine with his oil can, and when he had oiled her to his satisfaction he came back and raked up the fire again and fussed round with his gauges. He seemed to have forgotten all about the danger we were in, and to think of nothing but racing with that coyote. Pretty soon we could see that we had gained a little on the beast, and Sam was as cheerful as he would have been if he had been sitting comfortably in a Buchephalus saloon. He never so much as looked back at the prairie fire, that was as near as ever and as bent on gathering us in.

"'The ground is sort of loose and swampy just below here, if I remember rightly,' said I. 'Will she keep the track, do you think?'

"Sam didn't answer me, for he was leaning out of the cab and watching the coyote. Suddenly he sings out, 'Hurrah, boys! The coyote's losing his wind. There ain't ten minutes' more run in him, and we'll be atop of him in less than that time.'

"Just then we struck the swampy part of the road that I had been speaking of and, one side of the track sinking a little too deep, the engine jumped the rails and struck out across the prairie on her own hook. Sam and I jumped at the same minute, and when we picked ourselves up the engine was lying on its side about a rod away from the track, and the tender was trying to climb over the wreck.

"'That there coyote's won after all,' said Sam. 'He's got a fresh wind, and he's safe to make the river in time to save his bacon.'

"'What's the use of talking about him?' says I. 'Tell me what we're going to do. There ain't any sort of use in trying to run, I suppose?'

"'Not the smallest derned grain,' says Sam. 'That fire is due here in about 15 minutes, and we might as well sit down quiet and wait for it.'

"I saw that Sam didn't consider that there was the least bit of a chance for us, and you can imagine whether I was scared or not.

"'I did read once,' says Sam, 'about a chap who was riding on the prairie and was chased by a fire, same as we are now. He shot his horse and ripped the hide off and wrapped himself up in it. The hide being green, you understand, didn't burn, and the man came through all right. It's a middling tough yarn, but all the same it's a thing that might have happened. I was thinking that if the fire would wait half an hour till my boiler tubes cooled down, I could pull them out and we could get into the boiler, the same as the man got into the horse's hide. But there's no use in signaling that fire to stop and lay up on a siding for half an hour, just to suit us.'

"'There's water in the tender,' said I; 'couldn't we do anything with that?'

"'Your head, pardner,' says Sam, getting up and going towards the tender, 'ain't so very far from being level. Let's see how much water we've got.'

"With that he opened the manhole of the water tank and looked in. 'We're all right,' says he. 'You come along here and get into that tank with me. We'll put the cover on when the fire reaches us, and I expect we can stand it for five minutes or so. It's a scheme that lays way over that fellow's horse-hide game, and I shouldn't wonder if it turned out satisfactory for all concerned.'

"The manhole was big enough to let a man through, and when Sam and I got into the tank and crouched down in a sort of sitting position, the water came just up to our chins, and we had about ten inches of head room. Sam pulled the iron cover part way over the hole and said: 'Now we're pretty certain not to be roasted, which is what that fire is aiming at. It'll be some satisfaction to get the better of it.'

"'I don't see,' said I, 'that we're bettering things very much by putting ourselves in the way of being boiled instead of roasted.'

"'I don't suppose,' said Sam, 'that there is any great things to choose between being roasted or biled or fried, or you might say baked. But that fire has set its mind on roasting us, and if we're biled, it'll be disappointed. Besides, I ain't so sure about the biling. It'll take some time to heat up this water, and we may pull through after all.'

"Just then the noise of the fire showed that it was getting close to us, and a whiff of smoke came into the tank. Sam pulled the cover on, and says to me: 'Just sit and take it easy. There's air enough here to last us for some time if we don't use it up in talking.'

"I kept quiet, and said my prayers to myself. The fire came down on us with a whoop like ten tribes of Injuns, and the top of the tank was hot in less than no time. The roaring of the fire seemed to pass on and away from us, but there was a tremendous lot of cracking going on in our neighborhood, which showed that the fire was still all around us. We waited and waited, hoping every minute that the fire would die out and let us open the tank. The water kept getting warmer and warmer, and when I touched the top of the tank, where the water didn't reach it, I burnt my fingers. The air, too, kept getting more and more choky, until I was very near my last gasp, and Sam was about the same. When we couldn't stand it any longer he threw off the cover, and put his head out. Then he broke into a big laugh, that was a little hoarse by reason of the choking he had undergone, and he climbed out of the tank, calling to me to follow him, which naturally I did without wasting time.

"The prairie fire was miles away, and the crackling which we heard was made by the woodwork of the tender and the wreck of the engine cab, which was all in a blaze. There wasn't anything to hurt us when we were once outside of the tank, but if we had stayed in it long enough we would have been boiled without the least doubt. We jumped down on the ground, and stood there to see the wreck burn, and, with the exception of my burnt fingers and a little hair that was singed off the top of Sam's head, we were as cool and comfortable as a man could want to be.

"We walked back to Bucephalus, and I had considerable difficulty in getting my chief to believe that Sam and I had saved ourselves by hiding in a tank. I was so well pleased at my escape that it made very little odds to me what he thought about it; but Sam was that discontented at having his engine beat by a coyote that nobody could get a civil word out of him for the next week."—Pall Mall Magazine.

The Buttonhole Bouquet.

"People when once addicted to a habit," remarked a member of the Southern Athletic club, "find it extremely difficult to break away, even if they would. A friend of mine, who is a prominent dealer in hides and cattle products, is absolutely a slave to the habit of wearing roses in his buttonhole. I have known him for a number of years, yet during the entire period of our acquaintance I have never seen him without the customary nosegay on the lapel of his coat. If he loses one he hunts a florist's shop and buys another. Winter or summer, it is the same thing. When I twitted him about it he said he had worn rosebuds so long that he could not transact his business or feel comfortable unless the posy was in his buttonhole. His father had done the same thing before him, and, in addition to this, he, my friend, often found it impossible to sleep unless a vase of roses was on the table in his room at night. He is an absolute rosebud fiend."—N. O. Times-Democrat.

NICHOLAS II.'S OBJECT LESSON.

He Rides on a Street Car to Show His Officers That It Isn't a Disgrace.

Nicholas II. of Russia has had some trouble in bending the stiff-necked military etiquette of St. Petersburg regiments to suit his rather liberal ideas. He is not popular with the army, as were the three Alexanders, despite his gifts of reading-rooms and dining-halls to crack regiments, and therefore the innovations he recommends are introduced very slowly. Ever since he ascended the throne, for instance, he has been trying to discredit the notion that an army officer may not ride with propriety in a common street car. The army officer in St. Petersburg has long been supposed to be too rich and powerful and too far superior to civilians to associate with the ordinary street-car crowd.

One of the few untitled officers in the Russian capital ventured a few weeks ago to ride in a street car to his barracks. It was a presumptuous and courageous act for he had to alight before the crack cavalrymen's casino of the city. It proved to be a very indiscreet act, too, for his fellow officers at once took him to task for disgracing his uniform, refused to listen to the citations of the czar's remarks on the subject, and eventually, after days of persecution, began urging on him the propriety of resigning his commission. In his distress the persecuted officer turned to a friend in the ministry of war, who brought the whole affair to the czar's notice. It was four o'clock in the afternoon when Nicholas heard the story. He at once put on a dark suit, ordered his adjutant to do the same, and together they went to the spot where the persecuted officer had taken a car. They boarded a car, rode on it to the barracks, alighted, boarded a returning car, and went back to the palace. The czar wrote out a brief account of his little trip, and added to it the inquiry:

"Am I still worthy to wear the uniform of a Russian officer?"

He signed the document "Nicholas" and sent it to the colonel of the persecuted officer's regiment. Since then there has been peace at the officers' quarters of that regiment, and the man who rode on a horse car has been treated with the deference belonging to one who pulls wires at court.

Perhaps Nicholas got his idea of an object lesson in this case from Emperor Francis Joseph of Austria. The emperor heard several years ago that his officers in Vienna were agitated over the question of the propriety of riding in omnibuses. He remarked impatiently that this was a weighty subject for large brains and should be settled before anybody's mind broke down under it. He then put on full uniform, took with him an adjutant in full uniform, and had an omnibus ride. The ride was reported in the newspapers and the question of propriety was settled.—N. Y. Sun.

Delicate Dress Goods.

Some gowns are so dainty in the weave, so delicate in tint, that they seem to soil by being looked at—one or two wearings making them unpresentable, NOT USELESS. We make a specialty of cleaning fine fabrics, the more delicate the material, the better the results. Sometimes an accident will ruin a gown, without injuring the texture. We dye them then, sometimes we get a prettier effect than the original color. Fine goods stand redyeing. The finer the material the better the new color. We charge so little for cleaning or dyeing, that even if you are in doubt as to the result, it's worth while to experiment. Want a new evening gown for a dollar or two? Laundry drivers will receive your work.

DIAMOND DIGGERS.

Laws Which Are Made to Keep Them Honest.

The Detective System and Its Workings in Mines of South Africa — How the Precious Gems Are Shipped.

Of course the expenses of a company owning a block of claims are enormous, and a large number of stones have to be found before the margin for a dividend arrives. The expense and difficulty of reaching the diamond field in the early days kept away the rowdy element to be found in our western mines.

Such diggers as have remained on the fields since the "early days" seem never to be tired of talking of the life they then led as the happiest they have ever known. Then each would peg out his claim and go to work therein with a pick and shovel, depending scarcely at all upon the uncertain help of the lazy kaffir, and with his own strong arm attacked the hard, pebbly soil in which the diamond was imprisoned and in a primitive way "washed" the soil for diamonds. They are not to be picked up walking through the streets or over the "floors" where the soil lies pulverized by sun and rain. It is illegal to own a diamond unless one is a claimholder or a licensed buyer. If a private individual wishes to purchase a stone or two for himself he must first obtain a permit from the authorities.

These precautions will be seen to be necessary, because the value of the diamond, its portability, the facility with which it can be concealed and the uncertainty regarding its existence make it a source of temptation to dishonesty among all classes. It is therefore against the law for anyone, even if a licensed buyer, to purchase a diamond from anyone not a claimholder unless he can produce a permit.

The law has become so stringent and the detective force so active that terror has stricken the I. D. B.'s (illicit diamond buyers), for it is a matter of "15 years' hard" to be convicted of buying a stolen diamond. Before this stringent law was passed many went away rich in a few years who could not possibly have made their pile in any legitimate business in that length of time. Men who have been suspected for years but have managed to evade detection have been pounced upon by detectives at most unexpected moments, but the temptation is so strong that, despite the penalty, the practice still goes on, but to a smaller extent than before.

It was astonishing to find out how often the culprit turned out to be a man in a good and responsible position, and often the very men who were the loudest in the denunciation of the crime were themselves practicing it. The writer was in a cafe one evening when there was a sudden hush, followed by a startled buzz of conversation, and he heard the name of a well-known man, followed by the word "detectives." A man standing near, who was suspected of carrying on the same trade, became suddenly pale and bit uneasily on his visor, and, with a careless laugh, said: "Serves him right," then continued in a scarcely audible tone: "What a fool not to be more careful!" Before the writer left the camp that same man was working in convict dress.

Detectives themselves have been tempted to dabble in the trade, and have been trapped and are now working in convict dress by the side of the men they have helped to hunt down. This fascinating trade of gems offers great temptations to the weak willed, and it takes a certain amount of bulldog courage, combined with caution and patience, to continue in this dangerous business.

On mail days great envelopes of diamonds are sent to London. Some of these packages contain flawless diamonds, others smoky diamonds used in machinery for polishing and cutting the stones, others, again, would contain stones of all colors, sizes and purity. One package, worth many thousands of pounds, contains yellow diamonds, selected stones in size, color and purity. Those of yellow tinge are bought and worn by the East Indians.

The pure white stone is of more value than the yellow, because not so plentiful. It is a strange fact that these diamond merchants seldom wear diamond jewelry; they prefer rubies or corals to the too common gem, the diamond.

The mines have now drifted into the hands of a few large companies, and the Transvaal is the Eldorado to which all eyes in Africa are turned. — St. Paul's.

He Got It.

A five-year old miss in a Michigan town conceived the idea of discharging some social duties, of which she had heard her mother speak, and began by making a call upon a neighbor in the next square.

With sober and dignified mien she announced the nature of her visit, and was cordially greeted, after which the busy hostess went on with her housework.

The caller soon made up her mind that this was not the proper mode of procedure in a formal call and remarked:

"Now, Mrs. E——, let's talk."

"All right, Maggie, what shall we talk about?" responded the neighbor.

Without the apparent abatement of the effort to appear calm and dignified, Maggie replied:

"Oh, I don't care—pie or cake!"—Detroit News.

George Jones brought suit in the city court to recover $300 town bounty alleged not to have been paid him in 1862. The suit is returnable in the city court. About twenty-five others will follow.

IN LI HUNG'S HONOR

The Programme for His Entertainment in America Enlarged.

A GRAND NAVAL DEMONSTRATION

Ten of Uncle Sam's Big Warships To Thunder Out a Salute of Welcome to the Grand Old Chinaman.

New York, Aug. 25.—The programme arranged for the reception and entertainment of Li Hung Chang in this country, as already printed in these dispatches, has been extended. It has been decided to have the navy take part in the affair, and Uncle Sam's crack warships will extend a royal welcome to the great old Chinaman when he enters the gateway of the port of New York Friday on board the magnificent American steamship St. Louis, which is now on its way across the ocean. Seven of Admiral Bunce's superb fleet are now at anchor off Tompkinsville, and the others which compose the famous white squadron are expected to arrive by tomorrow. Those now in port are the flagship New York, the battleships Massachusetts and Indiana, the commerce destroyer Columbia, the cruisers Cincinnati, Raleigh and Newark and the double-turreted monitor Amphitrite. The monitor Terror and the battleships Maine and Texas are daily expected to arrive.

Crack Naval Fleet.

This crack regiment of the sea has just concluded a three weeks' highly successful drill in mid-ocean, and it is proposed by the naval authorities in Washington to afford the viceroy every chance of seeing the best specimens of the American navy under the most favorable circumstances. The fleet all told will comprise ten vessels, exclusive of the ram Katahdin and the torpedo boats Cushing and Dolphin. The latter will be used as a special transport for the Chinese dignitaries during their sojourn in New York. It is barely possible that the new armored cruiser Brooklyn will join the fleet after her trial trip off the New England coast. She is considered the finest ship of her class yet built for any naval power.

Salute of Twenty-one Guns.

The fleet will be anchored in double column, and the St. Louis will thread her way through the long line. As she passes each ship the whole squadron will fire a salute of twenty-one guns, and the demonstration, in point of spectacular effect, it is expected, will eclipse anything of the sort ever witnessed in this harbor, for it will be the largest aggregation of American warships ever assembled. The event will also be made memorable from the fact that this will be the first time the Chinese colors have been saluted from a gunboat in this port. President Cleveland, it is now said, may go down the bay on the Dolphin to meet the St. Louis and extend greeting to the distinguished Celestial.

Cavalry Ordered to New York.

Washington, Aug. 25.—Orders have been issued to the four troops of cavalry with the mounted band stationed at Fort Myer, opposite this city, to leave for New York to-morrow morning by train to take part in the parade in honor of Li Hung Chang.

Mosquito Coast Floods.

Washington, Aug. 25.—Consul O'Hara at San Juan del Norte, Nicaragua, has sent the state department a report upon the disastrous flood which visited the Mosquito coast late in July. It appears that the Bluefields banana trade will be ruined for some years, as all the plantations above that port are practically destroyed. By a peculiar turn of affairs the American consul secured his information wholly through the British consul, Mr. Bingham, who was so prominently connected with the Mosquito incident of two years ago.

New Trial for a Murderer.

Westchester, Pa., Aug. 25.—Judge Waddell has granted a new trial to Thomas D. Elvin, who was convicted here in January of the murder of his two children at Phoenixville. The new trial is granted because of an error made in the jury panel, William J. Pennypacker serving on the jury when the name of Wm. H. Pennypacker had been drawn from the jury box.

Administration Changes in Colombia.

Colon, Aug. 25.—Gen. Quintero Calderon has accepted the position of minister of state, and Gen. Rafael Reyes has been called to fill the position for which he was recently nominated. President Caro will withdraw from power before his arrival. Gen. Calderon will shortly present a law annulling the power granted to the president in certain emergencies.

Cuban Cigarmakers Ready To Emigrate.

Havana, Aug. 25.—A dispatch from Colon, Colombia, says that a large number of Cuban cigarmakers have notified the goveenment of the department of Bolivar, Colombia, of their readiness to emigrate to Colombia provided that a company is formed with the object of promoting such a scheme and assisting the emigrants.

CYCLING COMMENT.

The F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company has taken the agency for the Eclipse typewriter.

Walter Overbaugh, better known as "Ten," has just purchased a Cleveland track wheel.

A gay party of young people from this city and Dunellen enjoyed a spin to Metuchen last evening.

A. E. Fitch, of New York, has purchased a combination Dayton tandem of the F. L.C. Martin Cycle Company. It is a pretty wheel and is enameled olive green.

"Manager" Wm. Sweeney has started training for the fall racing season. He has not decided yet which meet he will enter, but he expects to be prepared for some of the "good things" that may come along.

The Crescent Oval is in much better condition than it has been for some time, and efforts will be made to keep it in its present condition so that the contestants for the coming national circuit meet will be able to train here.

"There will not be so many wheels manufactured next year as there was this year," says a prominent manufacturer, "as most of the manufacturers are now carrying thousands of dollars worth of unsold stock, and they are somewhat in doubt as to what will be done. There were too many people in the bicycle business this season, and in consequence the total output of wheels was greatly in excess of the demand, notwithstanding the hold which cycling has on the public. From this some idea can be gained of the enormous number of bicycles which were turned out. It must have been close to 1,000,000."

The suspension which has been hanging over the head of C. A. Hadfield, the disqualified winner of the Irvington-Milburn Decoration Day road race, has been removed by Chairman Gideon of the racing board of the League of American Wheelmen. Hadfield has been in trouble ever since the race mentioned, when he was accused of being paced and lost the race, although he strenuously denied the charge and brought proof to sustain him. He was then an unknown rider, but soon was charged with having been paid to ride a certain make of wheel in his races. Many questions were asked by Mr. Gideon and satisfactorily answered, and Hadfield was restored to his amateur standing. He did not get the prize he fairly won on Decoration Day, however.

Wheelmen everywhere are beginning to realize the importance of brakes on bicycles. An expert wheelmen says on this subject: "If brakes were in universal use the number of accidents would decrease nearly 50 per cent. Even the dreaded scorcher would not be so terrifying if he had a brake on his wheel. It would be of decided benefit even on level places. No one needs to be told that it would be a decided advantage on hills. The novice, above all others, should not attempt to ride in a hilly country without a brake. The art of back pedaling is an accomplishment which should be acquired by all, but there are times when even that does not avail. The feet may slip at a critical moment, or any one of a dozen minor accidents happen, which makes it imperative that the speed of the wheel be checked at once. That cannot be done successfully and without risk of injuring the rider or the wheel without a brake all assertions to the contrary notwithstanding."

The Plainfield Athletic Club will play the Bound Brook Athletic Club at Bound Brook on Saturday, August 29th. As the Bound Brooks are a strong team a fine game may be anticipated. The 2:11 p. m. train will be in time for the game.

The Y. M. C. A. boys will have a chance Saturday to retrieve their lost honors with the crack baseball players of New York, the Murray Hills, who defeated the home team two weeks ago. The Plainfield nine will go in to win and the game promises to be an exciting one.

The Trentons met defeat at the hands of the Bound Brooks on Saturday afternoon. It was a very one-sided game, the Bound Brooks winning by a score of 19 to 4, but abounded with brilliant plays. Brampton and Newhouse were the Bound Brook battery, while Rodenbawn and Compton pitched and caught for the visitors.

CHARGED WITH ASSAULT.

Son of Respected People Attacks a Woman Along a Dark Street.

Jacob Gerlach, a young man of Roselle, was lodged in the County Jail yesterday, charged with a brutal assault a week ago on Mrs. Anna Debroskie. The prisoner is twenty five years old, and his father is a well known builder in Roselle. Mrs. Desbroskie fought him vigorously, and by the light of the moon recognized his features. She screamed for help and Gerlach struck her in the face with his fist, knocking out two of her teeth. The woman was thrown to the ground, where she lay bruised and bleeding, when some persons attracted by her cries reached the scene. A searching party was formed, and it hunted for Gerlach several hours, but he had gone from the village. Last night it was learned that he had secretly returned, and Constable Stevens arrested him.

SHOT A BURGLAR.

A Pattenburg Storekeeper Captures a Midnight Marauder.

Last night the store of G. G. Barker at Pattenburg, N. J., was entered by burglars. Mr. Barker fired two shots and captured the intruder. One shot took effect in his arm, the other in the leg. A combplete outfit of burglar's tools were in the man's possession.

Mr. Barker has been robbed twice before in the last two years. About a year ago he had a chance to shoot one of the thieves, but was so close that he did not fire until the thief started to run and then shot at him without effect.

The man that was shot is an entire stranger and may the means of capturing other pals.

First Campaign Club.

The Presidential campaign has opened in this city. Last evening Justice Wm. Newcorn, of the city executive committee, started the membership list at the Fourth ward primary for a Fourth Ward McKinley and Hobart Campaign Club. Thirty names were enrolled then and all others who wish to join can do so by leaving their names with Justice Newcorn. The headquarters of the club will be established in the vicinity of Plainfield avenue, exactly where the committee has not yet decided.

Bought a Produce Business.

C. Frank French, of Somerset street, has purchased from A. D. Thompson his stock, interest and good will in the flour, grain and produce business heretofore conducted by W. J. Tunison in the Crescent rink building, together with the storage warehouse on East Fourth street. Possession was given a few days ago, and Mr. French is now in full and absolute control of the business, which has heretofore been run under the name of the Plainfield Produce Company.

Series of Entertainments Proposed.

The Plainfield Camera Club held a meeting last evening when the entertainment committee made its report. The club will hold a series of entertainments this winter, but exactly what it will consist of has not been definitely settled.

The Misses Dunham, of Rahway, have returned from a visit with the Misses Bennett, of Lincoln place and Duer street.

Ruined the Dash Board.

A horse attached to William Callahan's hack, became frightened at a trolley car this afternoon under the Watchung avenue railroad bridge and kicked out the dash board beside demolishing the harness. William Callahan, Jr., was driving at the time and pluckily hung to the reins until Roundsman Mattox and several passersby rushed to the rescue. The horse was finally unharnessed.

A Youthful Event.

Three little girls, Helen L. Whitney, Lillian Demarest and Margaret Demarest, all under seven years of age, gave a fair yesterday afternoon at the home of the first named on Park avenue. The young gentlemen friends of the youthful patronesses came gallantly to the rescue and the receipts amounted to $3.25, which will be devoted to the King's Daughters camp for sick babies.

Holding Them for Investigation.

Two tramps were arrested on a freight train last night and were held for trial tomorrow as the railroad authorities wish to investigate and find out if these men are the ones who have committed several depredations on railroad property.

WOMEN'S DRESS IN ICELAND.

The Kiss Is the Universal Form of Salutation in That Country.

The common working dress of the Icelandic women, without distinction as to social equality or wealth, consists of an undergarment of wadmel, in one piece, extending from the shoulders to the heels, fastened at the neck with a button or clasp, with petticoats of white or blue wadmel, and a blue cap, the top of which hangs down on one side and terminates in a tassel. On Sundays and festival occasions their dress is singular. Then they wear, in addition, a bodice and two or three blue petticoats, called "fat," and in front an apron, bordered with a material resembling black velvet, which is a domestic manufacture. The petticoats are fastened immediately beneath the bodice by a girdle of the black velvet, embroidered and studded with such silver or gilt ornaments as they may possess.

The bodice is also ornamented and fastened in front with large clasps, generally gilt, and rendered more conspicuous by being fixed upon a broad border of black velvet, bound with red. Over the bodice is a jacket, called "treja," fitting close to the shape, and made of black wadmel or velvet. The stockings are of dark blue or red worsted, and the shoes, which are of seal, shark or sheepskin, are made tight to the foot, and fastened about the ankles and insteps with leather laces. On their fingers the women generally have many rings of gold, silver or brass, according to their means; and, be it known, no present is so acceptable to an Icelandic girl as a ring. The most singular, and at the same time the most beautiful part of the female costume is the headdress, called "faldup," which is made of white linen, stiffly starched, kept in shape with an immense number of pins, and from 15 to 20 inches in height. This is the holiday and Sunday head covering.

When you visit a family in Iceland you must kiss each member, according to their age or rank, beginning with the highest and descending to the lowest, not even excepting the servants; on taking leave the order is reversed; you first kiss the servants, then the children, and lastly the master and mistress. Both at meeting and parting an affectionate kiss on the mouth, without distinction of rank, age or sex, is the only mode of salutation known in

RIBBON AND LACE.

The Summer Girl Can Construct Many Dainty Additions to Her Toilet.

Of the numberless varieties of neckwear that were brought out at the beginning of the session the tulle bow and the fichu were perhaps the most conspicuous. The tulle bow, however, is already doomed. Paris has frowned upon it and it is no longer the mark of fashion. The fichu, however, has held its own. Every well-dressed woman has the greater number of her summer frocks embellished by this graceful addition, and the woman who is more tasteful than rich has long ago devised the scheme of making one fichu do for a variety of frocks. The best fichu for all-round use is of white dotted silk. It should be trimmed with a full ruffle either of wide lace or of the net edge, with narrow yellow lace.

The deep sailor collar of cambric, lace, embroidery, or grass lawn is still in vogue. The grass lawn affairs are not as dressy, but give a pretty touch to summer costumes when fastened on by gold pins or buttons. A dark India silk needs hardly any other decoration than a yoke or collar of white French embroidery or of heavy yellow lace.

In spite of the profusion of lace and ribbon, however, which is so important a feature of the correct summer wardrobe, the severe linen collar is as much worn as ever. Linen collars three inches high are made to alternate with plastrons of bewildering elaboration, and the always admirable tailor-made costume is no less in demand than the dainty fabrication of lawn and chiffon.

NEW JERSEY STATE FAIR

THE EXHIBITION AT WAVERLY TO OPEN ON SEPT. 7TH.

A Fine Premium List and Valuable Prizes to Be Awarded in All Departments—The Preparations Completed.

The State Fair at Waverly will begin on Monday, Sept. 7th, this being the 38th year, and continue for a week, under the auspices of the State Agricultural Society. The grounds will be open Saturday, Sept. 5th, for the reception of exhibits. The premium list is such that farmers and breeders from all parts of the State should be represented.

With the new classes and expert judge system, which will be made a feature this season, owners of show animals receiving the "Blue Ribbon" awards will have occasion to feel proud. The State Society rises above the mere idea of quantity in conducting an exposition of agricultural products and farm stock.

From promises received, the officers say they are encouraged to claim that this year's exhibition will compass all former ones, both as regards largeness of display and quality of the exhibits.

They have bent themselves to the work of perfecting the hundred and one details; the grounds have been carefully looked after and every building put in shape, so that when opening day arrives there will be a place for everything and something for every place.

The programme of the week has been so arranged that from the opening on Labor Day to the close of the fair, a series of attractive novelty performances will be given between each day's races. Every specialty to be one of the best obtainable.

The speed classes include fast work by some of the best horses on the Eastern circuit. Purses offered for the fourteen classes amounts to the handsome sum of $8,100, in addition to which the Society have arranged a grand tournament of bicycle races for Saturday, the closing day in which all the crack riders of the various clubs will take part, and from the great interest taken in the wheel it is predicted that the last day will be the most successful in point of attendance.

The accessible location of the grounds, added to the natural picturesque beauty of its park facilities, makes it a perfect place to thoroughly enjoy a day's outing. The whole enclosure of sixty acres by reason of its terraced and rolling lands, forms a natural grand stand, from which the visitor can view with comfort the various attractions and races, and at the same time delight the eye in gazing upon the quiet beauty of the landscape.

Besides the excellent service of the Pennsylvania, Lehigh Valley and Central Railroad of New Jersey, the electric cars from Newark, Elizabeth, Paterson and Jersey City deliver passengers at the main entrance to the fair grounds. These improved means of reaching the grounds will induce thousands to go there this year, giving exhibitors a much larger audience than they have had heretofore. The officers of the State Society always make it their business to please visitors, so that when leaving the grounds they are satisfied that they have had full value for their time and expense.

A Delightful Evening.

A very pleasant affair was given last Monday night by Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Wilson at their charming home on Mountain avenue, in honor of their guest, Mrs. Suzelle Howat, of Philadelphia. The guests found the spacious veranda a delightful place for games and conversation and the time passed very enjoyably. Refreshments followed toward the close. Among those present were the Misses Jennie Simpson, May McLoughlin, Mamie Steiner, Allie Loomis, Jessie Coddington, Lena Smalley, and Minnie Smalley, and the Messrs Robert M. Clark, Edward O. Clark, Will Morrison, Harry Coddington, Will Titus, Bert Simpson and Theodore Lister.

Extending the Service.

Manager Charles Runyon, of the local branch of the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company, is at work today stringing copper wires in Somerville, and it is considered highly essential that the work should be completed before fall.

Club House Started.

The work of constructing the new golf-club house on Plainfield avenue was started yesterday. Bateman Thatcher has the contract for the carpenter work, and W. F. Slater has received the contract for plumbing and gas fitting.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy cures colds, croup and whooping cough. It is pleasant, safe and reliable. For sale by T. S. Armstrong, Druggist.

BILLY LEE IN THE TOILS.

LARCENY AND RUNNING A DISORDERLY HOUSE THE CHARGES.

Joseph Block Accuses the Man of Baseball Fame of Stealing $240 From Him—To Be Tried This Afternoon.

"Billy" Lee, of baseball fame, who now keeps a road house on Front street, just this side of Scotch Plains, is in trouble. This morning he was arrested on two charges, both brought by Joseph Block, an employe of Abram, the shoe dealer. One was for grand larceny and the other for keeping a disorderly house.

Last night Block went out riding with Hattie and Sarah Jane Fottingill, of South Amboy, aged respectively twenty-two and twenty five years. They went over the brook and then to Scotch Plains. There they stopped at Lee's place.

Lee states that they tried to hire a room and he refused to rent it. At any rate, there was some trouble and Block accused Lee of robbing him of $240 that he claims to have had in his pocket.

Finally Block and the young women returned to Plainfield where they were arrested by Sergeant Kiely for acting in a disorderly manner. The police state that the women have been here several nights without a place to sleep and bear an unsavory reputation.

Lee was arrested and held under $200 bail by Justice Newcorn for his appearance this afternoon. James Day acted as his bondsman.

The young women were brought before Judge DeMeza this morning and remanded until tomorrow to await the result of the Lee trial.

CAUGHT MILKING A COW.

Youngsters Who Get the Lacteal Fluid Direct From the Bovine.

Boice's apple orchard, located on the northwest bank of Tier's lake, has of late been the rendezvous of a lot of boys. It has also been the pasture field for several cows, owned in the neighborhood. Yesterday one of the prematurely rapid kids was caught milking the cows in a tomato can and passing the milk around among his companions. Just then the owner happened along and milk can and boys beat a hasty retreat.

It may not be generally known, but it is nevertheless a fact, that such work is in the eye of the law considered malicious mischief and is punishable by a fine of from $10 to $50.

Our James in Great Demand.

Postmaster Oliver came all the way here from Milburn, yesterday, in search of the Hon. James E. Martine, whom he was seeki g to deliver an address at a political meeting to be held there. Mr. Martine's reputation as the "Farmer Orator" has gained him wide spread notoriety and his good, sound and practical sense has made him the man that so many clubs are after to address. Mr. Martine regretted very much that he couldn't go to Milburn, but a meeting will probably be arranged for a future date, when the Farmer Orator may respond.

Big New York Failure.

New York August 26—Albert B. Hilton, who has done business under the name of Hilton, Hughes & Co., at Tenth street and Broadway, successor of the old firm of A. T. Stewart & Co., to day filled a deed of assignment for the benefit of his creditors. George M. Wright of 280 Broadway was made assignee.

Couldn't Hold Them.

Sentence was suspended on Andrew Haliday and Hugh Mullin, of Philadelphia, in the city court this morning. They were arrested Monday night for riding on a coal train. The Jersey Central railroad authorities sent word that they could not fix any crime on them.

Plainfielders Coaching in the Mountain.

The coaching parade last week in Jefferson, at which the Waumbek's display was the largest of any hotel, had in its line Augustus and Harvey Fisk in their pony cart and Charles J. Fisk's brake, representing golf. The display was enthusiastically cheered all along the line.

Released From Custody.

Richard Caldwell, the colored defendant in the breach of promise suit which was exclusively told of in Monday's Daily Press, has been released on $200 bail on his own recognizance. His trial will be Saturday.

If you have ever seen a little child in the agony of summer complaint, you can realize the danger of the trouble and appreciate the value of instantaneons relief always afforded by DeWitt's Colic & Cholera Cure. For dysentery and diarrœa it is a reliable remedy. We could not afford to recommend this as a cure unless it were a cure. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

ALL ARE HUSTLING NOW.

BICYCLE PARADE GETTING THE ATTENTION IT'S SIZE DEMANDS.

Clubs From All Over the Metropolitan District Are Arranging to be Present—Representative List of Judges.

If yesterday's weather could have been bottled up and saved until a future occasion, there is no doubt but that the general committee of Plainfield's Daylight Bicycle Carnival would have captured it and stowed it away until a week from Saturday when the carnival takes place. The condition of the weather is all that troubles the committee now, for otherwise the affair is an assured success. Plainfield people don't seem to realize the magnitude of the event that is to be held here. This city has always had a reputation of doing something remarkable when she exerts herself and the committee in charge is working hard to sustain that reputation.

The general committee held a meeting last evening in the Board of Trade rooms in the Babcock building. The meeting was somewhat delayed in starting, as most of the members attended the open-air concert for a short time. Then, with a musical accompaniment, they got down to work.

F. R. Stevens, the secretary of the committee, told of the work of inviting the clubs to participate in the parade, and reported that he had mailed an invitation to every club in this part of the State.

The parade committee has not, as yet, had ver. much to do. They reported that a large number of clubs had promised to turn out. The Vim Bicyle Club, of Newark, one of the largest cycling organizations in the State, is preparing to come over and take all the prizes possible. The Essex Club, of the same city, is working hard to outshine the Vim Club in the parade. Two of Brooklyn's military wheeling organizations and one from Jersey City have promised to come, and the Bayonne Bicycle Band, a band in which the musicians play and ride their wheels at the same time, is also expected.

Of course, the finance committee's report was the most important of all. Much progress had been made by the committee, but lots of work remains to be done and plans were made to continue the work with renewed vigor. The large prize list makes it necessary to have an ample supply of funds on hand and it is hoped that all will realize the value of the Carnival to Plainfield and contribute generously. Contributions can be left with any member of the general committee.

The prize committe submitted a badge for the officials that will make a very handsome souvineer of the affair. It is of tasteful design and yet not gaudy. The design was adopted unanimously.

The advertising committee had much to tell. Posters have been placed in conspicuous places all over the surrounding country, while notices have been sent to all the newspapers between Yonkers and Trenton. The posters have also been placed on bulletin boards in all the stations on the Jersey Central Railroad between Easton, Jersey City and Long Branch. A number of the committee have ridden along the Jersey shore and posted bills in all the seaside resorts. This committee will conduct an active campaign up to the very day of the carnival.

After the committees had all reported, a general discussion followed and the important matter of selecting judges came up. The following were chosen:

Chairman J. Fred MacDonald, of the general committee, Mayor Alex. Gilbert, of this city, Mayor B. A. Hegeman, Jr., of North Plainfield, Robert Gentle, Chief Consul of the New Jersey Division of the L. A. W., Mrs. S. A. Crukshank, Mrs. Chas. A. Reed, Mrs. L. G. Timpson, Mrs. Robert Gentle, Mrs. J. H. Howell, Councilmen Charles J. Fisk and George H. Frost, ex-Councilman Ernest R. Ackerman, Rev. W. R. Richards, D. D., and D. C. Adams, M. D.

Numerous questions were asked and answered, and the meeting adjourned after an informal discussion of carnival.

Crop Report.

The following is the crop report of John Neagle for this week: Corn continues to grow notwithstanding the dry weather, but a little rain would help the crop; early buckwheat being cut and potatoes dug, both yield fairly well; more rain is needed to soften the ground for ploughing; 68 degs. 0.53 inch; shower on 23d gave 0.11 inch.

An Elizabeth Suicide.

Philip Kinsler, of Elizabeth, committed suicide yesterday evening by hanging himself in a shed at the rear of his house. He was sixty-four years old. He had been acting queerly for some time.

A YOUNG LIFE SAVED

LITTLE WILLIE STANBERY JUST ESCAPED BEING CRUSHED.

Became Confused on His Velocipede Between Two Wagons and Grabbed a Revolving Wheel—Was Unconscious

The life of five-year-old Willie Stanbery, of Fanwood, was narrowly saved from a sudden and sad end last night by the presence of mind and prompt action of Mrs. John Cose, who conducts a milk route from Scotch Plains. Mrs. Cose delivers milk to Willie's father, Assessor W. R. Stanbery, each evening, and she is usually met at the top of Kyte's hill by the little lad on a velocipede. The distance from the top of the hill to the house is only a short distance, and it has been the habit of Mrs. Cose to drive along the side of the road while Willie pedals along the centre of the driveway, ostensibly racing with one another. Of course Mrs. Cose always lets the little fellow get to the house first and thus satisfies his boyish desire to win.

Last night she was met by Willie at the accustomed point in the road, but another carriage was approaching from the opposite direction. She cautioned the boy to get out of the center of the road as she would not race while the other vehicle was approaching. She thought he had heeded the advice, but just as the other wagon, which was driven by Anthony Farley, drove past her, she was horrified to see Willie, velocipede and all, mount the rear wheel as it revolved. She was not going at a fast pace and she brought her horse up in a jiffy, and leaned out of the wagon and caught the little fellow by the arm before he fell under the wheels. But her strength was not sufficient to hold him and he fell with considerable force.

He was conveyed to the house in an unconscious condition. It was thought he had sustained mortal injuries and Dr. Westcott was summoned. After making an examination he said that no bones had been broken and the injuries would be but temporary.

It is supposed that the boy did not hear Mr. Cose's admonition and when he got between the two wagons he became confused. As he came in contact with the milk wagon it is thought that he grabbed the revolving wheel, which carried both he and the velocipede to the dangerous position when seen by Mrs. Cose.

Last Chance to Dip in Old Nap.

The annual excursion of Warren Sunday School and congregation to Asbury Park and Ocean Grove, will take place to-morrow, the 27th instant. The start at 8 a. m. will enable the excursionists to eat a hearty breakfast before leaving home, and returning from the grove at 5:50 p. m. the excursionists will be back in time for supper The ocean, at this popular resort, is as quiet as can be expected during the presidential campaign, and all who go along with the Warren Mission people are assured of a good time. Tickets are $1.25 for adults and 90 cents for children.

Freighthouse Soon to Be on the Move

Station Agent Joseph A. Haynes gives assurance that the much-talked-of freighthouse will be removed within a couple of weeks or so. The work is already well under way and it will be pushed forward to completion. Workmen are today busy putting down the tracks necessary to remove the building in sections, and as soon as the tracks are completed the freighthouse will begin to move.

The Tingley Reunion.

The reunion of the Tingley family in this part of the country is being held at the Blackford farm near New Market, this afternoon. In this city there are quite a number of the decendants from the original family and many of them are doubtless in attendance. Prof. Guttman and his cornet band will go over and enliven the party by discoursing popular and national airs.

Camp Meeting Largely Attended.

The colored camp meeting on the Netherwood line of the trolley road is largely attended, three-fourths of the attendants being white. The services are under the direction of Rev. A. A. J. Edgerton. The sermon was preached last night by Rev. A. H. Chase, a returned missionary from Africa. Plantation melodies compose part of the musical services.

Souvenirs at Music Hall.

At the opening performance of "The Cotton Spinner" at Music Hall, tomorrow night, Messrs. Rich & Maeder, the managers, will distribute souvenir spools of cotton to those in attendance. A dress rehearsal of the performance will be given this evening. The piece is interspersed with numerous specialties.

George R. Wills, of LaGrande avenue, has arrived home from a week's stay in Massachusetts.

VETERANS ARE COMING

OLD NEW YORK VOLUNTEER FIREMEN TO VISIT PLAINFIELD.

The Matter Settled Last Night When the Exempts Appointed Committees to Arrange Details—A Bit of History.

The first week in October promises to be an eventful one for Plainfield. During that week three large organizations will come to this city. Already the Knights Templar of the State have decided to hold their annual field day here on Thursday, October 1st, and the Christian Endeavorers of the State have decided on the following week for the annual State convention, and last night, at a meeting of the Exempt Firemen's Association, it was decided to invite the famous Veteran Firemen's Association of New York to come to this city on the afternoon of Saturday, Oct. 3d. The Veterans have expressed a desire to come to this city, so the matter may now be looked upon as settled.

The Veteran Firemen's Association, of New York, is an organization numbering about one hundred and fifty men. They were all members of the old volunteer fire department that fought so gallantly against the flames thirty or forty years ago in New York city, and from which Elsworth's famous Fire Zouaves were recruited. They were young men then, strong and vigorous, but several decades have greatly changed them. Although most of them are grey haired men now, they have not lost their jovial spirits, and once a year they gather for an outing. They charter a train, for the association is well off financially, and visit some city where the fire department is planning a celebration. This year they go to Easton on Thursday, October 1st, and take part in the grand parade and celebration of the firemen of that city. Friday they will spend at Mauch Chunk and riding up the "switch back." Saturday they return to New York, stopping at Plainfield on their way back and spending the afternoon here.

The meeting of the Exempt Firemen's Association, last evening, held in the Hook and Ladder Company's parlors, was one of the largest in the history of the association, over fifty members being present, besides representatives from the different companies that compose Plainfield's fire department. It was finally decided that the New York veterans should be invited and that the companies should guarantee part of the necessary funds while the Exempt Association should raise the rest by subscription. The arrangements for the affair were placed in the hands of a general committee composed of the following: Roger F. Murray, Joseph M. Hawkins, Joseph Blimm, Abner Bartlett, Burnett R. Rogers, Augustus Martin, D. W. Littell, W. A. Woodruff, Edward Vermeule, J. A. Hubbard and Eugene M. Laing. Eugene M. Laing was elected chairman of this committee and Roger F. Murray, secretary.

The following sub-committees were then appointed:

Finance—Roger F. Murray, B. R. Rogers, August Saltzman, H. Newton Spencer.

Reception—D. W. Littell, W. A. Woodruff, J. M. Hawkins, Abner Bartlett, Augustus Martin.

Collation—Joseph Blimm, Edward Vermeule.

The general committee includes representatives from all the companies and the Exempt Association as well.

Although no arrangements have yet been made, the general plan of the affair is understood. The special train, bringing the veterans, their band and their old "double decker" hand engine, will arrive here about 2 o'clock in the afternoon and, after a short parade, the veterans will be given a chance to see Plainfield and its fire department. Then will come a banquet, followed by speechmaking, at the Jersey Cycle Academy, and at about 6:30 o'clock the visitors will leave.

Elizabeth was very anxious to secure that famous old organization as her guest but two of the veterans, Mr. Glenzer and Jacob Blimm, reside in this city, and the rest had often heard of the beauties of this city and the excellence of her fire department, so they preferred this city to our neighbor down the road.

The general committee will hold another meeting on Friday evening at the Alert Hose Company's house on West Second street.

A Curious Visitor.

Mrs. S. P. Craig, of College place, has quite a curiosity. It is a small tree toad of tropical nature, and how it came to this part of the country is a great mystery. The toad was found on a rubber plant that now stands in Mrs. Craig's front lawn. It is a brilliant green color, very different from the dusty brown of the ordinary tree toad.

OPEN AIR BAND CONCERT

A LARGE CROWD HEAR THE MELODIES OF GUTTMAN'S MUSICIANS.

A Band Stand Was Used for the First Time.—Many Strange Faces Appeared in the Crowd of Music Lovers.

Although many of Plainfield's residents are now enjoying life at the seashore, among the mountains or by the fertile shore of some inland lake, there still remained enough last evening to attend the open air band concert and crowd the streets in the vicinity. The concert was held in the open lot at the corner of Madison avenue and West Front street. A band stand had been erected against the side of the Scheplin block and here the Plainfield Cornet Band, with Nate Guttman as leader, rendered a delightful programme from eight o'clock to nearly ten o'clock.

The attendance was good but not as large as at the concerts held at the square in front of the Crescent Avenue church earlier in the summer. Perhaps this was owing to the number who are on their summer vacation. At any rate, the crowd was there, in holiday attire, although the chilly weather made the thin summer gowns rather cool.

The wheelman and wheelwoman, too, seemed to be more in evidence than at previous concerts and the stylishly dressed young man, in white ducks and high-standing collar, was conspicuous by his absence. It was probably too cold for him, however. All along Front street from the Schepflin block down past the Babcock building the cyclists lined up against the curb, and there listened to the music and chatted to a fair companion. The bicycle riders were not only to be found there, but at every point, threading their way through the crowd with skill only acquired by long practice.

The familiar faces were not numerous in the throng, for many of the listeners appeared to be strangers to the city or at least to the open-air concert. The natty uniforms of Chief Grant and Sergeant Kiely were to be seen here and there through the crowd, and those officers kept an eye on the visitors.

It was a very peaceful crowd, however, and, aside from a mild flirtation here and there, all was quiet. There was a steady procession up and down the sidewalks that good naturedly jostled the crowd that preferred to line up along the sidewalk to listen to the music. The steps of the First M. E. church made an excellent grand stand, and they were occupied at an early hour, while the wide sidewalk at that point gave standing room to many.

The evening was a delightful one, and the little chill in the air was by no means unpleasant. The stars were unhidden by clouds, and later in the evening the moon chose to be one of the party. By moonlight the scene was a beautiful one, the usually ugly appearing sheds and buildings assuming strange and fantastic shapes. Gradually the throng dispersed, and when the strains of "Home, Sweet Home," floated out from the band stand, all disappeared and the moon and empty band stand were left alone.

Johnny Get Your Gun.

Somewhere in the rear of the Boice estate, or thereabouts, on East Front street, there is an owl, wild cat or some other specie of the hairy or feathery tribe, which makes no noise in the daytime, but at night it's a holy terror. The noise made is heartrending and is generally only tolerated in case of death. But there can be no case of death in this instance for the disturber of the peace seems to take a delight in yelling at night only.

Gang of Tramps in the Toils.

Eight tramps were arrested on Monday night in Elizabethport as a result of a raid made on a gang who have been committing depredations along the line of the Jersey Central. The men are supposed to belong to the gang that has been annoying the residents of Westfield, Roselle and Cranford, and are believed to be members of the same gang that set fire to and burned a freight car some time ago at the place where they were caught.

Dr. Lewis Asked to Lecture.

Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis, pastor of the Seventh-Day Baptist church in this city, has been asked and prevailed on to go into the lecture field. At the meeting of Seventh-Day Baptists held at Alfred, N. Y., and just closed, Dr. Lewis was urged to make a lecturing tour and spread his knowledge and intellectuality of religion. At the conference a year ago Dr. Lewis was urged to take a similar field, but no decisive action was taken at that time.

"Boys will be boys," but you can't afford to lose any of them. Be ready for the green apple season by having DeWitt's Colic and Cholera Cure in the house. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

BRYAN'S CALL ON HILL

Courteously and Pleasantly Received at Wolferts Roost.

OUTCOME OF THE VISIT NOT DISCLOSED

Later the Democratic Nominee Makes a Speech in Front of the Albany City Hall and at Its Close Resumes His Journey to the West.

Albany, Aug. 26.—Several thousand people crowded closely together in front of the city hall last night and listened to William J. Bryan deliver a political speech and although the reception surpassed in attendance any meeting which Mr. Bryan has addressed in the east, it was secondary in general interest to the dinner given the democratic candidate by senator David B. Hill earlier in the evening. Exactly what was said at Senator Hill's residence or whether any agreements between the two leaders of the democracy were made may never be known, but general opinion naturally ascribes to the bread-breaking an important place in the present campaign. How near Mr. Bryan and the senator came together politically through their talk is something neither will tell. The Buffalo convention, however, may bring to light something about what was done, but in the meanwhile the public will be kept in ignorance on the subject.

A Courteous Greeting.

Senator Hill's guests, who were assembled at his beautiful home to greet Mr. and Mrs. Bryan, were Judge and Mrs. D. Cady Herrick, Mr. and Mrs. Louis W. Pratt, ex-Senator Norton Chase and Gen. and Mrs. Ferdinand P. Earle of New York. Aside from the bare announcement of the names of the guests the senator declines to have anything to say concerning the dinner. It was stated, however, by some of those present that Senator Hill's greeting to Mr. Bryan when the latter drove up in his carriag was calculated to put Mr. Bryan entirely at his ease, being very courteous and pleasant.

Speaks at Albany.

The train on which Mr. Bryan traveled pulled into the Union station at 5:05. A big crowd had gathered to see the democratic nominee. They pushed and crowded each other, and when Mr. Bryan appeared the crowd cheered. The police forced a passage for the nominee and his wife. Ex-senator Norton Chase and Louis W. Pratt, collector of internal revenue for the district, met Mr. and Mrs. Bryan at the train in behalf of Senator Hill, and after they had taken their places in the carriage beside the senator's guests the carriage whirled away to Wolferts Roost, Senator Hill's suburban home. A reception committee of 100 democrats had also met Mr. Bryan at the station. The democratic nominee was scheduled to appear at the city hall meeting at 6:50, but he came fifteen minutes late. A temporary stand, decorated with bunting, had been erected on the west side of the municipal building, and the big gathering crowded about the stand an hour before Mr. Bryan made his appearance. A brass band stationed on the platform gave the people the first intimation that the young Nebraskan was near by striking up "Hail to the Chief." A moment later and Mr. Bryan, flushed with a struggle through a throng of his supporters, came as though from a catapult through the doorway leading to the stand, closely followed by ex-Senator Chase and Collector Pratt. His appearance was greeted with cheers. There was more cheering as Mr. Bryan stepped forward, and when it had died away he began his speech. This was not very long, and at its conclusion he and Mrs. Bryan were driven to the depot and the journey to the west was resumed.

SUICIDE FOLLOWING FAILURE.

Tragic Result of the Closing of a Private Bank at Lowell, Mich.

Lowell, Mich., Aug. 26.—Charles Church, junior member of the private banking house of C. J. Church & Co., shot and fatally wounded his wife and then committed suicide yesterday. The bank closed its doors Monday, giving as a reason that it was unable to realize upon its assets. Deputy Sheriff Cowan called at the younger Church's house to serve a writ of attachment. When Church saw him he locked the door, and immediately afterwards three pistol shots were heard. The door was broken in and Mr. and Mrs. Church were found lying on the floor, the former dead and the latter mortally wounded. The elder Church has disappeared.

Henke Was Murdered.

Burlington, N. J., Aug. 26.—The coroner's jury in the case of John T. Henke, who was found strangled to death in his store here on Sunday morning last, returned a verdict accusing Thomas Cromwell and another person, unknown, of the deed.

Garman Nominated for Congress.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Aug. 26.—The democrats of the Twelfth congressional district yesterday afternoon unanimously nominated John A. Garman for congress. Mr. Garman is chairman of the democratic state committee.

Printing Company Incorporated.

Albany, Aug. 26.—The Binghamton Chronicle Printing and Publishing company, to conduct a general job printing and publish a weekly newspaper at Binghamton, capital $20,000, has been incorporated.

Democratic-Silver Literature.

Washington, Aug. 26.—The democratic and silver party people have jointly ordered 1,000,000 documents.

STRUCK AN ICEBERG

Loss of the Moldava Due to Unavoidable Accident.

WILL BE NO OFFICIAL INVESTIGATION

Disaster Occurred in a Fog So Heavy That the Obstruction Was Not Seen Until Too Late—Thirty-Five Hours in Open Boats.

New York, Aug. 26.—The loss in mid-ocean of the British tramp steamer Moldava, from Cardiff for Halifax, by striking an iceberg, was so clearly an unavoidable accident that, it is said, there will be no official investigation. The crew, which was picked up at sea by the Apchor line steamer Circassia and brought to this port, will be sent back by the British consul, and the captain, Burnside, will take care of himself. The collision occurred during a fog so heavy that neither the captain nor the other three men on the lookout saw the berg until they were very close to it and when their efforts to avoid the accident were unavailing, although the vessel was running at only half speed, five miles an hour. The berg suddenly loomed up four points on the port bow. The helm was at once put hard a-port, but shortly after the berg appeared on the starboard bow, and, not being able to clear it, the vessel was sent astern at full speed, but too late, the ship striking bow on. At first there seemed to be no damage. The ship started off from the ice, with no other injury apparently than a scratch on the bow, but a few moments afterwards a sounding showed thirteen inches of water in the hold. The captain then ordered the engines slowly ahead and prepared to take to the boats. Nothing could be packed, but there were a few things belonging to the crew already in their bags and these were hastily thrown into the boats. The captain himself saved only his register, log book, sextant and quadrant, not even the ship's compass. Capt. Burnside did not leave the ship until the decks were awash. The boats then stood by until the ship sank beneath the water. For thirty-five hours they rowed, and then the Circassia appeared and the boats containing the castaways were taken up bodily on the davits, this being made possible by the smoothness of the sea. This disaster recalls the fate of the White Star freighter Naronic, which left Liverpool in 1893 and was never again heard of except for two lifeboats belonging to her that were afterwards picked up. It was supposed that she was sunk by an iceberg.

A Dinner to the Viceroy by Former Residents of China.

New York, Aug. 26.—George F. Seward announces that the arrangements for the dinner to be given the viceroy on Saturday evening at the Waldorf by former residents of China had been completed by the committee having the matter in charge. The invitation was sent to the viceroy several weeks ago, and he immediately cabled his acceptance. Fifty gentlemen who have either resided in China or have had intimate business relations with the country will attend. The Rev. Dr. W. A. P. Martin, president of the Imperial university at Pekin, will probably make an address on behalf of those present, afterwards translating it into Chinese. Speeches will probably be made by the Rev. Dr. S. L. Baldwin, John Russell Young, John E. Ward, George F. Seward, ex-Secretary Foster, President Angell of Michigan university and others. The gentlemen assisting Mr. Seward in arranging the details of the affair are: Ex-ministers to China John Russell Young and John E. Ward, Messrs. John L. Cadwalader, Edward L. Burlingame, John Brisben Walker, F. D. Grant, Everett Frazar, J. G. Purdon and Drs. W. A. P. Martin and S. L. Baldwin.

TREASURY GOLD RESERVE.

Again Nearing the Danger Line, But Officials Are Hopeful.

Washington, Aug. 26.—The treasury gold reserve to-day stands at $101,872,463. The withdrawals at New York yesterday were $95,000. During the past three weeks the loss of gold at San Francisco by the redemption of legal tenders has aggregated $3,500,000, but it is believed the movement there has nearly spent its force. The treasury has been informed that arrangements for the further import of gold from Europe to the extent of $1,750,000 have been perfected. It is said there is now on the water bound for this country $2,000,000 in gold, and the treasury officials hope this gold on its arrival will soon find its way into the treasury.

The Price of Oil in Scotland.

Glasgow, Aug. 26.—A meeting of the Scotch oil companies will be held this afternoon in order to consider the fact that American oils are selling in Scotland at below the Scotch agreement prices. Some of the companies insist that the competition must be met immediately by a reduction of prices, or else they will quit the association.

THE BLUEFISH BRIGADE.

What Happens When the Blues Make a Charge Upon the Menhaden.

"When menhaden or herring are driven up on the beach by bluefish, as they often are so that they can be carried off by the cart load," said a fisherman, "there is very seldom found among them one of their pursuers; and if one is found it is likely to be a fish that is diseased or that has been hurt in some way. The bluefish follows to the very verge of the water, but there it stops, and it is so powerful and alert a swimmer that, close as it is, it still easily keeps clear of the land. The menhaden and herring are no mean swimmers; they could come as close and keep off the shore as easily as the bluefish do, but not when the bluefish are after them. Then they are like men pursued to the edge of a precipice; it is almost certain death to jump, but they must do that or turn and take the chances of breaking through the pursuing line.

"When the bluefish—there may be 3,000 or 4,000 of them together—sight a school of menhaden they go for it like a brigade of heavy cavalry, cutting and slashing, snapping and biting, right and left. The menhaden are simply overborne by superior weight, and there is nothing for them to do but flee. If they are driven toward the shore, the land is to them what the precipice would be to the man; they must take it or they must turn and try to fight their way through. Many do turn and try to swim under or over or around the savage bluefish, and some escape in this way, and some are snapped up, and some are maimed and then cast ashore; and many of them, crowding together, are so closely pressed that they are practically forced ashore.

"Sometimes fish that are not cast up very far flop down into the water again; a high wave may set some free. A fish thus liberated may find its fins so damaged that it can't swim, and it is cast up again; weakened by its rough experience it may fall a prey to some of the bluefish yet lingering off shore; it may escape."—N. Measuring Wind by Sound.

The means by which wind can be measured by its sound is a novelty in modern scientific research to which the attention of the National Academy of Sciences has been drawn by Prof. Barus. He asserts that the whistling of the wind as it crosses a wire varies with the velocity, and that this can be computed from the pitch of the note observed in case of a given diameter of wire and for a given air temperature. A special micrometer attachment can be made to convey the sound, isolated from other noises, to the observer at a distance. Thus, every gust and variation of the wind can be studied in this way and an idea of the actual direction of the gust can be had by means of the sounds obtained from three wires placed at right angles to one another —Chicago Chronicle.

MANY LIVELY SCENES

Saratoga Republican Convention Not Lacking in Enthusiasm.

TOWN AND MEETING HALL PACKED

First Day's Session Continued Late into the Night—Defeat of Warner Miller—Platform Favors the Gold Standard and Upholds the Raines Law.

Saratoga, N. Y., Aug. 26.—After two momentous sessions the republican convention adjourned late last night until 11 o'clock to-day without naming a ticket. The day was a most eventful one. No larger or more enthusiastic crowd of republicans has attended a state convention in recent years, if ever in the history of the Empire state. Representative men from all parts of the state are here, and Saratoga, the best equipped and most beautiful convention town in the state, had her hands full caring for the people. Over 5,000 crowded the convention hall until there was room for no more, and between the sessions Broadway presented a spectacle long to be remembered by all who were part of the assemblage. The convention assembled at noon with representative Frank S. Black of Troy as temporary chairman. His speech was classed by republicans here as one of the best contributions to national or state campaign literature that has been heard in this eventful year. During recess the committee on credentials listened to fifteen different contests.

Warner Miller Defeated.

When the convention reassembled at 5 o'clock Warner Miller, who had been turned down by the committee, carried his fight before the convention. He made one of the best speeches of his life, but the opposition rolled over him, and his claim was thrown out. He retired from the hall, declaring his loyalty to the party in spite of the treatment he had received. Gen. Stewart L. Woodford of Brooklyn was made permanent chairman. He proved entirely too weak as a presiding officer for the noisy crowd of boomers who occupied the galleries. The convention ran itself in up-to-date style and the chairman was permitted to have order only when the enthusiastic shouters for the different candidates were weary. All the interruptions were made in good humor, and nothing except the retirement of Mr. Miller marred the harmony of the proceedings. Mr. Platt from his place in the Tioga delegation smiled good-naturedly as the convention ran itself. Early in the day he had announced his final decision not to accept the nomination for governor, and to allow the candidates to fight it out in open convention. This they attempted to do, but no result was reached. The platform, rather a long re-statement of republican principles and declarations for sound money and protection, was adopted without a murmur of opposition.

Nominating Speeches.

Nominating speeches were made presenting the names of George W. Aldridge of Monroe, Hamilton Fish of Putnam, James Wadsworth of Geneseo, Frank S. Black of Troy, Gen. John Palmer of Albany, Archie E. Baxter of Elmira, Lieut.-Gov. Charles Saxton of Clyde, James Roberts of Buffalo, E. B. Brackett of Saratoga and Timothy E. Ellsworth of Lockport. The ballots were taken without result. Fourteen men were voted for. Aldridge led with 224 votes out of 757 cast on the first ballot. He had 227 on the second ballot. Speaker Fish, the next highest candidate, had 123 votes. It being plain that no candidate had sufficient strength to win a motion to adjourn until 11 o'clock this morning was passed at 10:20 p. m. After adjournment there were conferences and attempts to fix up a slate. There was talk of combinations of lesser candidates to prevent Aldridge from getting the nomination.

An Exciting Incident.

The only real exciting incident of the day was the retirement of Mr. Miller. After the report of the committee on credentials had been presented a delegate from Oneida moved that the Oneida contest be voted on separately. Before the motion was put Warner Miller rose from a seat in the Essex county delegation. The chair asked from what county the gentleman came. Mr Miller replied: "From Herkimer." Otto Irving Wise of New York made a point of order that Mr. Miller's name does not appear on the list of delegates and therefore he could not be heard. The chair ruled the point well taken. Great confusion followed. Mr. Platt rose in his place and asked unanimous consent that Mr. Miller be heard. There was great cheering. The chair rapped for order and stated that there being no objection Mr. Miller would be heard. Cheers and hisses greeted this.

Not Begging, Simply Demanding Justice.

Mr. Miller finally was heard. He said he had never known a republican convention in the state of New York to refuse a hearing to an elected delegate whether on the roll or not. He returned thanks to Mr. Platt for obtaining him the privilege. There were interruptions from the galleries as he proceeded. He said that he came not to ask a favor, but to demand justice. "Mr. Chairman, the offer was made to me since I came here and it was known that the state committee had not put my name and those of my colleagues on the roll, that I could be substituted in other counties, but I refused. (A voice replied, "That's right"). During all my potitical life I have never come into a state convention or any other convention by stealth or by a back door. During all those years I had behind me the loyal support of my own people in Herkimer county, and I do not come here, sir, begging anything for myself, I come simply to defend my rights. And, sir, if I did not know that I had had a fair and and honest majority of the delegates of the republican convention in Herkimer county, I would not be in this town to-day, I would not be in this hall." Applause. Mr. Miller then proceeded to recite his version of the election of himself and other delegates, and closed by declaring that they might put him out of this convention but they could not put him out of the republican party.

Official Result of the Ballots.

The following is the official result of the two ballots: First ballot—Aldridge 224, Fish 111, Wadsworth 55, Black 36, Palmer 39, Baxter 59, Saxton 72, Roberts 95, Brackett 33, Ellsworth 12, Fassett 21. Second ballot—Aldridge 227, Fish 123, Wadsworth 51, Black 37, Palmer 31, Baxter 55, Saxton 67, Roberts 91, Brackett 33, Ellsworth 16, Fessett 29, Odell 5, Lexow 3, Hiscock 1. There was laughter when during the roll call in the second ballot Mr. Platt announced the vote of Tioga as one each for Aldridge, Fish, Wadsworth, Black and Baxter. The widely distributed vote of Onondaga as announced by Frank Hiscock also caused amusement.

The Platform.

The platform endorses the administration of Gov. Morton; endorses the nomination of McKinley and Hobart, and assures them the enthusiastic support of the republicans of New York; demands the enactment of a protective tariff law; praises the Raines liquor tax law; favors the improvement of highways and the construction of good roads throughout the state; reaffirms faith in the doctrine of home rule, and guarantees that that doctrine shall be applied to the Greater New York municipality. The financial plank is in part as follows: "The republican party demands that the present gold standard must be maintained, and that the way to recover our lost prosperity is to return to that wise industrial policy by which under republican rule prosperity was achieved. To the maintenance of a pure circulation of dollars of full and equal value the republican party is resolutely pledged, and for the firm establishment of that policy it now asks the support of every citizen who wishes neither to cheat nor to be cheated. No injury could be inflicted upon trade and commerce, no fraud perpetrated upon labor, no shame visited upon the national reputation, more hurtful than would be the enactment of a law compelling the people to accept, in the payment of debts, a coin for one dollar which they could spend for not much more than half that sum. The attempt to make an ounce of gold equal in value to only sixteen ounces of silver when it is now worth thirty ounces is hopeless and absurd. The United States could neither take nor use one-half the silver that a free coinage law would bring to their mints. This fact is so plain to the world of commerce and business that the mere announcement of the success of the democratic ticket would send gold at once to a premium, drive debtors into cruel liquidation and cause a further withdrawal of capital from investment and a further suspension of industry."

SOUND MONEY DEMOCRATS.

Work Transacted by the Pennsylvania Convention at Philadelphia.

Philadelphia, Aug. 26.—The platform adopted by the sound money democratic state convention yesterday afternoon repudiates the Chicago ticket and affirms the financial plank of the platform of the late democratic state convention at Allentown. The convention, which was held in Music hall, was called to order by William M. Singerly. In all 125 delegates were present. John C. Bullit of this city was chosen permanent chairman. There was some opposition to a third ticket, but this soon disappeared. A state central committee and delegates to the national convention were chosen, and the following electors-at-large were elected: William Singerly, Philadelphia; A. S. Landis, Blair; S. C. McCandless, Allegheny; John Blanchard, Centre. After the adoption of the name "Jeffersonian party" and the selection of presidential electors, the convention adjourned sine die.

Hobart Leaves Canton.

Canton, O., Aug. 26.—Mr. Hobart left for the east last evening by the way of Cleveland. He was here two hours and a half longer than he expected to be when he arrived and he had ample time to discuss the whole political situation with Major McKinley. Among the callers on Major McKinley during Mr. Hobart's visit were Lloyd Collis of New York city and upwards of twenty traveling salesmen representing all parts of the country.

WEATHER INDICATIONS.

Furnished by Weather Observer Neagle.)

Fair Tonight and Thursday; Slightly Cooler Thursday.

At 2 o'Clock Leggett's Thermometer Registered 77 Degrees.

The gold standard Democrats are in session at Trenton this afternoon.

Frederick F. Glasby, of Elizabeth, is in Plainfield today telling his friends that he is a candidate for the Republican nomination of Sheriff of Union county. Mr. Glasby filled one term in that office and he is anxious for another. He was favorably received by the local Republicans whom he met, but it is not likely that he will receive much effective support hereabouts since William T. Kirk is also a candidate for the same place.

There are about 300 newspapers published in New Jersey, of which 76 are Republican, 70 are Democratic and 66 nominally independent. There are 24 German newspapers, 4 Italian newspapers and 1 newspaper printed in Hollandese. Two papers are published by colored men. This is an average of one newspaper in every 2,118 males of all ages in New Jersey, or to every 1,155 of the legal voters of the State that voted in the last Presidential election.

The new election law provides that a person who solicits from a candidate for elective office any money or other property, or who seeks to induce a candidate to purchase a ticket, card or other evidence of admission to any hall, fair, picnic or entertainment, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine not exceeding one hundred dollars, or by imprisonment for a period not exceeding six months, or both. However, the act does not apply to a request for a contribution by an authorized representative of a political party, organization or association of which such candidate is a member or by which he is nominated.

John J. Matthews was yesterday appointed Assistant Postmaster at Elizabeth for four years. Mr. Matthews is one of the most successful politicians, so far as getting office is concerned, that Union County has turned out. Although he will not be thirty-four until September 17 he has held an office ever since he could vote. He was elected School Commissioner in Elizabeth when barely twenty-one, served two terms afterwards as Secretary of the Board of Education, two terms in the Assembly, two as Clerk of the House, two as Engrossing Clerk of the Senate, and then the office of State Superintendent of the School Census was created for him, and he held it until a Republican Legislature abolished the office.

MARSH WANTS NO OFFICE.

The Elizabeth Man Declares That he is Not Looking for Honors.

Yesterday the New York Tribune as much as said that F. C. Marsh, of Elizabeth, had declared that he would vote for Bryan and Sewall because he wanted the Senatorial nomination.

An Elizabeth Journal man saw Mr. Marsh at his office yesterday morning, called his attention to this correspondence. The ex-Senator appeared to be amused, and in reply said:

"Well, what do you wish me to say? I am not a candidate for any office. Will that do?"

Then he added: "I don't know where this came from, except it was written from a little interview I had the other day with a newspaper man, not a reporter of this paper. He stopped me on the street and said:

"'Senator, they say you are going to vote for Bryan and Sewall.'

"Well," I replied, "did you ever hear anyone say that I had said I was not going to vote for them?"

"'No' said he, 'but I knew you were a sound-money man, and I supposed you were opposed to Bryan.'

"I told him that it would be ungrateful for one who had been so honored by his party to oppose its candidates, who had been nominated so fairly as Bryan and Sewall were. There was nothing underhanded in their selection by the convention. I did criticise the platform, but I never said I would bolt."

"'Then am I to understand that you will vote for Bryan?' asked the reporter.

"I certainly shall vote for the nominees of my party, I told him. Now that is all there is about it. Will that do you? You can say this, I am not a candidate for office."

Why is It,

if catarrh is a blood disease, as some claim, that physicians frequently advise change of air and climate to those suffering? Catarrh is a climatic affection, and nothing but a local remedy or a change of climate will cure it. Ely's Cream Balm is so efficient as to do away with the necessity of leaving home and friends, causing instant relief and is a real cure of catarrh.

Mrs. Rhodie Nash, of this place, was taken in the night with cramping pains, and the next day diarrhoea set in. She took half a bottle of blackberry cordial but got no relief. She then sent to me to see if I had anything that would help her. I sent her a bottle of Chamberlin's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy, and the first dose relieved her. Another of our neighbors had been sick for about a week and had tried different remedies for diarrhœa but kept getting worse. I sent him this same remedy. Only four doses of it were required to cure him. He says he owes his recovery to this wonderful remedy.— Mrs. Mary Sibley, Sidney, Mich. For sale by T. S. Armstrong, Druggist.

TO THE BLACKBIRD.

Bird with the saffron bill,
Like close-furled crocus bud in early spring,
Thou makest all the bleak and dreary wold
Melodiously to ring.

Thy sanctuary gleams like burnished gold;
The thin larch copse that fronts the wanning sun,
This is the haven that thy soul has won;
Its charms are manifold.

Warm on its banks the shortening sunbeams lie,
Its trembling spires are kindled into flames;
And see the pulsing planet that proclaims
The night fast drawing nigh.

There, where the shadows yet more closely cling,
Those fluent notes of thine are swift outrolled,
And the tired shepherd, leaning o'er his fold,
Lingers to hear thee sing.

The rill that babbles on its tortuous way
Steals noiselessly along thy calm retreat,
And night draws nearer with reluctant feet,
Fearing to hush thy lay.

The amber light fades out along the west,
And thou art silent; like a half-spent bolt
With dipping flight thou skir'st the quickening holt,
To seek thy new-built nest.

The thy fond mate awaits thee; there ere long,
With head close-tucked beneath thy ebon wing,
Thou'lt hide thy pipe of gold till dawn shall bring
The round world back to song.

—Arthur Wright, in Chambers' Journal.

TRACKED.

Rogers fell a victim to his enthusiasm for the new wheel. Added to the ecstasy of the devoted cyclist was also the passion of the inventor. Rogers had plenty of money, and so could indulge his fads. He had an ingenious brain, and consequently when his craze was photography he invented several perfectly unworkable cameras; and now that he had taken to cycling with all the fervor of youth, he had naturally concocted many improvements, so-called, upon the machine.

The wheel upon which he was now mounted was practically his own invention. It was exceedingly light and strong, the framework being made of aluminum, and its pneumatic tire had a covering which he was positive would make it absolutely non-slipping. The ordinary geometrical raised work on the average non-slipping tire, he held, was inartistic, and so he drew a design for a non-slipping tire which would leave his own autograph, as it were, along the roads, and which would prevent the wheel from going sideways on turning a muddy corner. A celebrated rubber manufacturing company had constructed a tire, faithfully following Rogers' designs, at tremendous cost, and now the young man was for the first time mounted on his new machine, finding, to his delight, that it worked beautifully.

In his eagerness to test the machine fully he went further afield than he had intended and was somewhat tired when he came to the forking of the road, where it branched off in three directions with never a finger post to guide the bewildered traveler.

Night was coming on rapidly and earlier than the season called for, because the clouds hung low in the sky, and the weather seemed threatening. Rogers had come too far to return home that night. He knew in a vague and general way that Saddlesbury was ahead of him, and he thought he must be within ten miles of the place, but which of the three roads led to it was a question he could not answer, and there was no one abroad that lowering evening from whom he could make inquiries. After a moment's hesitation he again mounted his wheel and took the road which appeared to be the most traveled, but after following it a mile in increasing darkness this road again branched and neither of the new ways seemed particularly inviting.

It was now so dark that he resolved to light his lamp, and then discovered that in his intense absorption regarding the improved qualities of his new wheel he had neglected minor details; he had no oil with him, and his lamp, a new one, was entirely empty. He concluded to risk arrest by the local authorities, so he once more mounted his wheel and drove ahead. The rain now began to come down steadily, and the moon, which he knew had risen, was entirely obscured by the clouds. The roads became wet and slippery, and he found that his new invention was still capable of improvement, for on turning an unexpected corner somewhat suddenly, the wheels slipped from under him and he sprawled on his hands and knees in the mud. Nothing that human ingenuity has yet concocted is so treacherous as the absolutely non-slipping tire on a slushy corner. Rogers picked himself up and struck the mud from his clothing as well as he could, groped about in the rain and darkness for his machine, put it on its wheels once more and trundled it along, trudging by its side. He longed for a habitation of any sort, but the road seemed absolutely deserted.

Tramping gloomily in the downpour he cursed his inventive faculties that had led him astray, and the bad weather which made his journey a misery. Once or twice he mounted the machine and tried to make quicker progress, but the darkness was so intense and the roads so bad that he finally abandoned all thought of wheeling. At last he came to an avenue of trees whose thick overhanging branches formed a kind of shelter from the storm. He stood his machine up against one of the tree trunks, filled his pipe, and, after many futile attempts, succeeded in getting a match to burn long enough to light the tobacco.

Although it was a wet night, it was not cold, and he had some thought of remaining till daylight under the shelter of the trees. He smoked a pipe or two, and rested for perhaps an hour, when, with a sigh, he made up his mind that anything was better than this, even the pitiless storm, which showed no sign of abating. So still trundling his machine, he tramped on in the slush along the lane until he came out in the open once more where half an hour in the pelting rain made him wish he had remained under the shelter of the trees. Another grove presently gave him the shelter he had abandoned, and there he relit his pipe and smoked gloomily. It seemed to him that daylight would soon reappear, but, on striking a match and looking at his watch he found that the night was not yet half over, it being but little after twelve o'clock. He was hungry, wet, tired and thoroughly miserable, in a condition of mind to welcome the roughest fare.

As he stood under the trees Rogers noticed that the rain slackened, and finally it ceased. The moon now poured out fitfully from among the clouds, and, yearning for the comforts of home, the young man pushed off with a determination to make a final effort to reach civilization of some sort.

Shortly after leaving the grove he came to a gateway that evidently led to a house. As there was no porter's lodge beside the gateway, he came to the conclusion that the house could not be a very important one, and that perhaps the inmates would not resent being aroused at that untimely hour to give shelter to a weary fellow creature. Pushing open the gate he wheeled his machine into the avenue and after a ten minutes' tramp along the winding road saw before him the bulk of a large country house with numerous outbuildings, and, whhat was more to the purpose, a light still burning in the windows of what was apparently a kitchen. He was cheered by the thought that perhaps some of the servants were sitting up late.

Coming to a gate that led to the kitchen door, he entered it. Passing a shed he saw, partly by the watery moonlight and partly by their own lights, which were still burning, two bicycles in a corner of the shed. He placed his own beside them, and, tired as he was, he looked with an expert's eye at the two other machines. They were of an old pattern and did not have pneumatic tires. He was astonished that such machines should belong to a house so pretentious as the one he was about to enter, but gave no particular thought to the matter at the time. A moment later he knocked at the kitchen door. He thought he heard voices within just before he knocked, but now there was intense silence, and no response was made to his demand for admittance. After waiting a reasonable time he raised his hand to knock once again, when the door was cautiously opened a few inches and a man peeped out at him.

"What do you want?" said the man in a hoarse whisper, and seeing Rogers' hand still on the knocker, added: "Don't wake up everybody, it's late, you know."

Rogers apologized, and said that all he wanted was shelter and something to eat.

"Wait a minute," said the man, and he partially closed the door. Rogers heard a whispered consultation inside, then the door opened, and the man said, quietly: "Come in."

Rogers entered, and saw there were two occupants of the kitchen. One man sat by the table, on which there was a huge joint of cold meat, bread and butter, and foaming flagons of beer. This evidence of good cheer was most grateful to the feelings of the cyclist.

"Come in," whispered the man, "but don't make a noise. We don't want master wakened at this hour of the night. He'd make trouble if he was."

"I'll be very quiet," whispered Rogers, "but I want a cut of that beef, and if you can give me a place to sleep I'll make it all right with you in the morning, and get away unseen by anybody."

The man at the table had not spoken, but he now made a motion toward the cold meat, as if he invited the cyclist to help himself.

While Rogers ate and drank with the energy of a healthy, hungry man, nothing was said. The other two sat looking at each other, seemingly in some dismay. At last the younger of the two men rose, opened a door cautiously, went up a stone paved passage and opened another door. He returned with a lighted candle in his hand and nodded to the elder man.

"Now," he said to Rogers, "if you have finished your meal, come this way, and I'll find you a bed."

He led the tired cyclist up the stone passage, and to a small opening off, in which was a small cot bed.

"That's the best we can do for you tonight," said the man, setting down the candle. "If you had come earlier, we could have found you a better place."

"Oh, that's all right," said Rogers "I couldn't ask for anything better and I hope I shan't get you into any trouble by coming late." Saying which he slipped some money into the hand of the servant, who took it without comment, bade him good night, and retired.

Rogers took off his wet clothes, spread them out so that they might be reasonably dry by the time he needed them in the morning, and fell asleep as soon as he had thrown himself down on the cot bed.

His awakening in the morning was somewhat of a surprise to him. He found himself rudely shaken by the shoulder, and on opening his eyes beheld an elderly man of gentlemanly appearance standing over him with a pistol in his hand. Two countrymen, one evidently a groom, stood near the door regarding him with every appearance of fear and horror. They both held cudgels, and were apparently ready to attack him should he make a dash for the door.

"Why, my man," said the elderly gentleman, "I hope your sleep has been refreshing."

"It has, indeed, sir, thank you," answered Rogers. "But why these warlike preparations? Am I a prisoner?"

"Well, something of that sort," replied the old gentleman, astonished at the language and coolness of his guest.

"You are the master of the house, I take it."

"You are quite correct. Is that your bicycle out in the yard?"

"Yes," answered Rogers. "At least I placed it in the shed last night."

"Oh, did you? We found the wretched machine there this morning, and it led to our search for you."

"Wretched machine!" cried Rogers sitting up in bed. "Oh, come now, I'll stand rudeness to myself, but I'll be hanged if I'll allow the bicycle to be slandered. I want you to know, sir, that this is probably the finest and most expensive bicycle that exists in this country. Its frame is aluminum, and the cost of it is as great as if it were made of silver, and I flatter myself that the non-slipping tire, although it skids rather badly in the mud, is a unique invention, if I do say it myself. I want you to know that I am the inventor of that bicycle. It was constructed under my supervision, and if you will allow me to show its merits, I fancy you will change your opinion of it."

"That may be so," rejoined the old man, putting his pistol in his pocket, for he saw that this was not the criminal he thought he had captured. "I don't know very much about bicycles, so perhaps you will be so good as to dress and give me some explanation of how you came to be here."

"Oh, that's very simple," said Rogers. "I lost my way last night, and came up your lane some time after 12. There was a light in the kitchen and I found two of your servants having a late supper. I asked them for shelter and they put me in here."

"Ah, I see," said the old man. "Well, those two were burglars, and have made off with all they could lay their hands on that was valuable and at the same time portable. My son has gone to town for the police and has not yet returned. Perhaps you can aid us by giving a description of the men. I thought at first that you were one of the gang who had perhaps taken too much drink and overslept yourself, but I see you are nothing of the kind."

"I shall be glad to give you every assistance in my power," said Rogers.

In a few minutes he was up and dressed, and on going outside saw that the burglars had a keen appreciation of his invention, and had taken away his new machine, leaving one of their own in its place.

"I am sorry," said the old man, courteously, "that in seeking our hospitality you should have been robbed of a valuable cycle. Let us hope we may catch the rascals. Here is my son and two policemen."

Rogers went out to the lane and walked a short distance from the house, critically examining the ground as he did so.

"Look here!" he cried to the old gentleman, as he came hurriedly back. "These men have taken what they didn't know was an autograph bicycle. Here you see the name in the mud: 'Rogers,' marked quite distinctly. That was a little idea of my own. In making a non-slipping tire I had the name written, as it were, in raised letters all around the circumference of the wheel. If we are reasonably active there will be no trouble in tracing the thieves. I shall mount this wheel they have left behind, and if your son and the officers will follow me I think we can track them. I had my name on the tires largely to identify my machine if it happened to be stolen, but it never struck me that it might write my name all along the road."

Rogers, after a hasty breakfast, sprang on the burglar's bike, and put his best licks along the lane and down the byroad he had traveled the night before. Even when they came to the main road ten miles away he could still descry his name in many of the soft spots of the road. Before noon they had run down the burglars, much to their surprise, and Rogers, pointing out the merits of his machine to the captured man who had ridden it, explained to him in the most kindly manner that if he had not stolen that particular bicycle he would very likely not at that moment be in custody. Whereupon the burglars loudly cursed the automatic autograph registering bicycle, which conduct the indignant Mr. Rogers resented. All of which goes to show that burglars have no real appreciation of talent.—Detroit Free Press.

Prison Malingering.

A case showing great cunning and perseverance, as well as tolerance of much self-inflicted pain continued for many months, is worth telling. The convict was most determined and resourceful in his efforts at malingering. He began by running a piece of copper wire into his knee, by which he nearly lost his leg. He then produced a number of sores round the knee joint and kept up a great degree of swelling and inflammation by means of rag and thread pushed into the wounds. Upon the discovery of this he took to introducing lime below the skin. On another occasion a bandage was found firmly bound round the man's thigh, the result being, in medical phraseology, "extensive swelling and lividity of the thigh." The doctor ordered his limb to be enveloped with a large piece of guttapercha so as to checkmate the prisoner's malpractice. The latter, however, by means of a strip of sheeting and the skewer to which part of his dinner was attached formed a tourniquet and by it compressed his leg so much during the night as to quite neutralize the medical treatment it had received during the day. The imposture was at length detected by an order of the doctor to expose the limb outside the bedclothes to the view of the officer by day and night, and from that hour progress was toward complete recovery.—Chambers' Journal.

—Genuine and innocent wit is surely the flavor of the mind. Man could not direct his way by plain reason, and support his life by tasteless food; but God has given us wit, and flavor, and brightness, and laughter, and perfumes, to enliven the days of man's pilgrimage, and to charm his pained steps over the burning marl.—Sydney Smith.

GREATEST METEORITE.

It Lies Buried on the Shores of Melville Bay.

Lieut. Peary and Prof. Dyche Both Claim It and Will Start Shortly Toward the North Pole to Get Possession of It.

Two men, both of whom know from experience the perils of the ice-bound oceans to the north, who have traveled over the snow-covered wastes that keep eternal watch and ward around the pole, are racing thither, each determined to bring back, if any power can be found to raise and to transport it, the greatest meteorite that science has any knowledge of.

This gigantic mass of solid iron, weighing at the least estimate hundreds upon hundreds of tons, lies on the shores of Melville bay. Explorer Franklin was the first white man who ever set eyes on the marvel. The natives who showed it to him told him that it had been there forever, and all through those northern regions the fame of it has lived among the tribes from time immemorial. They call it "the great iron stone."

How big this monster mass of soft iron is not even the Esquimaux know, for only a small portion of it protrudes above the ground. It is, judged only by what is visible, worth a fat fortune, even in these days of billionaires.

The two men who have entered on this swift race, with this huge iron goal, are Lieut. R. E. Peary, of Arctic fame, and Prof. L. L. Dyche, of the University of Kansas. There is a dispute between the two explorers as to which is the real owner of the meteorite. Lieut. Peary insists upon the priority of his claim, but Prof. Dyche says that when he went to Greenland to bring Peary back from his ill-fated Arctic expedition, the natives showed the wonder to them both, and both spoke then of the feasibility of bringing it to the United States.

Now Prof. Dyche has disappeared, bound on some far, mysterious mission, and the wise ones at the west say he has gone to get the meteorite. From his home in Kansas the word comes that after leaving there, which he did quietly, he went to Chicago and then came to New York. In both cities he has wealthy friends who have promised to back him with money in his big undertaking.

But the latest explanation of the whole matter, says the New York Journal, is even more startling. Last winter Prof. Dyche said to a reporter for a Kansas City newspaper that he was secretly planning for this summer a journey of arctic discovery, which, if it should prove successful, would be one of the greatest ventures of the century.

His programme was, he said, to go to Alaska, and from there make a trip across the very northernmost boundaries of North America, coming out somewhere in Labrador. He would gather on the way specimens of animals, flora and geological formations for the Kansas university, and, besides all these, would bring back a treasure from the north that would startle the scientific world.

Now, bearing in mind the declarations he made before his departure about the bringing of the meteorite and his indisputable claim to the possession of it the theory which his friends admit may be the right one is that while he is journeying across the continent from Alaska, vessels equipped by his wealthy New York and Chicago friends are to be taken to the north, that he and his party are to join them there and proceed to the site of the meteorite and stay right by it at any cost.

Meantime Lieut. Perry is not remaining idle. He is conscripting a party, and pushing the work of equipment forward with all the haste consistent with security. He expects to be ready to set sail for the north some time in July.

Pennsylvania Village Bell.

For more than 20 years Bowmansville, Pa., has had what is known as the village bell. It is swung between two high, upright poles, and was paid for by public subscription. Every day the bell is rung three times—at 5:30 o'clock a. m., 11 o'clock a. m., and four o'clock in the afternoon. The leading object of its ringing is to announce to farmers and other working people the time of day. The first bell in the morning at Bowmansville is the signal for the people to arise, and in summer most of the residents are out that early. The 11 o'clock bell announces that it is time to leave the fields and prepare for dinner. At four o'clock in the afternoon they prepare for supper.

A Safeguard in Ballooning.

The dangers of ballooning are to be slightly mitigated by the invention of a Frenchman, which invention provides for the equipment of a cylinder membrane to the car, so arranged that by the pressure of a button it may be automatically inflated with air in the unfortunate event of the balloon falling into the sea.

Webster's Spelling Book.

The first spelling-book printed in this country was entitled: "The American Spelling-Book," by Noah Webster. It was issued in 1783, and for considerable more than half a century was the standard work used in all American schools.

Delicate Dress Goods.

Some gowns are so dainty in the weave, so delicate in tint, that they seem to soil by being looked at—one or two wearings making them unpresentable, NOT USELESS. We make a specialty of cleaning fine fabrics, the more delicate the material, the better the results. Sometimes an accident will ruin a gown, without injuring the texture. We dye them then, sometimes we get a prettier effect than the original color. Fine goods stand redyeing. The finer the material the better the new color. We charge so little for cleaning or dyeing, that even if you are in doubt as to the result, it's worth while to experiment. Want a new evening gown for a dollar or two? Laundry drivers will receive your work.

ALLEGED TREATMENT OF DALY.

Dublin, Aug. 26.—The Kilkenny Journal, commenting upon the release of John Daly, the Irish political prisoner, from Portland prison, says: "The Indians' torture of captives is humane when compared with torture inflicted upon Daly in England." Continuing, the periodical mentioned refers to the allusion in the queen's speech to the outrages in Armenia, and adds: "The queen can find nearer home more vent for her hypocritical tears than among the Kurds," and asks, "Where's the queen's clemency? Daly was released a few months before death would have released him, and three others have been driven mad by tortures in penal servitude compared with which Siberian exile is drawing-room imprisonment. This is the way Victoria wishes to signalize her record reign. She would not have been a loss to the victims of her brutal rule in Ireland if she had gone years ago. At the present moment she knows she is standing in the way of those who wish to see her in her royal sepulchre, and she has neither the grace to abdicate nor the humanity to open her prisons to Irishmen until they precede her on the voyage from which none return."

DR. GALLAGHER IS INSANE.

Why His Release from Portland Prison Has Been Delayed.

London, Aug. 26.—An interview by a representative of the United-Associated Presses was had last night with Attorney Gaffney, who three years ago appeared on behalf of Dr. Thomas Gallagher of Brooklyn, N. Y., one of the dynamiters sentenced in June, 1883, to life imprisonment, before a commission appointed to inquire regarding the question of Dr. Gallagher's sanity. Mr. Gaffney stated that the government hesitates to release Dr. Gallagher under the care of Dr. McBride alone and is awaiting for the appointment of an additional guardian, fearing that Gallagher may escape from Dr. McBride and, roaming through the country, create a sensation. Mr. Gaffney further states that all of the convicted dynamiters who have been released declare that Dr. Gallagher has become hopelessly insane through the harshness of the treatment he has received during his thirteen years' imprisonment. Dr. Gallagher, it was authoritatively stated yesterday, is to be released from Portland prison, where he is confined, in the course of the next ten days.

Escape and Insanity of Whitehead.

London, Aug. 26.—A dispatch from Skibbereen to a news agency confirms the statement published in an evening newspaper that Albert George Whitehead, the recently released Irish-American dynamiter, who escaped from the home of relatives at Skibbereen and disappeared, has been found. He became completely deranged after meeting his mother.

SULTAN OF ZANZIBAR DEAD.

Sailors and Marines Landed—Fear That Trouble May Follow.

Zanzibar, Aug. 26.—The sultan of Zanzibar, Hamed bin Thwain bin Said, is dead. He was about 40 years of age, was a nephew of the late Sultans Ali, Khalifa and Burghash, and succeeded to the sultanate at the death of the Sultan Ali, on March 5, 1893. He was one of a number of claimants and was selected as being the most fitting by the British government, which exercises a protectorate over the sultanate.

Washington, Aug. 26.—The state department has received a cable message announcing that the sultan of Zanzibar died yesterday. The message adds: "Said Alid holds the palace; sailors and marines landed; rioting feared."

WILL LIVE IN TENTS

Unique Honeymoon Adopted by H. Payne Whitney and Bride.

A SOJOURN IN THE WILDERNESS

The Young Couple Will Spend the Next Few Weeks on a Game Reserve—An Old Farm House Handy in the Event of a Storm.

Newport, R. I., Aug. 26.—H. Payne Whitney and his bride will spend their honeymoon in the most unique manner. The proposed game preserve, for which a few gentlemen, of whom W. C. Whitney is one, have been buying up the farms in the vicinity of Lenox, and which now comprises twelve square miles of hilly, woodland country, is to be the scene of their first few weeks of married life. Here, high up in the mountains, some two thousand feet above the sea, they will first be "at home" in a couple of tents with a remodeled farmhouse to flee to in case of storm. A short distance away there is still under construction a more pretentious colonial cottage, upon which workmen, with all the facilities for modern quick construction, are at work day and night. It is hoped that this new shelter will be completed within a couple of weeks, and it is expected that it will be the residence of the pair until it is time to return to the city for the winter, though if "The Breakers" are to remain open their usual time this year it is not improbable that they will return here for a few weeks, since it has ordinarily been the custom for the family to spend the holidays here.

Simple Wedding Ceremony.

The wedding of Mr. Whitney, eldest son of the former secretary of the navy, William C. Whitney, and Gertrude, oldest daughter of Cornelius Vanderbilt, at "The Breakers," Mr. Vanderbilt's summer mansion, took place yesterday and was a brilliant event. Mr. Vanderbilt was wheeled to where the ceremony took place and gave his daughter away. The report that Cornelius, jr., and his wife would be present proved untrue. The wedding was conspicuous for its simplicity, though the floral decorations were magnificent. Pink predominated in the dresses of the bridesmaids. The bride's dress itself was pure white with old duchess lace and pearl trimmings. It was cut moderately low and looked very simple, but rich. The costumes of the bridesmaids consisted of a skirt of mousseline de soie, made over taffeta with a scalloped ruffle of valenciennes lace; the waist was of mousseline de soie, made on a tight lining of white taffeta silk. The most striking feature of the costume was a wide-brimmed hat made of pink mousseline de soie and white plumes, giving a jaunty effect. The costumes of the two children were similar to those of the bridesmaids, except that the skirts were short.

Affectionate Greetings.

The bride carried pink roses. The bridesmaids carried pink roses and lilies of the valley, tied with a broad pink satin ribbon. Mr. Whitney wore a boutonniere of gardenias. The ushers wore lilies of the valley. Franko's orchestra was hidden beyond a wall of cut flowers and furnished the musical programme, which concluded with the "Star Spangled Banner." The ceremony was performed in an alcove formed by lilies and Augusta Victoria roses between the pillars. The bride and bridegroom knelt at a prie dieu of white sweet peas and lilies of the valley. At the conclusion of the marriage ceremony, performed by Bishop Potter, Mr. Whitney placed the plain gold ring on his bride's finger, kissed her and then handed her to her father, whom she kissed several times. She then kissed her mother and the pair passed into the gray room, where they received under a canopy of tropical foliage.

THE COMPANIES NOT LOOTED.

Diamond Match and New York Biscuit Not in a State of Collapse.

Chicago, Aug. 26.—The following interview has been given out by the president of the Chicago stock exchange over his own signature: "The report published in New York papers to the effect that the Diamond Match company and New York Biscuit company had been looted and were in a state of collapse is an error, and one which I deem it my duty to correct. As chairman of the committee appointed by the Chicago stock exchange to examine into the conditions of these properties, I can say that no such conditions as alleged do exist as will be seen by the report of our committee which will be handed in Wednesday next. Further, there have been no failures among the brokers and the committee is hopeful of being able to formulate a plan by which the stocks for the account will be taken care of before the opening of the exchange, which will protect the brokers from loss."

Quarantine Against Cuba.

Colon, Colombia, Aug. 26.—A decree has been issued by the government imposing a quarantine of from one to six days upon all vessels arriving here from Cuban ports or from ports where it is suspected yellow fever exists. Advices from Ecuador report that the rebels have won a victory over the government troops near Ibarra.

Savings Bank Treasurer Sentenced.

Fitchburg, Mass., Aug. 26.—Judge Lilley yesterday afternoon sentenced Hiram P. Gerald, ex-treasurer of the Brookfield Savings bank, to not less than seven or more than ten years in state prison, one day solitary, for the embezzlement of $15,000 from the bank.

CYCLING COMMENT.

F. L. C. Martin is getting up a party of Plainfielders who are going to attend the century run of The Evening Telegram, Saturday. The party will go to Jamaica, L. I., Friday night and be ready to start on time next morning. All who can join the party should make their entries through Mr. Martin at once.

At a coasting contest held between Westfield and Rahway at which there were many entries the results were as follows: First, E. T. Hand; second, R. F. Douglass; third, A. H. Barnett; fourth, Chas. Seaborn. At the starting Barnett lead with Edward White of Summit, N. J., close to his rear wheel. Douglass and Hand gradually forged to the front which resulted in Hand's finishing fifty yards to the best.

A conservative manufacturer said the other day that in his opinion the output of 1897 wheels would be about two-thirds that of 1896. He estimated that the over production this year amounted to considerably more than a third, and that the losses in many cases were very severe. He thinks that all the original makers, that is, those who were in the trade two years ago, will be found supplying wheels next year, but that nearly half the new comers, who know little of the business, will give it up in 1897.

In the care of a wheel there is probably nothing more trying than to attempt to remove rust from the parts. Where the rust is of long standing the best method is to thoroughly cover the parts with a thick coating of grease and let them stand thus for a couple of days, then rub briskly and thoroughly with a cloth moistened with ammonia. If this does not quite remove the rust, wash carefully with a weak solution of hydrochloric acid, drying thoroughly with a cloth and polish with soft leather, being careful to remove all traces of acid from the metal.

WITH ROD AND GUN.

Frank Forrester, W. C. Williams and Harry Williams, of East Front street, went to Sewaren today fishing.

Walter Douglass, of Sycamore avenue, and William J. R. Thiers, of Grove street, leave today for Westport, N. Y., on the shore of Lake Champlain, where they will enjoy several weeks of shooting and fishing.

J. H. Hallock, of East Ninth street, accompanied by his brother, W. P. Hallock, have gone to the banks of the Saganaw river, near the St. Lawrence, Canada, where they will spend two weeks fishing and hunting. They went by train to Montreal and from there the balance of the journey was made by boat.

A party of fishermen came here from Plainfield and another one from Bound Brook yesterday, but they were "Not in it." The only time for fishing here is at night and early in the morning, and it requires an expert to land many fish then. There are plenty of "bull-heads," both in the pond and about town, but they require a different kind of bait from that in ordinary use.

FESTIVAL AT HARRIS' LANE.

The Proceeds to be Devoted to Purchasing a Memorial Window.

A festival and picnic for the benefit of the Presbyterian church of Bound Brook, was held at Harris' Lane, only a short distance from there, yesterday. It was held on the lawn of Joseph Johnson, and the proceeds will be devoted to purchasing a memorial window for the new church.

The lawn was prettily decorated and illuminated with Chinese lanterns and electric lights, and these were placed in position by Charles P. Seoring. The effect of the varigated lights was very pretty, as they reflected on the tables and booths scattered about the lawn.

PROTECTION OF GAME.

The Tri-County Association Receive a Diagram of Their Preserve.

A regular meeting of the Board of Directors of the Union, Middlesex and Somerset Counties' Game Society was held at Percy C. Ohl's office in the Babcock building, last night. It was fully attended and much business of importance transacted. Reports of various committee were received and also a diagram and drawings of the territory at present under control of the society, which amounts to upwards of 4,000 acres. The secretary also reported that all bills and expense for the game liberated had been paid. Also all the outstanding indebtedness had been settled and a healthy balance left in the treasury. Badges were ordered obtained for the use of all the members; also a seal for the use of the society. The constitution and by-laws were ordered printed.

Numerous complaints of hounds running at large and destroying quantities of game and young rabbits, were received. Several applications for membership were received. The limited number for the year being full, they could not be voted upon at this meeting. The next meeting will be held the second Tuesday in September.

IMPROVEMENTS IN THE BOROUGH.

Residents Who Take Pride in Making Pretty Lawns About Their Homes.

It has been said that he who makes two blades of grass grow where only one grew before is a public benefactor. Walking down Grove street the other day, our thoughts "going to grass," we concluded there were some people who should be called multi-benefactors. The lot between Park place and Holywood place, separating the home of Mr. Grant and Mr. Parker, has been nicely paved, ornamented with a thrifty hedge and the bare, rather desolate field of yore is now covered with greensward. "Sweet fields arrayed in living green" the neighbors sing as they gaze on the delectable sight. On the block between Lincoln place and Craig place, Mrs. Dietrich has removed the pine trees from the front yard and a good lawn will be the result. The Town Improvement Society has many disciples, even if their names are not down in its list of members.

WENT TO SLEEP.

A Wrecked Buggy and Other Unpleasant Features Resulted.

John Barry indulged to freely last night and fell asleep while driving his old blind horse down from Dunellen. The horse couldn't see a buggy standing in front of the Schepflin block on West Front street, and a collision followed resulting in demolishing a wheel of the buggy. Two young girls also narrowly escaped being run over. He was arrested by Patrolman McCue and arraigned in the city court this morning on the charge of reckless driving and being drunk and disorderly. This was not his first offence and he was given his choice between a fine of $25 or 60 days in jail.

An Up-to-Date Clam Bake.

Some thirty to thirty-five bicyclists will leave this city from Charles C. Lister's bicycle store tomorrow evening at 7:30 o'clock for Nate Astfalk's road house between Rahway and Elizabeth. The occasion is an up-to-date clambake. The riders are assured of an excellent outing, and the clams will be cooked to the Queen's taste.

Everett and Arthur Peck, of Myrtle avenue, returned last evening after a very enjoyable outing at Bridge Hampton, L. I.

Miss Elin V. Palmborg, of New Market, has accepted a position as teacher in the Maple Grove school. She was formerly a compositor on The Sabbath Recorder.

BARNUM'S LONG PROCESSION.

How He Faithfully Kept His Billboard Promises.

"I was traveling with P. T. Barnum once," said Mr. Stow. "long before the railroad shows were in existence. We traveled by wagons from town to town in those days, halting on the outskirts of the town to enable the circus people to put on their show clothes and prepare for the parade. We were to show in a small town in Pennsylvania, and I had noticed that a bridge over which the wagons were to pass was weak. I sent word to Mr. Barnum to put the rhinoceros wagon at the rear, but he did not do so, and as it was in advance it broke the bridge. The show did not reach the town in time to make much of a parade.

"That night Mr. Barnum was seated in the village hotel when an angry lot of people who were disappointed at the size of the parade waited upon him and told him that he was a fraud.

"'How so?' said Mr. Barnum.

"'Well,' replied the spokesman for the crowd, 'you advertised two miles of parade and there was only one.'

"'Yes,' replied Barnum, 'there was one mile of parade and another mile of cussed fools following it. That makes two miles, doesn't it?'" — Syracuse Courier.

CLAUDE MATTHEWS.

Boomed for the Presidency by the Democrats of Indiana.

Gov. Claude Matthews is a Kentuckian by birth. He was born in Bath county in 1845. He is well preserved, and would ordinarily be regarded as much younger, for the years have dealt kindly with him. His hair is slightly tinged with gray, his step is elastic, his movements quick and energetic, and his manner animated. He weighs about 170 pounds, has a round, full face, a cordial grasp of the hand and a pleasant smile. The governor was reared upon a farm, and when 18 years of age entered Center college at Danville, Ky., from which he was graduated in 1868. In the meantime he met his wife, Miss Martha Whitcomb, daughter of Governor and later United States

CLAUDE MATTHEWS.

Senator Whitcomb. One year after Matthews' graduation they were married and came to Vermilion county, Ind., to live. From that time until 1890, when he came to Indianapolis as secretary of state, he resided upon a farm of several hundred acres near Clinton, and devoted himself to its culture and to stock raising. His interest in improved breeds of stock led him to organize the Indiana Shorthorn Breeders' association several years ago, and he was its president several years.

In 1878 Matthews was elected to the house of representatives from Clinton county, and in 1890 he was nominated for state senator in the same district. The supposed necessity of nominating a farmer to lead the state ticket in the same year called attention to him as the most available man for secretary of state, and he was nominated by the state convention for that office. He made an energetic campaign, speaking in nearly all the counties in the state, and was elected by the phenomenal majority for Indiana of 21,000. Two years later he was asked to enter the race for the governorship, but withheld his consent until the eve of the state convention. Many of the counties had refused to instruct for the other candidates, and when the delegates reached the city and found Matthews actively in the race there was a hegira to his standard, and he was nominated on the first ballot. Matthews had been almost unanimously nominated in two conventions, and the ease with which he won inspired confidence and generated enthusiasm among his friends. While not an eloquent speaker, he proved a greater success on the hustings in 1892 than in the preceding campaign. The campaign was not a brilliant one in the ordinary sense, for there was a dearth of pyrotechnics, but a democratic majority of 7,000 testified to the aggressive spirit which the democrats had manifested throughout the campaign.

NEW CATCHER'S MASK.

May Be Thrown Up and Out of the Way When Necessity Demands.

Every attendant at baseball games has noticed how much a catcher's mask is in the way when he runs to catch a foul ball. He must first throw the mask off and then run the chance of stepping on it or stumbling over it. Then, when the play is over, there is a delay while he readjusts his cap and mask. A Hartford (Conn.) genius has invented a mask which can be instantly thrown up and out of the way, like a visor of a helmet, and may be as readily replaced. The inventor is William Gray, who long ago conceived the idea that a mask to protect the catcher's face would be a good thing. His idea was then laughed at by ball players and others interested in the game, so he did nothing with it. Not long after that a Harvard man invented and put on the market just such a mask. Now every catcher wears one when playing up under the bat. Some time later Mr. Gray invented and patented the catcher's pad, which is now universally used. He is also the inventor of the Gray telephone pay station.

His latest invention, the improved mask, is well protected as to patents. It is as much of an advance over the old mask as that was over no covering at all for the face. As the picture of the mask shows, it is attached to the pad frame by pivot joints. The pad frame is held firmly on the catcher's head by the usual arrangement of straps. When the catcher wants to cover his face, he lets it down and it is held in place by a spring. If a foul is popped up in the air, a touch of the hand throws the mask instantly up and back, leaving the catcher's vision free from interference. The mechanism is of the simplest kind, there being nothing to get out of order.

Offended Dignity.

A tourist going through a southern rural region went into a little red brick courthouse in a town of about 200 inhabitants. A case of larceny was on trial before a long, yellow-bearded man who was "the jedge." One of the witnesses, a wild-eyed, long-haired, belligerent looking man, became greatly excited while giving his testimony and began to use some extremely profane language, whereupon the "jedge" brought his fist down heavily on his pine table desk and said: "Have a keer what kind o' langwidges you use in this here court, Leon Shanks! You got to respeck the dignity o' this court or blamed if I don't waltz ye out behind the courthouse when we adjourn an' lick a little respeck into yet!"—Detroit Free Press.

THE SMITHS GATHERED.

THE GREAT FAMILY REUNION AT PEAPACK YESTERDAY.

The Clans Came From Far and Near and Spent the Day in Renewing Acquaintances and Having a Good Time.

Peapack is sleepy for just 364 days in the year. Then the town with the unpoetical name wakes up and takes on a gala day air, which is only equaled by a "salt water" day at Asbury Park. Yesterday was the day of awakening from the sleepy season of 1896. It was "Smith Day." "Smith Day" means anything to Peapack except sleepiness. It means brass bands, it means peanuts, it means red lemonade by the barrel and ice cream in lumbs like icebergs. Above all it means Smiths. The Smiths are in possession of the town, the bands and the refreshments.

The invading army of celebrants took charge of the grove on the farm formerly owned by the late Peter Z. Smith. There were friends of the Smiths among those who gathered there, but, as was meet and right, the Smith name was dominant among those present.

Isaiah Smith, the president of the Smith family organization, made a speech of welcome to the family and the friends of its members. He told every Smith of them to make free with the lemonade and ice cream and everything else they saw, and enjoy themselves, as only Smiths could. From that time on there was naught but joy for the Smiths at Peapack.

The older Smiths, the Papa Smiths and the Mamma Smiths, sat under the big trees and revived memories of their youthful days when the Smiths were just as good American citizens as they are today. Great big awkward young Smiths made love to rosy-cheeked, laughing girls whose names were the same as their own. Ten-year-old Smiths and four-year old Smiths climbed trees that were planted years ago by patriarchal Smiths of other generations. Two-year-old Smiths rolled around and soiled white dresses in soil that has always been sacred to the ownership of Smith. There is a legend that a great Indian chief named Smith—greater in his day than any other of the chiefs—held sway over the acres on which the later generation of Anglo-Saxon Smiths gathered yesterday.

At 2 o'clock in the afternoon all of the assembled Smiths heard a masterly address delivered by Rev. Dr. Mason, of Basking Ridge. In his address Dr. Mason told of the glorious achievements of the Smith family in this and past generations. Dr. Mason talked of Captain John and all the other Smiths who have been great in their days and generations. He closed with a brilliant peroration in which he prophesied that a Smith would yet occupy the White House and direct the affairs of the great nation as only the brain and cunning of a Smith could administer its executive functions.

When the hour came for the breaking up of the great gathering there were many Smiths whose eyes were wet with tears. The hands of many Smiths trembled as they clasped those of other older members of the family. Many a maiden Smith blushed as she smiled a good-bye to a handsome young Smith whom she had only met today.

There were several persons among those who came here today who were obnoxious to the Smiths. They were not Smiths at all. They were New York fakirs and swindlers, and no Smith ever engaged in any such nefarious occupations. A committee of two Smiths who had at one time been purchasers of gold bricks looked after these gentry and so far as known not a single Smith was robbed during the day.

With the exodus of the Smiths to their homes Peapack went to sleep again to reawake at the blowing of the Smith bugle next August.

Among the Plainfielders present were Gus Smith, H. O. Hance, Mrs. Philip Kreitling and Mr. Carey. Gus Smith says that a straw vote of the political preferences of the farmers was taken and they were found to be almost to a man for free silver.

MISSING FOR TWO DAYS.

A Demented Woman Wanders Aimlessly Over the Country.

Mrs. James, a widow seventy years old who resides with her son William, on a farm at Jenkintown near Warrenville, being slightly demented, wandered away from her home, Sunday last, without leaving any trace of her wanderings. The neighbors scoured the surrounding country for two days without success. Yesterday morning she was found by Philip Nitchwitz, on his farm, about five miles from her home. After considerable difficulty, she was induced to return with her son who had been sent for.

HONOR FOR ACKERMAN.

THE PLAINFIELDER TO BE ONE OF THE REPUBLICAN ELECTORS.

Lawyer Corbin Withdrew When He Saw the Strength of the Plainfield Man—Union County Was Unanimous For Him.

[Special to The Daily Press.]

Trenton, August 27—Plainfield is well represented at the Republican State convention today, a dozen or more G. O. Pites being present besides the regular delegates. All the delegates elected at the primaries are in attendance so that there is no chance for honors for the alternates.

This morning a caucus of the Union county delegation was held, at which Delegate Hicks, of Summit, acted as chairman. The most important thing was to vote on their selection for National elector from the Eighth Congressional district. Lawyer Corbin, of Elizabeth, was a candidate for this honor, but a little prospecting among the delegates showed that Ernest Ackerman had the majority and Mr. Corbin gracefully withdrew in favor of the Plainfielder and he was the unanimous selection of the delegation. As Union county has forty-two out of the eighty-six votes in the district, and Mr. Ackerman is strong with some of the Essex and Hudson county delegates, it is an assured fact that he will receive the nomination.

Among those outside of the delegates who are watching the proceedings of the convention are T. O. Doane, J. W. Murray, Jr., William Newcorn, Harry Runyon and Harry Dreier.

The convention was called to order at noon with the organization as decided upon by the State committee last night.

General William J. Sewall was among the first to arrive yesterday and as is his custom he immediately established himself at the Trenton House, in room 100, and prepared to entertain the leaders from all parts of the State. Then came Governor Griggs, who also located at the Trenton. They were followed in a very short time by Franklin Murphy; John Kean, of Elizabeth; Senators Stokes, of Cumberland; Johnson, of Bergen; Herbert, of Middlesex; Congressman Pitney, of the Fourth District; Speaker Derousse, and numerous other statesmen, big and small.

The State Committee held a very long meeting last evening. Governor Griggs and Senator Sewell were invited to sit with the committee. It was decided that Governor Griggs should be chairman of both the temporary and permanent organization today. John Y. Foster will also be temporary and permament Secretary. He will be assisted by Augustus W. Barber, of Gloucester; Alex C. Yard, of Mercer, which invitation they accepted. The Executive Committee recommended that the Conger-Strong contest from Middlesex county be ended by the seating of Mr. Conger as the member of the comittee, and acting on the suggestion Mr. Conger was allowed to retain his seat, and J. Herbert Potts, of Hudson.

It was reported that there was considerable silver sentiment in Hunterdon, Warren, Burlington and Cumberland counties. Congressman Gardner, of this district, said there were many reports of a large number of silverites in his district, but the rumors were not well founded.

Complaint was made of the scarcity of gold literature in all the counties, but the committee announced that there will be lots of it in circulation in a few days.

John Y. Foster and Major E. J. Anderson were appointed a committee to prepare resolutions.

The delegates from Plainfield are George W. Moore, Alex D. Mallinson, Edwin H. Frost, W. H. Drayton, Charles J. Fisk, Roger F. Murray, William Fisher and Arthur A. Venable.

Stoned on the Road.

While "scorching" out Park avenue last evening, William Schaeffer, of West Second street, had a very unpleasant experience with three unknown men near the corner of Randolph rood. He was spinning along the smooth road when he noticed three men standing on the path. They called to him and the next instant something hard, which he supposes to have been a stone, struck him behind the right ear, cutting a long and deep gash, nearly stunning him. He was going too rapidly to be able to give any description of the men.

Justice Newcorn's Court.

Justice Newcorn had his usual batch of cases yesterday. The case of Neilson vs Djuserson, on contract, was tried, judgement rendered in favor of the plaintiff, and execution. The case of Lawler vs. Jones, on contract, was adjourned for two weeks. The case of Miller vs Watson and others on contract, was adjourned until September 8.

EXONERATED OF THEFT.

BILLY LEE PROVES THAT HE DID NOT TAKE BLOCK'S MONEY.

The State's Witnesses Rebutted the Accusation of Block—On the Disorderly House Charge He Is Held For the Grand Jury.

The stuffy little courtroom in the city lockup had more visitors yesterday afternoon than it has seen for many a day. Billy Lee was the cause thereof, for the news of his hearing on the charges of grand larceny and keeping a disorderly house had spread rapidly and everybody wanted to see how Billy was coming out.

Billy, or more properly speaking, William Lee, is the proprietor of a road house and hotel on East Front street, just west of Scotch Plains. Tuesday evening he had some trouble with a visitor from Plainfield named Joseph Block, and following that trouble came the two charges as told in yesterday's Daily Press.

The first news of the trouble was learned by Patrolman Vanderweg. At about 3:30 o'clock yesterday morning he met Block driving a hack from the direction of the borough. Block told the officer a wild, disconnected story of how he was robbed of over $200 at Lee's place and then had to run to escape with his life. The man was apparently drunk, so the officer locked him up and put the hack in Roberts' stable. Meanwhile Sergeant Kiely and Roundsman Frederickson released Block, and when Vanderweg returned to his beat he found Block conversing with Patrolman Flanagan.

In a few moments Moses Carey, the colored owner of the hack, appeared and demanded his hack and the arrest of Block for stealing it. Further explanations followed and then two young women, Sarah Jane and Hattie Fothengill, of South Amboy, appeared and all four were marched over to the lockup, where the details of the case were learned. The two women, who had no place to sleep, were locked up and the others allowed to go.

Next came the arrest, and yesterday afternoon Lee was given a hearing before Justice Newcorn, which resulted in his being discharged on the charge of grand larceny and held for the grand jury on the charge of keeping a disorderly house.

The first examination was for the charge of grand larceny and was rather exciting.

Block's story was that he drove to Scotch Plains with the two women in Carey's hack after imbibing in some whiskey before he left. At Lee's he went in the bar room while the women went in the parlor. He says that he was invited to join in a game of dice at a dollar a corner. He accepted the and the luck was against him at the start and he lost thirty-six games and paid Lee as many dollars. He tried again and lost two more, but these, he declares, he refused to pay and said he was going. According to his story, some one grabbed him from behind at this point while Lee rushed forward and removed a roll of bills amounting to $240 from his trousers pocket. Then he rushed out in the yard, grabbing a dice box in his flight. He ran around the yard, jumped in the hack and drove home. That was his story but the other testimony didn't agree.

Moses Carey, the colored hackman, was the next to be summoned to the stand. Lee was represented by Assemblyman Charles A. Reed while City Judge DeMeza acted for Block. The first part of Carey's testimony was substantially the same as Block's but contrary to the latters statements, Carey swore that at the first signs of trouble he had left the room and saw nothing of a fight or robbery. He also said that instead of coming directly home, he had driven Block and the women, after a dispute between Block and Lee for the possession of the dice box which Carey finally found in the hack and returned to Lee, through the back road to the White Bridge where they had all gotten out and Block and the two women gone off. Block and one of them soon appeared again and drove away in the hack before Carey could stop them. Carey and the other woman started for Plainfield on foot and met the other woman who had gotten out the hack and left Block alone.

Carey also remembered that as he left the bar-room he had seen Block try to take a dollar bill out of Lee's hands. The two women substantiated Carey's testimony but saw nothing of any robbery.

Lee was not sworn but made a statement in which he declared that there had been no gambling and that a little quarrel had arisen as to who was to pay for drinks. Block finally did so but tried to take back the dollar bill and only succeeded in tearing off a corner. Lee gave him his change and then Block seized a

A LITTLE MOSES FOUND.

A COLORED BABY LEFT IN A CLUMP OF BUSHES BY ITS MOTHER.

The Infant Found by a Pet Dog Belonging to A. R. A. Woidt, of Westfield—The Mother Finally Found in This City.

Jeweler A. R. A. Woidt, of Westfield, made a remarkable find Tuesday night while walking on Westfield avenue, near the railroad bridge. He had his pet dog with him, and the little animal discovered a package lying in a clump of bushes, and attracted its master's attention.

Mr. Woidt found a two-months-old colored girl baby wrapped in some old clothes. It was alive, well dressed and had evidently been in the bushes but a short while.

The infant was carried to Justice Collins office and afterward turned over to Poormaster Decker, who placed it in charge of Mrs. Jack Brown, a colored woman living on Rahway road.

Poormaster Decker immediately commenced a search for its mother and by a series of inquiries in the the neighborhood and among the colored residents he learned that a young colored woman by the name of Clara Jones, of this city, had been in Westfield that day with an infant answering the description of the one found by Mr. Woidt.

Constable John M. C. Marsh came to this city last night on the case and sought out Captain Grant. The Captain detailed Officer Saunders on the case, and he soon located the Jones woman staying with a friend on Richmond street. Constable Marsh took her in custody and returned to Westfield, where she admitted up to the parentage of the child.

The woman has no permanent means of support and left the child in the clump of bushes, knowing that it would not remain there long without being found, and with hopes that the authorities would provide a place for it.

To Pull Stakes Saturday.

The many Plainfielders who have been spending so many pleasant weeks at Camp Point Breeze, Wolfboro, N. H., expect to break camp Saturday and arrive at their home in this city Sunday morning. Those who formed the merry party were ex-Mayor and Mrs. William L. Saunders, Mayor and Mrs. B. A. Hegeman, Mr. and Mrs. William J. Roome, with their families. It is expected that ex-Mayor Saunders will carry home with him the large cake presented to him on his tenth wedding anniversary, by the members of the camp, so as to place it on exhibition at the Park Club.

Will Stock the Streams With Trout.

Deputy Game Warden Wright has secured a grant of 2,500 brook trout from the State hatcheries, with which to stock the streams of Union county. The delivery is to be made at the end of October, by which time the fish will be three inches in length. The commission expressly stipulated that these fish shall not be placed in any streams to which the general public is refused access. It will be unlawful to take the fish for three years.

A Pooh Bah Gets Another Office.

E. W. Sharp, of Oxford, who has received his commission as Justice of the Peace, may well lay claim to being the Pooh Bah of that section of the State. He is a funeral director, local preacher, coroner, veterinary surgeon, legal adviser, practical politician and horse dealer.

WEDDED IN ST. MARY'S.

MISS MAGGIE FLYNN BECOMES THE WIFE OF GEORGE M'CUSKER.

Wedding Ceremony Performed by Rev. Father Smyth Before a Large Assemblage—Reception Held—The Guests.

Yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock St. Mary's church was filled with friends and relatives of Miss Maggie Flynn, daughter of Peter Flynn, of West Third street, who were there to witness her marriage to George McCusker, of East Second street. The altar was handsomely illuminated and decorated, presenting a grand sight. Promptly at the hour named all were agreeably surprised to see Rev. Father Smyth, the pastor, who had just returned from his European tour, and he performed the ceremony according to the impressive ritual of the Catholic church. After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. McCusker were driven to the bride's home, where a reception was held later. The bride was attired in a brown traveling dress, trimmed with chiffon and jeweled trimming.

The bridesmaid was Miss Mary A. Loftus, and the best man, Michael Flynn, brother of the bride. The ushers were Edward Flynn, John Carney, Michael Whelan and John Flynn, and the groom's gift to each was a handsome scarf pin. The bride's gift from her father was a check for a substantial amount, and the groom's gift a handsome diamond brooch. The presents received by the newly-married couple were numerous and useful.

At 7 o'clock, after the bride and groom had received the congratulations of their many friends on their continued prosperity and welfare through life, the guests sat down to well-laden tables and did justice to the many good things set before them. When all had partaken to their satisfaction, the remaining part of the evening was passed in a social way, one of the best entertainers being Uncle Peter, who sang "The Ghost" in a very creditable manner.

Among those present besides Mr. and Mrs. McCusker were Peter Flynn, Sr., Mrs. Thomas Roan, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Flynn, Mr. and Mrs. Moses Carney, Mr. and Mrs. John Flynn, Mr. and Mrs. John Neary, of Johnstown, Pa.; Mr. and Mrs. John Millet and family, of Newark; Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gardner, of Hornellsville, N. Theatre Season Opens Tonight.

A representative of The Press has witnessed several of the rehearsals of "The Cotton Spinner," which is to be produced at Music Hall tonight by Rich & Maeder, and is of the opinion that the piece will satisfy the melodrama ideas of the theatregoers of this city. The scenery is especially fine, the setting for each of the four acts being used alone for this production. Besides being the first production of this piece, it is the opening of the season of Music Hall under the new management of Ball and Willey, who have made several desirable changes in the details of the house.

WORDS OF WROTH FELL

COLORED SERVANTS IN FANWOOD INDULGE IN DESULTORY REMARKS.

Cook and Waiter Disagree and Make Uncomplimentary Remarks About One Another—The Latter Pays a $10 Fine.

There was war at "The Homestead" in Fanwood last Monday morning and the principals in the affair were two negro servants employed at the house. One was Henrietta Freeman, the cook, and the other was Benjamin Harkins, one of the waiters.

There has been no love lost between these two for some time and last Monday morning Henrietta was talking about Harkins to one of the other servants. She maintained that what she had said about Harkins, and it wasn't very complimentary either, was all true while she declared that his remarks were perfectly slanderous. There is a saying about an angel whose wings can be heard to flutter when spoken of, and although Harkins isn't exactly an angel, yet he appeared in the doorway at this most inopportune moment.

He heard the remarks and his blood began to boil. He used language that wasn't the most polite and which the indignant cook declared was very threatening in tone. He also, she declared, threatened to strike her.

The battle was finally called a draw and each side retreated resting on their arms. But the cook's brain had been at work and she planned a coup to completely rout her enemy. She came to this city and made complaint to Justice Newcorn against the aforesaid Benjamin Harkins for using threatening language and acting in a disorderly manner.

Justice Newcorn set the trial down for yesterday afternoon and at 2:30 o'clock the principals arrived, each followed by a train of witnesses. Harkins owned up to swearing at the cook, but declared he made no attempt to strike her. The Judge settled the case by fining Harkins $10 and sending everybody, except that individual, away happy.

SOME ARE ALWAYS LATE.

Excursionists Who Failed to Catch the Excursion Train.

Some people will never learn to be on time for the train. This is especially noticeable for the early morning trains to New York, when men, young and old run to catch a moving train. This was the case this morning when the excursion train moved away, leaving a lot of excursionists behind.

Among them was Mark Lees, one of the committee in charge, who went along along North avenue trying to get a ten dollar bill changed for a man who had purchased a ticket. The train went away and Mr. Lees was left behind. He took a later train for the park, however.

Another instance of a late arriva was a man from Warren street, who piloted a young daughter and a half-bushel basket filled with sandwiches and sweetmeats to the train a half-hour before starting time, but his wife, his mother in-law and three other children arrived just in time to catch a glimpse of the train passing through the Fanwood cut. The man and children were very much vexed to think that they had been left, and the father demanded the return of his money for tickets purchased. This of course was refused, and for a few minutes there was a lively war of words between the vexed man and the excursion ticket seller.

Got Fifty Dollars for a Waterbury Watch.

Jacob "Go-and-ask-me," or a name similar to that, lives on Cottage place, better known as "Paradise Alley." Tuesday, a stranger, but of Italian birth and parentage, went to the house and pretended to represent a leather and finding house in New York. He prevailed upon kindhearted Jacob to buy a bill of goods, which the latter did, offering a crisp new $50 bill in payment for the same. The peddler had not enough money to change the bill, so he left a silver watch with a Waterbury movement as security while he went to get the bill changed. The man and the fifty dollar bill went out of town together, but the $2.50 Waterbury watch is still here.

A Midsummer Party.

A very enjoyable affair was given at the residence of J. H. Havens, of Plainfield avenue, Tuesday evening, in honor of Miss Hopper, of New York. Dancing occupied most of the evening, while a bountiful collation was served. Besides Miss Hopper, Miss Emma Havens, and the Messrs. Havens, those present were the Misses Mary Beekman, Mabelle Force and Cora Richardson, and the Messrs. Beekman, Will Morrison, John and Will DeMeza and Herbert Richardson.

—There will be a regular meeting of Goodwill Lodge, No. 101, K. of P., of Scotch Plains, this evening.

M'KINLEY'S LETTER

A Straightout Declaration for the Gold Standard.

PROTECTION OF SUPREME IMPORTANCE

The Republican Party Not Opposed to Silver Money—Favors an International Agreement, and, if Elected, It Will Be His Duty, He Says, To Use All Honorable Means To Promote It.

Canton, O., Aug. 27.—The following is William McKinley's letter of acceptance, made public to-day:

Hon. John M. Thurston and others, members of the notification committee of the republican national convention. Gentlemen: In pursuance of the promise made to your committee, when notified of my nomination as the republican candidate for president, I beg to submit this formal acceptance of that high honor, and to consider in detail questions at issue in the pending campaign. Perhaps this might be considered unnecessary in view of my remarks on that occasion, and those I have made to delegations that have visited me since the St. Louis convention, but in view of the momentous importance of the proper settlement of the issues presented on our future prosperity and standing as a nation, and considering only the welfare and happiness of our people, I could not be content to omit again calling attention to the questions which in my opinion vitally affect our strength and position among the governments of the world.

The Free Coinage of Silver.

For the first time since 1868, if ever before, there is presented to the American people this year a clear and direct issue as to our monetary system, of vast importance in its effects, and upon the right settlement of which rests largely the financial honor and prosperity of the country. It is proposed by one wing of the democratic party, and its allies, the people's and silver parties, to inaugurate the free and unlimited coinage of silver by independent action on the part of the United States at a ratio of sixteen ounces of silver to one ounce of gold. The mere declaration of this purpose is a menace to our financial and industrial interests and has already created universal alarm. It involves great peril to the credit and business of the country, a peril so grave that conservative men everywhere are breaking away from their old party associations and uniting with other patriotic citizens in emphatic protest against the platform of the democratic national convention as an assault upon the faith and honor of the government and the welfare of the people. We have had few questions in the lifetime of the republic more serious than the one which is thus presented.

No Benefit to Labor.

The character of the money which shall measure our values and exchanges and settle our balances with one another and with the nations of the world is of such primary importance and so far-reaching in its consequence as to call for the most painstaking investigation, and, in the end, a sober and unprejudiced judgment at the polls. We must not be misled by phrases, nor deluded by false theories. Free silver would not mean that silver dollars were to be freely had without cost or labor. It would mean the free use of the mints of the United States for the few who are the owners of silver bullion, but would make silver coin no freer to the many who are engaged in other enterprises. It would not make labor easier, the hours of labor shorter, or the pay better. It would not make farming less laborious or more profitable. It would not start a factory or make a demand for an additional day's labor. It would create no new occupations. It would add nothing to the comfort of the masses, the capital of the people or the wealth of the nation. It seeks to introduce a new measure of value, but would add no value to the thing measured. It would not conserve values. On the contrary, it would derange all existing values. It would not restore business confidence, but its direct effect would be to destroy the little which yet remains.

What It Means.

The meaning of the coinage plank adopted at Chicago is that any one may take a quantity of silver bullion now worth fifty-three cents to the mints of the United States, have it coined at the expense of the government and receive for it a silver dollar which shall be legal tender for the payment of all debts, public and private. The owner of the silver bullion would get the silver dollar. It would belong to him and to nobody else. Other people would get it only by their labor, the products of their land, or something of value. The bullion owner on the basis of present values would receive the silver dollar for fifty-three cents worth of silver and other people would be required to receive it as a full dollar in the payment of debts. The government would get nothing from the transaction. It would bear the expense of coining the silver and the community would suffer loss by its use.

The Dollars Compared.

We have coined since 1878 more than 400,000,000 of silver dollars, which are maintained by the government at parity with gold and are a full legal tender for the payment of all debts, public and private. How are the silver dollars now in use different from those that would be in use under free coinage? They are to be of the same weight and fineness; they are to bear the same stamp of the government. Why would they not be of the same value? I answer: The silver dollars now in use were coined on account of the government and not for private account or gain, and the government has solemnly agreed to keep them as good as the best dollars we have. The government bought the silver bullion at its market value and coined it into silver dollars. Having exclusive control of the mintage it only coins what it can hold at a parity with gold. The profit, representing the difference between the commercial value of the silver bullion and the face value of the silver dollar, goes to the government for the benefit of the people. The government bought the silver bullion contained in the silver dollar at very much less than its coinage value. The government having issued and circulated the silver dollar it must in honor protect the holder from loss. This obligation it has so far sacredly kept. Not only is there a moral obligation, but there is a legal obligation expressed in public statute to maintain the parity.

Could Not Be Kept at Par.

These dollars, in the particulars I have named, are not the same as the dollars which would be issued under free coinage. They would be the same in form but different in value. The government would have no part in the transaction except to coin the silver bullion into dollars. It would share in no part of the profit. It would take upon itself no obligation. It would not put the dollars into circulation. It could only get them, as any citizen would get them, by giving something for them. It would deliver them to those who deposited the silver, and its connection with the transaction there end. Such are the silver dollars which would be issued under free coinage of silver at a ratio of 16 to 1. Who would then maintain the parity? What would keep them at par with gold? There would be no obligation resting upon the government to do it and if there were it would be powerless to do it. The simple truth is we would be driven to a silver basis—to silver monometallism. These dollars, therefore, would stand upon their real value. It means the debasement of our currency to the amount of the difference between the commercial and coin value of the silver dollar, which is ever changing and the effect would be to reduce property values, entail untold financial loss, destroy confidence, impair the obligation of existing contracts, further impoverish the laborers and producers of the country, create a panic of unparalleled severity and inflict upon trade and commerce a deadly blow. Against any such policy I am unalterably opposed.

Bimetallism.

Bimetallism cannot be secured by independent action on our part. It cannot be obtained by opening our mints to the unlimited coinage of the silver of the world at a ratio of 16 ounces of silver to 1 ounce of gold, when the commercial ratio is more than 30 ounces of silver to 1 ounce of gold. Mexico and China have tried the experiment. Mexico has free coinage of silver and gold at a ratio slightly in excess of 16 1-2 ounces of silver to 1 ounce of gold, and while her mints are freely open to both metals at that ratio not a single dollar in gold bullion is coined and circulated as money. Gold has been driven out of circulation in these countries and they are on a silver basis alone. Until international agreement is had it is the plain duty of the United States to maintain the gold standard.

The Double Standard.

On the 22d of August, 1891, in a public address, I said: "If we could have an international ratio, which all the leading nations of the world would adopt, and the true relation be fixed between the two metals, and all agree upon the quantity of silver which should constitute a dollar, then silver would be as free and unlimited in its privileges of coinage as gold is to-day. But that we have not been able to secure, and with the free and unlimited coinage of silver adopted in the United States, at the present ratio, we would be still further removed from any international agreement. We may never be able to secure it if we enter upon the isolated coinage of silver. The double standard implies equality at a ratio and that equality can only be established by the concurrent law of nations."

To Work for International Agreement.

The republican party has not been, and is not not now, opposed to the use of silver money, as its record abundantly shows. It has done all that could be done for its increased use, with safety and honor, by the United States acting apart from other governments. There are those who think that it has already gone beyond the limit of financial prudence. Surely we can go no further, and we must not permit false lights to lure us across the danger line. The republican party has declared in favor of an international agreement, and if elected president it will be my duty to employ all proper means to promote it. The free coinage of silver in this country would defer, if not defeat, international bi-metallism, and until an international agreement can be had every interest requires us to maintain our present standard.

Against Appeals to Passion.

It is a cause for painful regret and solicitude that an effort is being made by those high in the counsels of the allied parties to divide the people of this country into classes and create distinctions among us, which, in fact, do not exist, and are repugnant to our form of government. These appeals to passion and prejudice are beneath the spirit and intelligence of a free people and should be met with stern rebuke by those they are sought to influence, and I believe they will be. Every attempt to array class against class, "the classes against the masses," section against section, labor against

MEXICO'S BOUNDARY.

The Mexicans Claim the United States Is Trespassing.

Heavy Damages Are Claimed Therefor — The Circumstances Upon Which the Claim Is Based.

Along no inconsiderable portion of its course the Rio Grande constitutes the international boundary between the United States and Mexico. Until within a few years the Rio Grande served the purposes of a boundary line very creditably and satisfactorily, but recently the settlers in Colorado and New Mexico (away up stream) have taken so much water out of the river for the purposes of irrigation that the old boundary line becomes obliterated during the dry season, and this has made so much trouble for the Mexicans that their government claims of the United States $22,000,000 damages.

The circumstances upon which they base this heavy claim for damages may be briefly summed up as follows: From the neighborhood of El Paso, extending about 90 miles down the river, there is a valley about 15 miles wide, and since the river has got into the habit of going dry every summer it has cut many different and widely diverging channels with the advent of flood water. In this way the international boundary has been practically obliterated as far as this valley, 15 miles wide and 90 miles long, is concerned. This has led to endless complications as to national jurisdiction, and finally to a condition of utter lawlessness. In addition to this, the Mexicans claim that for some 200 years they have been cultivating the lands of this valley on their side of the boundary which were made very fertile and productive by irrigation from the waters of the Rio Grande, but since the river has been systematically and continuously robbed of its waters by the American settlers of Colorado and New Mexico just at the season when the water was needed for irrigation, this valley below El Paso has become a sterile desert, absolutely worthless for agricultural purposes. They claim that the Mexicans have a prior claim to the water of the Rio Grande, as they were using it for purposes of irrigation 200 years ago, but now they have been robbed not only of the water, but of the international boundary line, and, indirectly, of law and order in the valley referred to.

In view of all this they set up a claim for $22,000,000 damages, but they also propose the terms of a compromise. The proposal is that the United States should build what has lately figured in the news of the day as the "international dam." This dam will (if built) be located about two and one-half miles above El Paso, where the heights which inclose the canyon-like valley of the Rio Grande just above El Paso converge so nearly that a dam 600 feet long will connect them. This dam, to serve the purpose for which it has been designed, should be 600 feet long and about 70 feet high, and will, when completed, cost about $1,000,000. Such a dam will it is estimated, create an immense reservoir 15 miles long by four miles wide, or about four times as large as any artificial reservoir now in the existence. This will hold all the surplus water of the Rio Grande at flood time, and this accumulation will not only be ample for irrigation of the arid lands in the valley below it on both sides of the boundary, but furnish a supply of water sufficient to hold the channel of the river by a moderate but continuous flow all through the dry season. In this way the demands of the Mexicans for damages can be satisfied, the international boundary maintained, law and order restored in that valley below El Paso, and the lands on the American as well as the Mexican side of the valley furnished with an ample supply of water for purposes of irrigation.—Buffalo Express.

Don't Let Yourself Get Thin

If you get hungry three times a day, enjoy your food, and enjoy the next two hours, you are happy enough.

If not, what you want is to get there.

A great deal of sickness begins with loss of fat. You know this. When your friend is in good flesh, you say, "How well you look!" and when he is thin you don't say what you think, but you worry about him.

Apply this to yourself. Don't let yourself get thin.

The diseases of thinness that we fear most are scrofula in the child and consumption in the adult. If you keep your child and yourself plump, you do not fear these diseases.

It will be useful to you to know the exact reason for this.

The germ of scrofula and consumption thrives on leanness. Fat keeps it down. Fat, then, is the food-means of getting the odds in our favor when contending against this germ.

Everybody knows that cod-liver oil is a fat producer.

Scott's Emulsion

is cod-liver oil made easy. The taste is concealed; the oil half-digested; it is half-ready to make fat.

In health you get this fat from your ordinary food, and have no need of cod-liver oil. When you begin to lose flesh, you are not getting the fat that you must have out of your ordinary food, and you do need cod-liver oil. Take Scott's Emulsion.

MRS. GARRETT A. HOBART

Fitted to Grace Official Society at the National Capital.

Wife of the Republican Candidate for Vice President as Seen by a Gossipy New York Writer—Is Fond of the Younger Set.

Miss McGuirk writes in the New York World as follows:

The oftener one meets Mrs. Garrett A. Hobart, wife of the republican vice presidential candidate, the more one is impressed and delighted wih her charms of manner. She is indeed an attractive woman. Mrs. Hobart's head is broad across the forehead. The temples are full. The eyebrows curve to follow the shape of the eyelid. The lines of the face are artistically cut. It is worth racking one's wits for a clever expression to see the answering response in her eye. She has a keen sense of humor. The corners of her mouth show unusual reticence for a woman.

Among other things that interested me was Mrs. Hobart's comment on Mr. Hanna. When I asked if she knew the great warrior Mrs. Hobart's smile grew wide and long. "Yes, and I like him immensely." She stopped as if some amusing recollection had occurred to her. Then she asked: "Don't you think he enjoys a good joke as much as anyone you know?" I allowed I thought Mr. Hanna could, but I am still curious as to what experience provoked the lady's smile.

Mrs. Hobart has got admiration for Mrs. Levi P. Morton. When I told her she reminded me of Mrs. Morton, Mrs. Hobart said: "You couldn't have said anything that would have gratified me more. Mrs. Morton is a grand character. The first time I met Mrs. Morton I felt instantly drawn to her, and that feeling has always lasted."

One of the first things I noticed was Mrs. Hobart's walk. She holds herself well, steps gracefully, and preserves the perpendicular line from chin to knee that marks the well-trained body. If Mrs. Hobart is called on to shine as the chief star in official society in Washington she will need no Delsarte training.

MRS. GARRETT A. HOBART.

When she sits, instead of picking out the easiest chair in the room, she is apt to drop on a seat without a back. Then the self-possession appears of the woman who knows her position, accepts it, and is fully accustomed to occupy it. She has taper fingers on a rather long hand. It is a good tea table hand. But Mrs. Hobart will have to revise her handshake. It is altogether too human and alive for working purposes on reception days. The hand is warm and firm. The clasp is strong and, with revision, will be popular. Her voice is rather musical. The pronunciation is careful, without any provincialism in accent.

She is not a member of any of the ancestral societies. She said: "I've never made any claim, but Lieut. Peter Tuttle was my revolutionary ancestor." Upstairs Mrs. Hobart showed me a quaint old family record, yellowed and creased with age, dating back to 1753. It was hanging in a conspicuous place in the corner of the hall, as if Mrs. Hobart didn't base her claim to people's consideration on the dates upon that old piece of paper.

The year of grief for the loss of her daughter has caused Mrs. Hobart's face to settle into a sober and grave expression. When her face is animated Mrs. Hobart looks ten years younger. If the republican party wins there will be a handsome establishment over which Mrs. Hobart will preside and where she can entertain freely. Mrs. Hobart is very fond of young people, and although there would be no young girl in the household the younger set would find a hostess frequently in the vice president's wife. The small dances that were formerly given in the ballroom at Carroll hall were always the most enjoyable of the season.

Queen Victoria's Charity.

A story is told of Queen Victoria which well illustrates her majesty's kindly thoughtfulness. Some years ago an old man named John Pearce, living in Peer Lane, Windsor, had been unable to pay his rent. The landlord ordered him to move. This was impossible, since his wife was lying ill in bed. One morning the workmen came and began to pull off the tiles. The old man, in despair, rushed to the castle and demanded to see the queen. After some difficulty a message was conveyed to her majesty. As the result, she drove around to the house in her carriage, and ordered the workmen to replace every tile as they had found it. At the same time, by a handsome present, she placed the old man out of his difficulty capital, "the poor against the rich," or interest against interest in the United States, is in the highest degree reprehensible.

Protection of Supreme Importance.

Another issue of supreme importance is that of protection. The peril of free silver is a menace to be feared; we are already experiencing the effect of partial free trade. The one must be averted; the other corrected. The republican party is wedded to the doctrine of protection and was never more earnest in its support and advocacy than now. If arguments were needed to strengthen its devotion to the American system or increase the hold of that system on the party and people, it is found in the lesson and experience of the last three years. Men realize in their own daily lives what before was to many of them only report, history or tradition. They have had trial of both systems and know what each has done for them.

Demanded by Public Exigencies.

Washington, in his farewell address, Sept. 17, 1796, a hundred years ago, said: "As a very important source of strength and security, cherish public credit. One method of preserving it is to use it as sparingly as possible, avoiding the accumulation of debt, not only by shunning occasions of expense, but by vigorous exertions in time of peace to discharge the debts which unavoidable wars may have occasioned, not ungenerously throwing upon posterity the burden which we ourselves ought to bear." To facilitate the enforcement of the maxims which he announced he declared: "It is essential that you should practically bear in mind that towards the payment of debts there must be revenues; that to have revenue there must be taxes; that no taxes can be devised which are not more or less inconvenient or unpleasant; that the intrinsic embarrassment inseparable from the selection of the proper objects (which is always a choice of difficulties) ought to be a decisive motive for a candid construction of the conduct of the government in making it; and for a spirit of acquiesence in the measures for obtaining revenue which the public exigencies may at any time dictate." Animated by like sentiments the people of the country must now face the conditions which beset them. "The public exigencies" demand prompt protective legislation which will avoid the accumulation of further debt by providing adequate revenues for the expenses of the government. This is manifestly the requirement of duty. If elected president of the United States it will be my aim to vigorously promote this object and give that ample encouragement to the occupations of the American people which, above all else, is so imperatively demanded at this juncture of our national affairs.

Our Condition in December, 1892.

In December, 1892, President Harrison sent his last message to congress. It was an able and exhaustive review of the condition and resources of the country. It stated our situation so accurately that I am sure it will not be amiss to recite his official and valuable testimony. "There never has been a time in our history," said he, "when work was so abundant or when wages were so high, whether measured by the currency in which they are paid, or by their power to supply the necessaries and comforts of life." This fairly describes the happy condition of the country in December, 1892. What has it been since, and what is it now?

Our Condition Eight Months Later.

The messages of President Cleveland from the beginning of his second administration to the present time abound with descriptions of the deplorable industrial and financial situation of the country. While no resort to history or official statement is required to advise us of the present condition and that which has prevailed during the past three years, I venture to quote from President Cleveland's first message, August 8, 1893, addressed to the Fifty-third congress which he had called together in extraordinary session. "The existence of an alarming and extraordinary business situation," said he, "involving the welfare and prosperity of all our people, has constrained me to call together in extra session the people's representatives in congress. Our unfortunate financial plight is not the result of untoward events, nor of conditions related to our natural resources. Nor is it traceable to any of the afflictions which frequently check national growth and prosperity. With plenteous crops, with abundant promise of remunerative production and manufacture, with unusual invitation to safe investment, and with satisfactory assurances to business enterprises, suddenly financial distrust and fear have sprung up on every side. Numerous monied institutions have suspended. Surviving corporations and individuals are content to keep in hand the money they are usually anxious to loan, and those engaged in legitimate business are surprised to find that the securities they offer for loans, though heretofore satisfactory, are no longer accepted. Values supposed to be fixed are fast becoming conjectural and loss and failure have invaded every branch of business."

The Cause of the Change.

What a startling and sudden change within the short period of eight months, from December, 1892, to August, 1893. What had occurred? A change of administration; all branches of the government had been entrusted to the democratic party, which was committed against the protective policy that had prevailed uninterruptedly for more than thirty-two years and brought unexampled prosperity to the country, and firmly pledged to its complete overthrow and the substitution of a tariff for revenue only. The change having been decreed by the elections in November, its effects were at once anticipated and felt. We cannot close our eyes to these altered conditions, nor would it be wise to exclude from contemplation and investigation the causes which produced them. They are facts which we cannot as a people disregard, and we can only hope to improve our present condition by a study of their causes. In December, 1892, we had the same currency and practically the same volume of currency that we have now. The per capita of money, too, has been practically same during this whole period. The quality of the money has been identical—all kept equal to gold. A depreciated currency has not existed to further vex the troubled business situation.

Good Money Never Made Times Hard.

It is a mere pretence to attribute the hard times to the fact that all our currency is on a gold basis. Good money never made times hard. We never had greater prosperity in this country, in every field of employment and industry, than in the busy years from 1880 to 1892, during all of which time this country was on a gold basis. We had, too, a protective tariff, under which ample revenues were collected for the government and an accumulating surplus which was applied to the payment of the public debt. Let us hold fast to that which we know is good. It is not more money we want; what we want is to put the money we already have at work. When money is employed men are employed. Both have always been steadily and remuneratively engaged during all the years of protective tariff legislation. We cannot restore confidence either to the treasury or to the the people without a change in our present tariff legislation.

The Tariff of 1894.

The only measure of a general nature that affected the treasury and the employment of our people passed by the Fifty-third congress was the general tariff act, which did not receive the approval of the president. Whatever virtues may be claimed for that act there is confessedly one which it does not possess. It lacks the essential virtue of its creation—the raising of revenue sufficient to supply the needs of the government. It has at no time provided enough revenue for such needs, but it has caused a constant deficiency in the treasury and a steady depletion in the earnings of labor and land. It has contributed to swell our national debt more than $262,000,000, a sum nearly as great as the debt of the government from Washington to Lincoln, including all our foreign wars from the revolution to the rebellion. Since its passage, work at home has been diminished; prices of agricultural products have fallen; confidence has been arrested and general business demoralization is seen on every hand.

Immigration, Pensions, Etc.

The declaration of the platform touching foreign immigration is one of peculiar importance at this time, when our own laboring people are in such great distress. I am in hearty sympathy with the present legislation restricting foreign immigration, and favor such extension of the laws as will secure the United States from invasion by the debased and criminal classes of the old world.

The soldiers and sailors of the union should neither be neglected no forgotten. The government which they served so well must not make their lives or conditions harder by treating them as supplicants for relief in old age or distress. Doubtless there have been pension abuses and frauds in the numerous claims allowed by the government, but the policy governing the administration of the pension bureau must always be fair and liberal.

The declaration of the republican platform in favor of the upbuilding of our merchant marine has my hearty approval. The policy of discriminating duties in favor of our shipping, which prevailed in the early years of our history, should be again promptly adopted by congress and vigorously supported until our prestige and supremacy on the seas is fully attained.

The pledge of the republican national convention that our civil service laws "shall be sustained and thoroughly and honestly enforced, and extended wherever practicable," is in keeping with the position of the party for the past twenty-four years and will be faithfully observed.

Losing in Both Directions.

We have either been sending too much money out of the country or getting too little in, or both. We have lost steadily in both directions. Our foreign trade has been diminished and our domestic trade has suffered incalculable loss. Does not this suggest the cause of our present depression and indicate its remedy? Confidence in home enterprises has almost wholly disappeared. Our shops are closed. Our men at home are idle, and while they are idle men abroad are occupied in supplying us with goods. It is not an increase in the volume of money which is the need of the time, but an increase in the volume of business. Not an increase in coin, but an increase of confidence. This will only come with the employment of the masses, and such employment is certain to follow the re-establishment of a wise protective policy which shall encourage manufacturing at home. We are not committed to any special schedules or rates of duty They are and should be always subject to change to meet new conditions, but the principle upon which rates of duty are imposed remains the same. Our duties should always be high enough to measure the differences between the wages paid labor at home and in competing countries, and to adequate protect American investments and American enterprises Another declaration of the republican platform that has my greatest, most cordial support, is that which favors reciprocity.

Avoids No Issue.

There are other important and timely declarations in the platform which I cannot here discuss. I must content myself with saying that they have my approval. If, as republicans, we have lately addressed our attentions with what may seem great stress and earnestness to the new and unexpected assault upon the financial integrity of the government, we have done it because the menace is so grave as to demand especial consideration, and because we are convinced that if the people are aroused to the true understanding and meaning of this silver end inflation movement they will avert the danger. In doing this we feel that we render the best service possible to the country, and we appeal to the intelligence, conscience and patriotism of the people, irrespective of party, or section, for their earnest support. We avoid no issues. We meet the sudden, dangerous and revolutionary assault upon law and order, and upon those whom is confided by the constitution and laws the authority to uphold and maintain them, which our opponents have made, with the same courage that we have faced every emergency since our organization as a party, more than forty years ago. Government by law must first be assured; everything else can wait. The country is to be congratulated upon the almost total obliteration of the sectional lines which for so many years marked the division of the United States into slave and free territory, and finally threatened its partition into two separate governments by the dread ordeal of civil war. The era of reconciliation, so long and earnestly desired by Gen. Grant and many other great leaders, north and south, has happly come. Let us forever hereafter heed the admonition of Washington: "There should be no north, no south, no east, no west—but a common country." It shall be my constant aim to improve every opportunity to advance the cause of good government by promoting that spirit of forbearance and justice which is so essential to our prosperity and happiness by joining most heartily in all proper efforts to restore the relations of brotherly respect and affection which in our early history characterized all the people of all the states. The war is long since over. "We are not enemies, but friends," and as friends we will faithfully and cordially co-operate, under the approving smile of Him who has thus far so signally sustained and guided us, to preserve inviolate our country's name and honor, its peace and good order, and its continued ascendency among the greatest governments on earth.

New York—Potato blight increased; earliest hops being picked; hail destroyed much tobacco; vineyards also suffered. Maryland—Early crops of corn and potatoes excellent, but late planted much injured by the drought.

Transvaal Visitors Fired Upon.

London, Aug. 27.—A dispatch to the Telegraph from Lorenzo Marques says the authorities at the naval station recently deliberately fired on a party of Transvaal visitors who were travelling in a steam launch, fatally wounding a Mrs. Landsberg. The consul representing the Transvaal government has demanded that an inquiry be made into the affair. There is intense excitement, and trouble in feared in consequence.

Office Holders Warned.

The order is sweeping in its character and effects all branches of the government service. Violators of the law will be prosecuted.

The Venezuela Dispute.

London, Aug. 27.—The St. James Gazette, commenting on the publication of the latest Venezuelan blue book, says it regards the step as an indication that the Marquis of Salisbury, contrary to a recent assertion, does not intend to submit to arbitrating the territory inside the Schomburgk line.

Business Activity in Great Britain.

London, Aug. 27.—The Times publishes a table showing that the amount of the capitalization of the new joint stock companies organized during the first half of 1896 will aggregate more than £88,000,000 ($440,000,000).

WEATHER INDICATIONS.

Furnished by Weather Observer Neagle.)

Generally Fair Tonight and Friday; Cooler Friday Morning.

At 2 o'Clock Leggett's Thermometer Registered 77 Degrees.

All overhead wires in Orange are to be laid in underground conduits. This is a problem that Plainfield will be confronted with some day, if it is not already.

This is a year of unexpected things in the political conventions. Yesterday Chauncey Black was nominated for Governor of New York by the Republicans. Black is a young man who made a speech to the delegates and took them by storm much the same as Bryan did at Chicago. When the balloting first commenced it was not considered that he had any more of a show to capture the nomination than the Boy Orator had of getting the Presidential honor when the balloting commenced at Chicago. It was more of a stampede than anything else and goes to prove that appearances are very deceiving in a gathering of political spirits.

In point of numbers the convention of the gold standard Democrats at Trenton yesterday was a little disappointing to those actively engaged in the movement. There was considerable enthusiasm, however. Besides reiterating the gold standard plank of the May convention of the New Jersey Democracy, they adopted a platform severely scoring the National platform. They approved of a call for the National gold standard convention of the Democrats, and elected delegates to that convention. The delegates elected from the Third Congressional district were William Strather Jones, of Monmouth, and Stephen G. Williams, of Somerset; and from the Eighth Congressional district they were John B. Green, of Union, and Richard F. Stevens, of Hudson.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

D. K. Hoffman, of Somerville, visited friends in Plainfield yesterday.

Miss Ethel Brewerson, of Elizabeth, is being entertained by Miss Margaret Simpson, of Watchung avenue.

Miss Blanche V. Burke, of Springfield, Vt., is the guest of Mrs. L. E. Linckman, of East Second street.

Mrs. E. V. Lorton, of West Fifth street, left town today for a few week's visit with Mrs. Hirman Huff, at Neshanic, N. Y.

Miss Jane Taylor, of New York, has returned to her home after a visit with Miss Elizabeth Cornwell, of Waynewood place.

Mrs. J. H. Schneider, of Manning avenue, is being visited by Mr. and Mrs. Richard Smith, of Bethlehem, Pa., who will remain in the borough for about ten days.

Picnicing the Little Ones.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph A. Blatz, Mrs. Henry Windham, Mr. and Mrs. E. Marsh, Gus Western and Miss Louise Windham are today entertaining a party of young people in Hyde's grove. Those being entertained are all young people, and a whole wagon load of good things were taken along to keep the little ones quiet. The party went over in stages this morning, and unless rain interferes they will have a pleasant time. Precaution has been taken, for in case of rain a nearby farmhouse will be thrown open for their reception.

Mrs. Rhodie Nash, of this place, was taken in the night with cramping pains, and the next day diarrhoea set in. She took half a bottle of blackberry cordial but got no relief. She then sent to me to see if I had anything that would help her. I sent her a bottle of Chamberlin's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy, and the first dose relieved her. Another of our neighbors had been sick for about a week and had tried different remedies for diarrhœa but kept getting worse. I sent him this same remedy. Only four doses of it were required to cure him. He says he owes his recovery to this wonderful remedy.— Mrs. Mary Sibley, Sidney, Mich. For sale by T. S. Armstrong, Druggist.

INJURED OR ABSCONDED

COLLECTOR WILLIAMS MYSTERIOUSLY DISAPPEARS FROM VIEW.

He Was Employed by the Metropolitan Insurance Company and Was Last Seen Yesterday Morning in This City.

Another man has disappeared and neither his family or employer seem to be able to find any trace of him. The man, who has so quietly dropped out of apparent existence, is C. F. Williams, of 113 New street, who has for the last eight months has been in the employ of the Plainfield Branch of the Metropolitan Insurance Company as a collector.

A Daily Press reporter called at the office of the Metropolitan Insurance Company this afternoon to learn the circumstances of the disappearance. He was informed that Williams is required to report every afternoon at the office, the rest of his time being spent in collecting in this city. Tuesday afternoon Williams appeared as usual and turned over what was supposed to be the amount of his collections for the day. Yesterday morning he was seen by a number of people, but he failed to show up at the usual time.

Fearing some accident had befallen him, a representative of the company was sent to his nome. Williams has a wife and six children and they claimed to know nothing of his whereabouts. The representative of the company called again this morning to find Mrs. Williams greatly worried over the prolonged absence of her husband. She thinks that he has met with some accident.

The representatives of the Metropolitan Insurance Company were unable to tell at present whether there is any shortage in the recent collections that Williams has turned over. He has been with the company for eight months and their relations have always been satisfactory. But as Williams' route was only in this city, they are inclined to suspect deception and request all their patrons not to pay him anything until a full and satisfactory explanation has been made to the company for his absence.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—Justice Thomas, of the borough, is soon to open an office on Somerset street.

—Lowell Vandeveer, of Somerville, will lead the East Third Street mission this evening.

—Unity Lodge, No. 102, Knights of Pythias, held a meeting last evening and transacted routine business.

—S. S. Swackhamer, of Park avenue, is spending several days in New York, where he is purchasing the furnishings for his new residence on Summit avenue.

—Evans Jones, of Kensington avenue, was out again this morning looking for icycles. But he only found them in an ice wagon which stopped in front of his house.

—The Union County Clerk's office will be open on the following evenings for naturalization: Friday, Augugt 28th, Tuesday, September 1st, and Friday, September 4th.

—Freeholder L. E. Barkalew is having a stone curb placed in front of his property on the corner of Lincoln place and Grove street. Contractor A. C. Lazzi is doing the work.

—The ice-cream and peach festival at the Mary E. Wilson Memorial chapel, Washingtonville, this evening, will be a very delightful affair. A quartette composed of R. M. Clark, E. O Clark, A. H. Cornish and W. E. Barnes, will render several selections.

—Some farmer from Sterling created no little excitement in front of Love's grocery store before noon yesterday. He brought down a wagonload of peaches, apples and potatoes, and because he could not unload them on the walk he raised Cain—and he was able to.

—William Brokaw has received the contract from the Somerset County Board of Freeholders to lay a new yellow pine flooring on the Somerset county side of the Washington avenue bridge. This bridge was recently referred to in The Press as being in a dangerous condition.

—The bandstand which Prof. Guttman's band has been occupying occasionally for a few weeks past, near the Babcock building, will probably remain where it is for a few weeks at least, and until Councilman Frost and the other members of the Council decide to continue or discontinue the concerts.

—A comparison of the assessments of Westfield and the Borough of Mountainville shows the tax rate in township of 2.52 on $100 valuation, and 2.62 on the $100 valuation in the borough. As the borough was set off from the township in order to escape the heavy taxation the residents want the borough abolished now.

—Plainfield dogs, like most people are becoming familiar with the trolley system. But there was a yellow cur on Front street, last evening, which was returning from a nocturnal visit, when the car fender on a street car caught the dog fore and aft, and the animal nearly broke its neck in turning a double somersault in the air.

dice cup and ran out doors with it. The men in the bar room at the time he said, were William Jackson, colored, John Trainor and John Raritan. All the witnesses agreed that Block was "under the weather."

Assemblyman Reed wanted to have the testimony of the other witnesses heard but the Justice refused as they were not state witnesses. He then declared the evidence was not sufficient and discharged Lee.

When the other case came up, Mr. Reed protested gambling on only one occasion did not make a house disorderly. It was very evident that one occasion could possibly be proved so that if Mr. Reed was right the charge would be impossible to prove. The Justice differed from Mr. Reed, and the latter waived examination for his client. Lee was held in $200 bail to appear before the grand jury. Lee secured bail and was released.

A dozen or sixteen out of the 400 or more colored voters in this city and North Plainfield hang around East Front street in the vicinity of the Republican Association rooms for an hour or more last evening, waiting for the rooms to be opened up and lighted so they could enter and hold a political meeting. McKinley and Hobart talk permeated the waiting crowd before the rooms were opened, and some man got up and spoke for three-quarters of an hour concerning campaign issues. Finally the meeting was called to order by L. L. Croom, who read the call. J. Sanders was the secretary of the meeting.

THE PARSON A TYRANT.

A MINISTER WHO PRACTICED NOT WHAT HE PREACHED.

Charges Made That He Abused His Wife and Is Bound Over By a Justice to Keep the Peace—Other Proceedings

The little village of East Millstone, situated in Somerset county, along the banks of the Delaware and Raritan Canal, has been astir during the last few weeks over the domestic troubles of Rev. Alfred H. Marryott, a Methodist minister, about fifty years of age, who lives in the village. Marryott preaches on alternate Sundays in Pattenburg and Little York, small places in Hunterdon county. He leaves home on Fridays and returns on Mondays.

It is charged in East Millstone that for years, almost from the beginning of his married life, the pastor has persistently illtreated his wife, until her health has become impaired and her nervous system unstrung. Mrs. Marryott is alleged to have complained frequently that her husband has beaten and pinched her, and has held his hand over her mouth when she attempted to call out. The troubles were brought to public attention by Mrs. Marryott making a complaint before Justice of the Peace Hervey McDonald, charging that her husband on the night of June 8th last assaulted her, and on various occasions had slapped her and threatened her so that she feared that in a fit of anger he would maim or kill her. June 15th was Monday, and when Mr. Marryott arrived at East Millstone on that day, after preaching on Sunday, he was met by Constable Jacob Young and arrested on the charge made by his wife. The minister apparently was greatly surprised and went before Justice McDonald and wanted to have the matter dropped, alleging that the charge of assault was accidental. While in bed, he said, his left arm flopped over and his hand struck his wife in the face. His wife also came to the same conclusion and wanted the charge withdrawn, but the Justice bound the minister over in $500 to keep the peace.

This Mr. Marryott was compelled to do, much against his will, fearing it would injure him, and asserting his willingness to sign an agreement to treat his wife properly.

Mr. Marryott at the time was a member of Hiawatha Council, No. 110, Jr. O. U. A. M. The Council considered that the charges made against him, which had compelled a Justice to bind him over, were sufficient to warrant a lodge investigation. Accordingly a committee drew up charges substantially like those made before the Justice. This committee sat to investigate, and after several hearings were given the Council expelled him.

"It is a case of persecution," said the minister. "When I heard that charges were to be made before the Council, the parties who drew them up were requested by myself, my wife and our friends to wait, and they would soon be satisfied that there was no occasion for such an investigation; but they would not. My daughter, Mabel, eighteen years of age, appeared before the committee and swore that I had always treated my wife and family with kindness. I shall appeal the matter to the State Council, and have no doubt of ultimate vindication."

Mr. Marryott is a man of reserved, uncommunicative disposition, and not calculated to win many close friends. This may account in a measure for the Council's action.

Dailies Set Up New Scott Presses.

One of Walter Scott & Co.'s stereotype plate web perfecting presses, that are so serviceable and satisfactory every way in the pressrooms of small city dailies, has just been installed in the office of the Jamestown (N. Y.) Daily Journal. This puts the finishing touches on an exceptionally fine plant. Another press of the same make—class "UN"—has been ordered for the new daily paper to be established at Mexico City, where it will no doubt introduce presswork of a much higher order than the newspapers of either city or country have been accustomed to.

Why is It,

if catarrh is a blood disease, as some claim, that physicians frequently advise change of air and climate to those suffering? Catarrh is a climatic affection, and nothing but a local remedy or a change of climate will cure it. BLACK'S NOMINATION

How He Suddenly Forged Ahead at the Saratoga Convention.

HIS SPEECH WON HIM DELEGATES

The Nomination of Woodruff for Lieutenant Governor was a Foregone Conclusion and There Was Little Interest Taken After Black's Selection.

Saratoga, N. Y., Aug. 27.—The nomination of congressman Frank S. Black of Troy for governor by the republican convention yesterday afternoon on the second ballot of the day and fourth of the session came somewhat as a surprise, although he began to be talked about from the hour of his speech on Tuesday, but his best friends hardly dared hope for the nomination because so large a proportion of his support had pledged itself to Aldrige for second choice. The feeling in the convention was shown, however, by the way the delegates rushed to him as soon as Albany withdrew Palmer and by substituting Black's name led the movement towards him. On the deciding ballot Black received 675 votes, Aldridge 77 and Fish 6. The nomination was made unanimous. The first ballot of the day and the third of the session resulted as follows: Aldridge 242, Black 154, Fish 119, Odell 82, Baxter 51, Roberts 38, Wadsworth, 42, Saxton 15. Ellsworth 9, Fassett 6.

Mr. Woodruff's Nomination.

The nomination of Timothy L. Woodruff of Brooklyn for lieutenant-governor was no surprise as he was looked upon as having been slated for the place no matter who headed the ticket. Besides Mr. Woodruff's name, the names of Titus Sheard of Herkimer and M. Stranahan of Oswego were placed in nomination. On the roll call Mr. Woodruff was nominated by the vote of New York. Mr. Woodruff received 541 votes. Mr. Sheard received 41 votes and Mr. Stranahan received 176. The nomination was then made unanimous by acclamation. The secretary was then directed to cast the unanimous vote of the convention for judge Isaac G. Vann of Syracuse for judge of the court of appeals, and he was declared nominated by the convention. The usual resolution of thanks to the convention officers was introduced and adopted. Then the convention adopted a resolution offered by Mr. Odell that the chairman of the state committee be authorized to appoint a committee of four persons not members of the state committee to act in conjunction with the state committee in campaign work. This concluded the work of the convention.

LI HUNG CHANG.

New York's Mayor Arranging a Display for the Chinese Earl.

New York, Aug. 27.—After consultation with various heads of city departments Mayor Strong has decided to give Ambassador Li Hung Chang an insight into municipal department doings. With this end in view it has been determined that on Tuesday next, after the ambassador has attended the luncheon to be tendered him at the Merchants' club, there will be a parade of the fire department, in which the street cleaning department men will participate. The police too may be called upon to show themselves to the royal Chang. Troop A will act as an escort during this feature of the entertainment. This is only a general plan of the arrangement. The details have not as yet been mapped out.

Italy to Send Protection to Italians in the Republic.

London, Aug. 27.—A dispatch to the Standard from Rome says: "Premier Rudini had a long conference with the representatives of foreign countries here, and it is probable that an Italian man-of-war will be sent to Brazil." A dispatch to the Times from Rio Janeiro says that six persons were killed and fifty persons were wounded in the recent riots in the province of San Paulo. The city of San Paulo is now reported quiet. The Italian charge d'affaires has demanded reparation for the killing of Italians by the Brazilians in the riot.

Of late years, however, she has won for herself a modicum of literary reputation as a writer on household matters.

MOST VENGEFUL OF BEASTS.

More Hunters Slain by the African Buffalo Than Any Other Animal.

How He Rushes from Ambush—Returns on His Spoor to Lie in Wait for His Foes—Perilous Experience of a Boer.

[COPYRIGHT, 1896.]

It is agreed upon all hands by experienced hunters in Africa that the buffalo (Bubalus Caffer) is one of the three most dangerous four-footed foes that man can attack. Most men class this animal with elephants and lions, as game that requires the highest attributes of skill, courage and caution to bring to bag; and, as a matter of fact, it may be laid down that more deaths and dangerous accidents happen annually in Africa in hunting the buffalo than in the chase of any other species of heavy game. In regions where large numbers of these splendid beasts still wander in troops of 300, 400 and even more, and where they have been little disturbed, the hunter has no great difficulty in shooting as many as he requires. In fairly open country, where scattered covert exists, and where they can be readily approached—for they are be no means keen-sighted creatures—a man may shoot buffaloes as easily, he begins to think, as he can oxen. But when a buffalo is wounded and his blood spoor has to be taken up, and the hunter has to follow him in the dense coverts to which he retreats, the business is entirely changed. Then you may prepare to look out for yourself, to take up your heaviest and most reliable weapon, and to follow the track of your game with every sense alert, and your rifle handy for an instant and most deadly charge.

You will find, too, that the native spoorer, who trotted in front of you readily enough on the blood spoor of elephant, and even the lion, would now greatly prefer to follow in your rear, and leave you to take upon your own person the first and most dangerous risk in the dark and shadowy thickets into which you are advancing. He knows—none better—the dark, murderous fury, and the lurking, noiseless ways of the beast of which you are in search. The buffalo, when once he is wounded, seems, indeed, to think of little else than a bloody revenge. Unlike most kinds of game, which, when wounded, will almost invariably betake themselves in flight as far from the pursuer as possible, he usually retreats some distance into the densest bush, and then either hides up in some dark corner, where the shadows are deep and dense, or, turning upon his line, takes a parallel path back, and so waits for his foe; or he will even follow back upon his own spoor and conceal himself. Sometimes he will stand, lurking amid the dark thickets; at another time, if badly wounded, he will lie down; in either case prepared and determined to inflict a bloody revenge for the hurt under which he is smarting.

I cannot better illustrate the character of these plucky animals than by an adventure narrated to me not long since in the hunting veldt by a Boer hunter from the Transvaal. He had been tregging with some other compatriots far to the northwest of Lake Ngami. Flesh was badly wanted in camp, and as Tsetse fly was prevalent in the marshy country, north of the Okanango river on which they were outspanned, and the natives reported large herds of buffaloes, he left his horses behind him, ferried across the river, and spent the next two days in hunting. He had with him his own Hottentot servant, a good and reliable hunter and a fair shot, and he had as well several of the natives of the district, who were anxious for meat, and ready to show him the game.

On the first day the Dutchman came across some 50 buffaloes grazing in fairly open veldt. Getting behind some convenient covert, and with the wind in the right direction, he had little difficulty in shooting two fat cows and a young bull. The cows were quite easily secured, but the bull, although shot through the lungs, jumped on his legs from some long grass and bush when approached, charged fiercely at the sporting party, and was only killed within a few feet of the hunter.

Large numbers of buffaloes were still reported a little further ahead among the lagoons and marshes of this region. The Dutch hunter, therefore, camped for the night, ate a hearty supper by the roaring fire, and slept soundly till early dawn. Before sun-up the party were again stirring. In less than two hours' time the natives had led the way to a broad, marshy lagoon, or "vlei," as Boers call it, surrounded by drier ground, upon which grew bush, acacia trees and a few tall palms. Part of this lagoon was shallow open water, the remainder consisted of a dense bed of tall reeds which led to further swamps and lagoons beyond. The sight that met the Dutchman's eyes as he and the natives crept cautiously towards the edge of the "vlei" and surveyed the scene from behind a screen of bush was a wonderful one. In and about the "vlei" stood a troop of not less than 200 buffaloes, some rolling in shadows, some drinking, some standing belly-deep in the water, dark and motionless.

Concealed behind a mass of bush, to which he and the Hottentot had crept, the Dutchman waited patiently till the troop moved and a fair shot offered.

At last several fat cows, for which he had been waiting, together with a tremendous old bull, came within 30 yards. Selecting the best cow, the Boer aimed behind the point of the shoulder and brought her down. She fell instantly to the shot, struggled a little further and soon lay dead. The Boer had hoped and expected to bring down another cow. His intentions were frustrated, however, by the bull, which charged upon the instant directly towards the rifle smoke. Within ten yards the Dutchman, who was kneeling, fired again, hitting the grim beast in front of the chest and turning it. Meanwhile, at the sound of firing, the whole immense herd floundered out of the "vlei," and went off, crashing through an angle of the reed beds, and thence far into the bush. As they fled the Boer shoved in another cartridge, took aim at a retreating cow 80 yards off, and by a lucky shot broke her back. She fell, bellowing, and was quickly dispatched. Leaving the natives to skin and cut up these carcasses, the Dutchman now took up the pursuit of the wounded bull, which he had marked in its flight through a dense patch of reeds to the right of the lagoon. The beast had turned off alone, and the greatest care had to be taken in following it through such a covert. But the Dutchman had hitherto always had great luck with buffalo and was determined to finish his task. As soon as the reeds were reached the blood spoor was easily followed. The heavy bullet had evidently raked the lungs, as the bull was bleeding freely, and large patches of crimson marked its path. The reeds were very tall—12 or 14 feet—and thick, and the spooring seemed so dangerous an operation that the Hottentot, who was carrying a second gun—a Martini-Henry—fell behind, leaving his master to take the first risk with his heavy eight-bore. At every step—they were wading knee deep in water—the hunters stopped to listen. They had not penetrated 50 yards through the avenue of broken reeds afforded by the passage of the bull, when in an instant and without warning the beast was upon them. The Boer was knocked flat upon his back by the charge, but the bull had miscalculated his distance; he had no doubt charged for the sound, and had struck his enemy with his nose, which was held high, as is the habit of these brutes when charging. Galloping over the prostrate Boer, the buffalo went straight for the Hottentot a few paces behind. This unfortunate the brute struck with his horn and tossed on one side some yards into the reeds. Then, continuing its career, the bull passed on out of the "vlei," and took shelter in some thin bush, where it was afterwards found dead. The Boer, all the wind knocked out of him, and severely bruised, picked himself up, recovered his rifle, which was flung yards away, and then sought the Hottentot. The unfortunate servant lay among the reeds and water, a terrible wound gaping just below his left chest, breathing his last. He lived only a short time, and died a pathetic and unwilling object lesson in the risks and dangers of following a wounded buffalo into thick covert.

PROCESS OF PETRIFACTION.

As the Animal Matter Decays the Pores Fill with Lime.

In his second lecture on the "Architecture of the Earth's Crust," at the Boston Society of Natural History rooms recently, A. W. Craban accounted for the petrification and preservation of mineral, animal and vegetable matter. The shells of animals now found at the seashore will ultimately be buried in the crust of the earth, which is formed principally of conglomerates, sandstone and shells. All the fossil shells that are so common in the cliffs along the seashore were buried there before the beginning of the present geological period, while the cliffs were a soft mass, covered by water. During the process of petrification of the sand the interior of the shells was dissolved, and there remained an empty cavity; but gradually rainwater penetrated through the valves, carrying into the shell a soft mud, which hardened and assumed the exact form of the interior of the shell. Under some conditions the animal matter which is to be found in all natural shells, decays, and gradually the pores are filled with lime, and the shell becomes a true petrification. Again, the shell may decay entirely, but the inside cast, formed by the mud, cannot be dissolved, and a new substance is formed around the cast by the action of water. And as the mold (for so is called the formation in the cavity occasioned by the dissolution of the shell) has received the exact outside impression, there is formed a true copy of the original shell. Those counterfeit fossils are usually formed by quartz, a mineral composed of pure silica.

The lecturer showed specimens of petrified shells, wood and vegetables, some of which, he said, were thousands of years old. While there are fossils that are generally accepted as petrified wood, there is, in reality, no such thing, for the woody matter is decayed, particle by particle, and is replaced by quartz. The process is so slow and delicate that the character of the wood may be noticed in the new formation and one can tell what kind of wood it was. Mr. Craban showed pieces of slate which, as could be distinctly seen, were formed from ferns.—Boston Transcript.

Pennies in Juneau.

The old-time Yukoners who stayed in Juneau so long that the first of the incoming rush reached the Alaskan metropolis before they started for their summer's work in the interior got an unusual, and to them unwelcome, evidence of eastern civilization through the introduction into Juneau's fractional currency of what the Mining Record scornfully calls the "humble penny piece." The Yukoners regard the silver quarter as the smallest national coinage. They despise dimes and think the nickels an outrage on humanity. For the penny as a coin they have no satisfactory vocabulary of denunciation. They prefer rather to denounce the persons who use it, and such denunciation usually includes the entire genealogical tree of the unfortunate offender. The only possible use a Yukoner has for a penny is to treasure it as a curiosity.—N. Y. Sun.

Delicate Dress Goods.

Some gowns are so dainty in the weave, so delicate in tint, that they seem to soil by being looked at—one or two wearings making them unpresentable, NOT USELESS. We make a specialty of cleaning fine fabrics, the more delicate the material, the better the results. Sometimes an accident will ruin a gown, without injuring the texture. We dye them then, sometimes we get a prettier effect than the original color. Fine goods stand redying. The finer the material the better the new color. We charge so little for cleaning or dyeing, that even if you are in doubt as to the result, it's worth while to experiment. Want a new evening gown for a dollar or two? REDWOOD TREE BRIDGE.

Remarkable Structure That Has Been in Use for Many Years.

There is no more remarkable wooden bridge in the world than the one which crosses Cerritos creek on the stage road between San Mateo and Pescadero, a few miles north of San Gregario, Cal. This peculiar and picturesque structure is built entirely of the trunks of native redwood trees, and is in a fair state of preservation.

The most striking thing about the appearance of this bridge, says the San Francisco Call, is its enormous height. The center span crosses the creek 90 feet above the water.

It is not known who the engineers were that built the bridge nor just what facilities they had for doing the work. The structure was put up about 1858 and has remained in constant use ever since. It is true the stages do not cross it now, but foot passengers and smaller vehicles use it regularly. The only effect of its long years of service is a slight sag at the northern end.

The redwood trees of which the bridge was built were hauled from the forest about 15 miles away. How they were placed in position is something past finding out, as there is nobody living in the locality that remembers when the bridge was put up. And, indeed, it looks as if the job would puzzle an engineer of to-day, even though he were given the use of all modern appliances, which the others did not have.

In all there are 70 upright supports in the bridge, and they must have been stood on end entirely by the use of ropes, pulleys and muscle. Those in the center of the bridge are the highest and the others get shorter and shorter as they climb the bank on either side.

Very few braces are used, so that the bridge presents the appearance of a series of straight poles reaching across the ravine.

The country in this vicinity is picturesque and wild, and the bridge does not look the least bit out of place. In fact, it rather blends into the landscape. It does not present a very beautiful appearance nor does it look grotesque.

NATURAL MOUSE TRAP.

Three Silly Wandering Rodents Caught by a Lively Oyster.

Mr. W. H. Marris sends us the following curiosity says the Amateur Photographer.

From time immemorial the mouse has been classed with the pests with which mankind has had to deal. The little animal has three leading and discreditable characteristics i. e., thief, trespasser and destroyer of property. It is therefore not surprising that human ingenuity has been ever actively employed against the unwelcome creature's life.

Besides the chemist with his poisons, and the wood and wire workers with their clever devices, the mouse has had a natural foe in the cat; but notwithstanding all kinds of snares, mice are not yet exterminated. But since the creation there has surely not been known a more curious enemy to mice than the one that has recently distinguished itself at the fishing metropolis (Grimsby), on the night of March 28.

An oyster was on that day placed on a pantry floor, and during the night (feeling thirsty) it opened its shell. Three silly, wandering mice were near too, and smelling fish, all placed their heads just inside for a taste. The intrusion was instantly resented by the occupant of the shell, and hastily yet silently a relentless grab was made, and those foolish mice were suddenly executed prisoners.

Such a thing has been known on oyster boats here as the capture of a single mouse by an oyster, and rats have suffered injuries to legs, etc., but the trapping of three mice simultaneously is a record for an oyster, which I think at present is acknowledged a unique feat.

Has the oyster firmly conspired to oust the cat from the legitimate occupation for which it has so long been renowned?

Thanks to the art of photography, our readers are able to see an exact picture of the captor and the captives just as found.

THE IDEAL AFRICANS.

That Is What an English Writer Calls the Fierce Matabeles.

One of the most war-loving races of the Zambesia known to us at present unless some daring explorer discovers another in that as yet little-known region, is the Matabele. He is the ideal native of northern South Africa, a superior specimen of the negro or Kafir race. Tall, erect, finely modeled, handsome according to his type, with a corresponding array of physical and mental qualities, a great sportsman, fond of athletic pastimes, reckless of life and limb in pursuit of his passion—a fight, as ready to be killed as to kill. But with all these brave qualities he has, like Samson of old, in spite of his strength, a weakness, one that is not entirely confined to the black race, however, a weakness which takes the form of a plump, well-conditioned damsel or 'mtombi.

Now the Matabele is essentially a marrying man, according to a writer in St. Paul's. His admiration for the dusky beauties of his people is unbounded, and in the matter of wives he will go any length. He will beg, steal, plunder, kill, nay, even resort to work, in order to obtain the wherewithal necessary to buy as many as he feels disposed to marry.

His courage in this respect is truly marvelous; in fact, it is difficult to decide which to admire most, his easy assumption of such varied matrimonial responsibilities, or his capacity for unlimited honeymoons. Perhaps the absence of that much-abused personage, the mother-in-law, has something to do with the case, since it is a rigidly enforced law that the mother of a man's wife never dare show her face to her son-in-law. Although in the case of marriage a young Matabele girl is the property of her father, to be disposed of to the suitor who can offer the greatest number of cattle, goats or other property in exchange for her hand, she has a voice in the matter, and can reject or accept as the humor suits her. This is a privilege rarely if ever denied her; in fact, it is looked upon with a sort of superstitious respect which enables the women to keep a quiet upper hand, so to speak. On the other hand, a girl will, in nine cases out of ten, yield to the wishes of her father, and marry whomever he may select, without troubling herself over those complex questions of heart-affinities, marriages preordained by Heaven, and kindred-soul business, which so agitate the peace of mind of her civilized sister.

But the Matabele girl is not devoid of sentiment; on the contrary, she has the greatest pride in the exploits of the man she marries. He may be old, toothless, with one leg in the grave, and the other feebly tripping a war dance, but if he can show on his assegai the blood of many victims, he is the greatest old beau in the kraal, with not one, but a score of tender young damsels ready to fly to his arms and become the most docile of wives and obedient of slaves, toiling early and late in the fields and tending the cattle to enrich him that he may revel in uxuala (beer) and sit in council with the king.

FLAGS ON CHURCHES.

A Custom Originated by a Clergyman at Fort Madison, Ia.

A recent dispatch from Sandusky, O., stated that at the dedicatory exercises of a new Congregational church in that city an immense United States flag was flung to the breeze. The dispatch further stated that this was an innovation, and that the Sandusky church was the only sanctuary in the union over which the stars and stripes would wave whenever devotional exercises are being held. The latter statement is a mistake, inasmuch as Hope church (Episcopal), Rev. W. K. Berry, rector, of Fort Madison, Ia., has had the stars and stripes floated over it for some months past upon all church and national holidays, after the custom of the English church, which floats its colors upon all state occasions, anniversaries and holidays. Mr. Berry is an enthusiastic Anglo-American, who has the keenest regard for American patriotism and the flag with 13 stripes. He is a graduate of King's chapel, London, and was at one time assistant rector of St. James, Chicago, later dean of Kemper Hall, Davenport, and for three years past rector of Hope church, Fort Madison.

TINGLEY FAMILY RE-UNION.

Forefathers and Kin Join in a Happy Meeting on the Old Homestead.

The annual re-union of the Tingley family, which includes many residents in this part of the country, took place on a farm near New Market, yesterday, and there was a good attendance of the survivors of the family.

The day was spent mostly in a quiet way, and the history of the family was read. It read in part: Ebenezer, the first, settled in New Jersey, on what is known as the forks of Green and Stony Brook, sometime in the seventeenth century. His wife's name was Nancy Grey. The next of kin was Ebenezer the second, who at one time was Justice of the Peace in the old country. His wife's name was Nancy Gray. The family is directly connected with the Jenning's family here.

At the picnic yesterday, there were over one hundred of the heirs and others present, and the afternoon was given up to short talks, singing and refreshments.

The Stage Overturned.

The Fanwood and Scotch Plains stage was upset this morning in Scotch Plains. A young man by the name of Day was driving, and the owner of the stage Mr. Collins, was buried underneath the overturned vehicle. He was only slightly injured.

Miss Clara Huff, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Huff, of Plainfield avenue, died yesterday from consumption. She was twenty-five years of age and had been ailing for about two years. Notice of funeral will appear later.

Mrs. Edith May Felter, of Lincoln place, daughter of Mrs. Baker, died this morning at 5 o'clock from consumption. She passed away at the home of Wm. Sharkey, where she was staying, having come here some five weeks ago from Yonkers for the benefit of her health.

PAID $100 FOR A PIE.

How a Crafty Character Sold a Moldy Tart for a Small Fortune.

Jim is just Jim—has been this side of nowhere for 40 years or more. His horse, like himself, a character, and the green wagon, too, have been in evidence a shorter period, but they also are growing old. The business of all three is that of buying old libraries and redisposing of them at a profit by selling them to senators, supreme court justices and newspaper men.

Jim was a boy during war times—a lively one—and he made money then as now, but in a different occupation. He sold pies in the camps. Every morning he set out with two big baskets of pies, stacked up carefully and made the round of the different tented villages which then spread over spaces now covered with brick and brownstone and inhabited by the rich, the famous and the select.

Good pies, such as Jim's mother made, brought a quarter each, and there were margins on them, both of crisp, rich crust and crisp, rich profits. At nightfall Jim came home with the empty baskets and pockets full of shinplasters.

"The best day's trade," said Jim the other day when talking to a Star reporter of old times, "the best day's trade I ever had was when I was in the pie business. Several regiments had gone to the front and my customers were among them. Business had been slow. I had trouble in getting rid of all my pies. Apple and pumpkin went quick. Cranberry was slow, and one night I found myself with a cranberry pie that I knew was three days old. I had turned toward home, thinking I would have that pie myself for supper to save the loss. I had been out to a New York regiment near Rock Creek and was coming past Washington Circle, when I met a grizzled old soldier shaking his blue legs along the road, trying to struggle back to camp.

"'What yer got, boy?' he asked as I passed him.

"'Pies, boss,' I replied as peart as if that one old cranberry tart hadn't whiskers on it.

"He took it up and smelled of it, and before he had said he would take it or had made any move to pay for it took a big bite out of it. I can see that bite now, with the jags in it where the old man's teeth were gone.

"As I began to make a fuss over his taking the pie, he pulled up his blue trouser's leg, shoved his finger down in his stocking and pulled out a greasy old bill.

"'There ye are, but, take that fer yer d——d old pie.'

"It was a $100 bill—not a greenback, but a 'wild-cat' bill issued by the Pittsburgh traders' bank.

"I told him I couldn't change it, and made out he was codding me.

"'To h——l with change,' he snapped out, 'the bill's as good as yer d——d old pie. Ye can jest take the bill an' git, or I'll make ye eat the pie and the bill, too. Scat!'

"I thought he was going to lick me an' I set off on a run. I found afterward that the old chap had been playing poker downtown all the afternoon and had won the bill, supposing as I did until the next day that it was worthless. I put it in a bank for collection, and I got just $97.60 for it, the exchange being $2.40. I've never sold a pie before nor since for such a good price."—Washington Star.

STOCKS AND COLLARS.

The Neck Finish a Distinctive Touch to the Fashionable Toilet.

Like the separate waist fashion, which everyone supposed would quickly run its course and be put aside, but which flourishes with time and grows with every season, the fancy to make the neck and throat trimming the crucial point of a toilet continues.

It has come to be quite the seal of an artistic dressmaker to create pretty finishes for the neckband of the gown, always, of course, keeping within the sacred realm of the style on which capricious fashion has set her hall mark of the moment. A cluster of ribbon loops standing up within the band as high often as the ears is a very effective finish, if the color selected is harmonious with the skin tints. The soft frills of lace flaring up to fall over in a graceful bunch are another becoming and favorite fashion, and discreetly concealing to throats that have begun to lose the plumpness of youth.

The straight-around and very full frills are more used in London than here, the American woman for some reason objecting to this arrangement and refusing to adopt it.

With fichu bodices the throat is sometimes fashionably finished quite low, the only approach to the bared neck hollows of a few seasons ago that is seen. As if to make up for this concession, the neckbands of tailor-made gowns are higher than ever, and frequently accentuate their height with a little turned-over-all-around collar, on which the ears rest.

The boa finish, as it is called, will be much used for summer gowns, and is a mass of crinkled or plaited tulle chiffon or lace, arranged in full jabot effect on a ribbon band. The long-necked woman finds this style of admirable purpose, but the stout woman whose head seems to be fitted upon her collar bones simply obliterates what little throat she might have.

For the decollete corsage the almost always becoming broad black velvet ribbon is again in vogue.

In addition to the neck finishes shown, which are a part of the frock bodice, the range of separate "collarettes" and "throatlets" is very wide. "Anything you may have in your odd and end box," said the woman the other day, "can be put together for a collarette."—N. Y. Times.

SUMMER TEA CAKE.

A Simple and Digestible Article of Diet.

The suggestion of hot tea cakes at once awakens visions of dyspepsia in the imaginations of the average northern housekeeper. Yet there are few southern households where hot bread is not the rule, and in spite of this and the prevalence of the frying-pan, dyspepsia is much more common at the north than at the south. In fact, it is generally conceded by intelligent physicians that the habit of brooding over a special disease goes far to induce morbid conditions that may in time invite the disease. So those who are forever watching for indigestion are likely to be its first victims. These people will consume underdone potatoes and coarse cornbeef with eagerness, under the impression that they are partaking of plain and wholesome food, and refuse the most feathery light muffins because they believe hot bread unwholesome.

Nothing is more acceptable to healthy stomachs than perfectly-made shortcake, served with fruit, for supper. It is a mistake to suppose hot bread is an article of winter diet. Cold bread is not enticing to the appetite, as everything should be in summer, because the appetite is apt to lag at this season, when food is especially needed to supply the wastes from the perspiration and stimulate the strength. A simple tea cake, baked in a sheet in a dripping pan or biscuit tin, offers a change from shortcake. Sift a quart of the best pastry flour twice with two teaspoonfuls of cream tartar and a scant one of soda. Rub a tablespoonful of butter through the flour and add half a cup of sugar. Put in two eggs and milk enough to make a stiff batter. Beat the batter, which should be as stiff as you can stir it, and bake it in sheets in a hot oven. A German coffee cake is a delicious accompaniment of fruit. Early in the morning rub a heaping tablespoonful of butter into a quart of the best bread flour; break in an egg and add half a cup of sugar and a half teaspoonful of salt. Pour in a cup of milk that has been boiled and colored, and also a cup of warm water. Add finally half a cup of homemade yeast or a quarter of a yeast cake. Set it at six o'clock in the morning for tea. At 4:30 o'clock pour the cakes into sheets about an inch thick. Brush the cake over thickly with butter, dredge it thickly with equal parts of fine flour and powdered sugar mixed together and let it rise one hour. Bake it half an hour in a quick oven. A simple, delicious tea muffin is made of two cups of flour, sifted twice, with two teaspoonfuls of baking powder and a saltspoonful of salt. Rub a tablespoonful of butter thoroughly through the flour and add one beaten egg and a cup of milk. Beat the batter with a large-sized patent egg beater very rapidly for several moments. Drop the cakes into greased muffin rings resting on a biscuit tin or into more convenient patty tins and bake the muffins rapidly about 20 minutes.—N. Y. Tribune.

PURE AIR FOR WEE ONES

A DELIGHTFUL RECREATION PLACE FOR THE CITY POOR.

Westfield Fresh Air Camp Located in a Cool Grove of Trees, From Which the Vititors Return Greatly Invigorated.

Seven representatives of the Congregational Christian Endeavor Society went to Westfield last night to conduct the evening service at the fresh-air camp.

The meeting was led by John Vanderveer Beekman, Jr., whose talk on the Scripture passage beginning "If ye then be risen with Christ, seek those things which are above" was very practical and helpful. Two duets, "Savior, More Than Life to Me," and "Take a Stand for Jesus," with autoharp accompaniment, were sung by Miss M. G. Morse, of Plainfield, and Miss Genevieve Gilman, of Brooklyn. The meeting was participated in by several Endeavorers and several of the guests at the camp.

These short, helpful services are held every evening and on Sunday afternoons. The whole atmosphere of the place is spiritual; the matron, Miss Curry, is a thoroughly consecrated young woman, whose influence over the women and children under her charge is of the best.

To a visitor, the camp presents a very attractive appearance. The tents are erected in the midst of a pretty grove, just outside of the town of Westfield. The first thing to attract notice is the large tent where the meetings are held, and which also serves as a dining-room and living-room during the day. Here may be seen the mothers resting, talking or reading, while the children play among the trees or swing in the hammocks. Just beyond is the cooking tent, with its two big cookstoves and also its piles of provisions. Twenty or thirty loaves of bread are often used at one meal. Now we come upon the dormitory, a large wooden builing with two long corridors, from which open many tiny rooms, with large beds for the mothers and small ones for the babies. At the back are the bathrooms, with several large tubs and washstands.

Perhaps the prettiest thing on the grounds is the day nursery, a white tent, containing dainty little white cots, where the wee ones of the camp can be cared for during the day without trouble to the tired mothers. September 3d the camp will be closed for the season, as the cool nights make the life in the open air unsafe. The mothers will go to their homes rested and refreshed, taking rosier, healthier children than they brought with them, and taking also many practical lessons for use in their own households, and best of all, many of them will carry away a sincere, living faith in the Saviour in whose name this beautiful charity in conducted.

REPUBLICANS AT TRENTON.

How the Union County Delegates Apportioned the Honors.

The following was the organization of the Union county delegation at the Republican State convention at Trenton yesterday:

Charles J. Fisk, of Plainfield, was selected for vice-president; for committee on platform, Senator Foster M. Voorhees, of Elizabeth; for committee on rules, Charles B. Peddie, of Westfield; for committee on credentials, William McCulley, of Elizabeth; for committee on permanent organization, Clarence B. Ward, of Rahway.

In nominating Ernest Ackerman, Hon. John Kean said that the Republican party is indebted to Plainfield for a very large share of the party success. Plainfield always gives a very large majority for the Republican ticket, and in the selection of one of its honored citizens, the Republicans were doing no more than ought to be done to let Plainfield have the honor which it deserves. Mr. Kean paid a deserved tribute to the loyalty and character of the nominee, and his remarks were vigorously applauded.

Not Burglars After All.

Mrs. Electra Craft, of Kensington avenue, noticed last Wednesday that the front door of the residence of Mr. Fredericks, opposite, was slightly open. Mr. and Mrs. Fredericks are away at present and so Jacob Rodman, brother of Mrs. Fredericks, and D. W. Martine, a neighbor, made an investigation yesterday. They could not discover that anything had been taken and everything appeared in perfect order. It is thought that some boys entered the house and left the door open as a joke. The burglar theory seemed hardly possible.

—"Mad Anthony" Hummel, a disciple of Ben Franklin, and a tourist of twenty-five years experience, struck town yesterday. "Hum" predicts an early fall because the apple crop is leaking from the trees. He was pointing eastward.

PREPARATIONS GOING ON

DAYLIGHT BICYCLE PARADE ENTHUSIASM STILL KEEPS UP.

Money is Being Subscribed Liberally by the Merchants—Local Clubs Will Make a Good Showing in Numbers.

Blue skies or dark clouds, the preparations for the Daylight Bicycle Carnival, which is to be held in this city on the afternoon of Saturday, September 5th, still go on. The support the committee is receiving is excellent and all the merchants that the finance committee has interviewed have contributed generously to the subscription fund. The meeting of the general committee last Tuesday evening has started the work forward with renewed vigor.

While Plainfield will have a whole army of unattached wheelmen in line, she will not be unrepresented among the clubs. The officers of the Crescent Wheelmen are hustling to get a big turnout and hope, if possible to have the club secure a prize. The Y. M. C. A. cyclers, who made such a splendid showing at the evening parade in this city, promise to far excell their previous effort. They have invited the Y. M. C. A. cycling clubs of eight other cities, all the other clubs in the Y. M. C. A. Cycling League, to be present and hope to have nearly two hundred men in line.

The Alis Athletic Association of this city has decided to send its football team in full uniform in the parade and they expect that their remarkable appearance will them a prize.

One great advantage of holding the parade in the afternoon is that the lady cyclists can turn out without escorts. Arrangements will be made so that all can ride in perfect safety without fear of accidents from crowding or collision.

It will not, of course, be necessary to decorate your wheel if you intend to parade but it will be preferable. It is hoped that everybody will decorate to some extent for it will add much to the success and pleasure of the Carnival.

The cyclists can be thankful that it is the Jersey Central that runs through here and not some railroad company that is at odds with the wheelmen. The Central transports wheels for nothing without the bother of check or release and will make special provision for carrying bicycles on the day of the Carnival. Large parties coming to this city and taking their wheels should notify the station agent so that special provision can be made for their wheels. Clubs are specially requested to do so. Parties of over ten can obtain a special rate of two cents a mile for each person.

CONFISCATED THE DOG.

But There Will Be Trouble Because Taken From Private Property.

Stage driver Thomas Neuman rents a barn on the French property in the rear of Somerset street, between Race street and Manning avenue, which has an outlet to each of the above-named streets. Yesterday afternoon shortly after four o'clock, dog catcher Squire Greyson saw a dog roaming aimlessly about on that private thoroughfare and quietly slipped a noose around the canine's head and brought him to the dog pound. Thomas Newman, the dog's owner, expostulated, but Squire Greyson was determined. The Squire was around last night asking different citizens whether he did right and said that a prominent borough official told him that he had. Now Newman threatens to bring suit against the borough for his dog. The dog-catcher last night was considerably worried when Marshal Whiteley advised him to bring the dog back to the owner, saying that he was himself liable to be incarcerated. Squire did not know what that meant and said, "I didn't do dat boss, I only took the dog, dats all."

Riveters Stop Work.

A strike is now in progress among the riveters in Elizabeth at the Crescent Ship Yards, owned by Lewis Nixon, and located at the Port. The strike was inaugurated yesterday afternoon when the riveters decided that they ought to receive more wages, and demanded an increase of five cents per hour. Their request was refused, and the strike followed. The men were at work on the gunboat being constructed for the government. A conference will be held and a course to pursue will be laid out. The company would not consider the matter, but will allow the men to return to their work at the old scale.

Insane Man at Large.

While out walking with his attendant yesterday morning Louis Benbrook, a patient at the State Insane Asylum at Morris Plains, effected his escape, and a posse of attendants has been detailed to search for the missing man, who is described as being six feet tall, wore a blue suit of clothes and had a dark mustache.

BEDLAM IN THE ROOKERY

MRS. ERRICO MAKES ALL SORTS OF NOISE WHEN LOCKED UP.

Went to the Rookery to Have a Boy Arrested, But Officer McCue Decided That She Was a Subject for the Law.

It is not often that the Plainfield lockup has to entertain a violent subject, but Patrolman McCue brought in a prisoner yesterday afternoon that made one attempt to commit suicide and kicked and screamed and tore around generally. And, strange to relate, the prisoner was a woman.

Yesterday afternoon a woman staggered over to the lockup considerably under the influence of liquor, and she acted wildly. She said she wanted to make a complaint against a boy who had thrown stones at her and cut her face. Patrolman McCue was house officer at the time, and seeing that she was too drunk to take of herself, he locked her up.

When she realized that she was really in jail she began to scream. She kicked and struggled, tore off all her clothing and dashed herself against the bars. At last there was a silence and McCue heard her tearing something. He investigated and found that she had torn a towel into strips and was just about to hang herself with it in the corner of the cell. She had adjusted her towel rope and was just fastening it. Of course he removed it.

Her screams continued until evening when, to prevent her from disturbing all the neighborhood, she was allowed to go home on promising to return for trial this morning. She came and was brought up before City Judge DeMeza.

Her name is Mrs. Bethie Errico and she lives in Paradise Alley where she bears the reputation of being one of its worst characters, according to the police.

She told the judge that a boy named Charley, living in Paradise Alley, had teased and abused her, and finally cut her in the face with a stone. She pleaded guilty to the charge of being drunk and disorderly, saying it was the earnest way. The reputation given her by the police was rather unsavory, while her past record in the city court was not of the best. The Judge fixed the penalty at $10 or thirty days in jail.

With trembling fingers, the woman took a solitary dollar bill out of a little purse. "Take that," she sobbed, "and I'll get the rest from Jimmy this noon." The Judge explained that that was against the rules of the court and ordered McCue to look her up until "Jimmy," who is her husband, could be found.

She had been sobbing softly but, at the Judge's words, she buried her face in her hands and moaned, "Don't lock me up! Oh, please don't lock me up." As Officer McCue started to lead her away, the moan changed to a scream and she struggled wildly to escape. As gently as possible, the officer half dragged and half carried her to the cell. Then followed shrieks and screams, and even in the court room she could be heard kicking, scratching and beating the walls of her cell. In her rage, she again tore her clothing off. She quieted down after a time only to renew her screams at intervals.

Her husband paid her fine this afternoon and she was released.

Litigation May Result.

Council John A. Frech has reported to the Somerset County Board of Chosen Freeholders that in the matter of the application of the Hunterdon County Board to the Supreme Court to compel the Somerset Board to join them in erecting a bridge at the county line near Riverside, that Justice Gummere had decided that the Somerset Board could only be compelled to fill in the approach leading to the proposed bridge. This decision was made in face of the report of the surveyor that both the approaches and the bridge were outside of the county line. By a provision in Justice Gummere's decision the Somerset Board is afforded an opportunity to plunge into a costly litigation over the affair.

Fair and Lawn Party.

The lawn party and fair held on the lawn adjoining St. Joseph's church on Manning avenue last evening was a success, both from a financial standpoint and otherwise. The lawn was prettily decorated and illuminated with Chinese lanterns, flags and other pretty things, and the several tables and stands were well patronized during the evening. The total receipts have not yet been figured up, but it is safe to say that a snug sum will be realized from the fair and lawn party.

—The 35th Reg't, New Jersey Volunteers, will hold a reunion at Flemington on Labor Day.

C. E. CONVENTION PLANS

THE '96 COMMITTEE AND REPRESENTATIVES FROM SOCIETIES MEET.

Reports Made of Work Accomplished and Plans Laid for Future Work—Sunday Afternoon Vesper Service Also.

Amid the interest in the numerous events that promise to make this an important year for Plainfield, preparations for the big State Christian Endeavor convention, to be held here October 7-9, are steadily going ahead. The chairmen of the '96 committees and representatives from fifteen societies in Plainfield, New Market, Dunellen and Oak Tree, held a meeting at the Y. M. C. A. building last night and reports regarding the preparations for the convention were listened to. W. E. MacClymont, chairman of the music committee, reported that the leaflets to be used at the convention by the choir would be here in time for the next rehearsal of the choir, Thursday evening at the First Presbyterian church. It is hoped that all who can sing at all, no matter whether members of the Christian Endeavor society and the church or not, would attend the next rehearsal. The finance committee told that the different societies were at work raising their share of the necessary funds and that all looked bright.

The assignment cards were distributed. They are to be given to all the members of the local Endeavor societies to be filled out by them and returned, telling how many delegates and under what conditions they can entertain them.

The evangelistic committee reported that they are preparing to hold evangelistic meetings at the factories, shops, Children's Home and other like places during the Convention, at which time portions of the choir will assist in the singing. The other chairmen reported progress in their various lines, and then followed an informal discussion on various topics relating to the Convention.

President E. E. Anthony, of the Local Union, presided and the meeting opened with a short prayer service in which nearly everyone took part. The meeting closed with prayer by Mr. Bogardus, of Dunellen. About twenty-six were present.

Some Sunday afternoon before the Convention at 5 o'clock an open air vesper service will be held, probably in the City Park. The choir will assist and sing some of the songs from the Convention Leaflet.

An Invitation Accepted.

The meeting of Franklin Council, No. 41, J. O. U. A. M., held last evening, was an unusually large one. There were present delegations from Pioneer Council, Bound Brook; Central Council, Westfield; and Winfield Scott Council, Elizabeth. The latter council extended an invitation to Franklin Council to attend exercises in connection with the presentation of a flag to a public school in Elizabeth on Labor Day. The invitation was accepted. The excursion committee made their report and the members were much gratified to learn that $150 had been realized as profit. The council received two propositions for membership and the rest of the evening was devoted to speechmaking and a general good time.

Getting in Shape For the Campaign.

The Republican managers in this city, since they have lost by death, Hon Elias R. Pope, the acknowledged leader of the party in city and vicinity, are now at a loss to know just who to name as his successor. The Hon. Alexander Gilbert, Harry G. Runkle and others are named for the position, but as yet no definite action has been taken. The Republicans are making arrangements for a ratification meeting to be held at an early date, but as yet their plans are not consummated It will probably be held on Thursday evening of next week.

Scrap at Fanwood.

On the complaint of Edmund Verity, of East Front street, George Lyon, of Fanwood, was arrested yesterday and taken before Judge Mosher on a charge of assault. It appears that on Wednesday evening the two men met at Scotch Plains and during the evening the two indulged in a fight. Verity got the worst of the encounter, and in consequence complained of Lyon. The latter went before Judge Mosher and waived examination. He was held in the sum of $100 to await the action of the grand jury.

Selling Him Out to Satisfy a Judgment.

Constable George Stewart, of Washingtonville, yesrerday sold the goods levied on by John P. Wolff, as told in The Press at the time. The cause was an action brought by Wolff against David Faulkner, and the goods levied on by Constable Stewart consisted principally of machinery, farming utensils, etc. The amount of the claim was $32 and costs, rendered in Justice Crosley's court some three weeks ago.

THE PARSON A PUGILIST

A COLORED MINISTER BECOMES OBSTREPEROUS AT THE STATION.

Refused to be Quiet at the Suggestion of an Officer of the Same Complexion and Finally Lands on Ed Martin's Jaw.

There was quite a crowd loafing at the lockup this morning awaiting the arrival of City Judge DeMeza. But with the Judge came a more interesting couple. There was Chief Grant and he was hustling along a very short colored man surmounted by a very high silk hat. The prisoner was wildly expostulating, while the Chief kept a firm grasp of his arm. Bringing up the rear were Special Officer Edward Martin and his brother Tom.

In a few moments the crowd filed into the stuffy little court room and the anxious little colored man was brought before the bar.

He explained that he was Rev. A. H. Chase, of Whitewater, Wis., aged thirty-six years, who is at present conducting the colored Methodist camp meeting near Netherwood. The ministerial cut of his clothing supported his claim.

Then Ed Martin, who appeared a trifle excited, explained that this man had been talking very loud at the North avenue station, and had said that all Plainfield's colored pastors were ignorant, and finally, when Martin told him to keep still, used his fist on the side of Martin's jaw and swore. Martin then threw him down when Chief Grant appeared. Tom Martin's account was the same with slight variations and then the reverend gentleman was given a chance to talk for himself, which he had been vainly attempting to since the trial began.

He declared that Martin misrepresented his statements and he gave his real meanings. He stated that Martin had become very officious and had thrown him down. He denied having sworn. Chief Grant stated that Chas. H. Lyman, who had seen the racket, had told him that Martin was at fault.

The Judge decided that there had been trouble of some kind, declared Chase guilty and suspended sentence.

RUNAWAY IN A CROWDED STREET.

No One Was Hurt, However, and Little Damage Was Done.

There was plenty of excitement on Park avenue yesterday afternoon shortly before five o'clock when a runaway horse, with a delivery wagon attached, made his appearance and it seems almost a miraculous that no was injured. The wagon belonged to Demarest & Son, the grocer, and the driver was James Daly. He was just turning from Manning avenue into Somerset street when some boys asked for a ride. Daly refused and the lads began yelling and waving their hats. This frightened the horse and he ran up Somerset street. Daly pluckily hung to the reins and succeeded in guiding the frightened creature through the crowd of wagons. At the corner of Somerset and Front streets, the horse turned suddenly, throwing the wagon into a hitching post, and snapping it. The animal then turned into Park avenue and, with many narrow escapes, ran as far as Eighth street when Daly brought him down to a trot and a man caught him by the head. The only damage to the rig was the breaking of the breeching strap.

Growing in Interest.

The open air meetings which have been conducted by Dr. Chase and Rev. Egerton at Netherwood for a week or two past, are growing in interest. On Sunday there will be a rally, when Dr. Chase will deliver one of his fine lectures on "The Habits and Customs of the Natives of Africa." He will give interesting details of the habits and customs of the African race, and tell of some most thrilling adventures he has been an eye-witness to. There will be three services, morning at 11, afternoon at 3 and evening at 8 o'clock.

The Preacher Evangelist.

Rev. Arthur Crane, Plainfield's evangelist, will occupy the pulpit of the First Baptist church Sunday morning and evening, is becoming one of the country's well known evangelist. In the South, from where he has just returned, he earned the title of the preacher-evangelist. Mr. Crane's morning theme will be "Religion, Real and Counterfeit;" in the evening he will speak on "The true centre of the World." In the afternoon he is engaged to address a union meeting in Rahway.

An Evening of Euchre.

The Misses Fleming gave a charming euchre party, Wednesday, at their home on Park avenue. About twenty-five were present. Euchre and a social chat made the evening seem very short while the serving of dainty refreshments made a pleasant interuption. The first prizes were won by by Miss Mary Finch and F. Kirchoff.

AN AUSPICIOUS OPENING

MUSIC HALL OPENED BY THE PRODUCTION OF THE COTTON SPINNER.

Under the New Management of Ball and Willey the Attendants Greatly Pleased—Creditable Performance Given.

No theatrical season in this city in recent years has been commenced under more favorable circumstances for the management and public than was the opening of Music Hall last night. To many who have been patrons of the theatre in the past—and have been accustomed to accept the same condition of the house season after season until they expected it as a matter of course—the general air of neatness and order came as a pleasant revelation. Those who had not been there often before sat back in their chairs with a satisfied demeanor, and if it is to be judged by an absence of scowls and words of criticism, their opinion was one of approval. The audience was large and representative.

Before the curtain arose on the first act, Mr. Rich, of the firm of lessees of the theatre, made a little speech to the audience from the stage, in which he promised a season of good things in a dramatic way for Plainfield. He referred to the fact that many poor attractions were presented in Music Hall last season, but not because of their selection. Assuming the management of the house just as the season opened, he said they were compelled to fulfill many contracts that had been made by men not experienced in the business. But this season he promised good attractions from start to finish. He paid a graceful tribute to the ability of Messrs. Ball and Willey, the new local managers, and retired amid the plaudits of the audience.

With a wealth of scenic effects and capable acting "The Cotton Spinner" was produced for the first time in a creditable manner. It was written by Scott Marble, a well-known melodrama author. The programme conveyed the information that the characters and story of the play were taken from real life as viewed by Mr. Marble in Georgia. Typical as it was of the cotton belt, it struck the popular chord of the audience and received plenty of applause as the climaxes at the end of each act were worked out with clever dramatic skill. The plot of the piece has already been published in The Press, so it is needless to reiterate it at this time. The principal role is "Heath Honlore," a character peculiar to the South. Born without prestige and reared without education, he made his way up the rounds of the ladder of success till he became the principal storekeeper in his native town by sheer force of character. He was aggressive and honest, and yet a diplomat and a plotter. In a word, the character exemplified "the end justified the means." The role was impersonated with force and realism by P. Aug. Anderson. Albert Lando as "Godfrey Harding," the mill owner, acted the part of the man whose past always blighted all pleasure of the future, but he lacks energy in his gestures and action. Arthur Sprague was a villianious villian whose plots for ruin were balked until in the last act his wrongdoings culminated in his utter rejection by those whom he had inveigled into the idea, by suavity and deception, that nothing but honor was his motive. Paul Menifee, as "Jack Perry," honest but poor, portrayed the character with heroic effect. The part of Owen Meech, as "Timey Corser," was a difficult one, but he went through it in the methodical manner in which its counterpart in life in the Cracker State lives, and pleased the audience immensely.

Miss Eileen Moretta played the emotional character, with a good conception of dramatic effect. Miss Alice Trudelle, as "Randy," had a character that was popular with the audience, because it was new to the stage, and was portrayed in a quaint and odd spirit. "Sukey," the homeless waif, was acted in a pleasing way by Miss Jennie Wyatt. The rest of the characters were well acted.

The scenery and mechanical effects were designed and built by Lafayette W. Searey. They are extremely realistic, the explosion of the cotton mill being especially graphic. The music was furnished by George Rogers. Between the first and second acts William Bartow rendered a pleasing cornet solo.

Less Work in the Central Car Shops.

It is rumored among business men in Elizabeth that the Central Railroad shops next month will be run four days a week and that nine hours will constitute a day's work. Many men have been discharged the past month and the working force is smaller now than for years. It is also rumored that the bosses wages will be cut 10 per cent.

READY TO GREET LI

The Aged Chinese Viceroy Due at New York To-day.

DISPATCH BOAT DOLPHIN IN WAITING

Gen. Ruger, Representing the President, and the Chinese Minister to Washington Will Go Down the Bay To Meet Him.

New York, Aug. 28.—All this morning those having in charge the reception of Li Hung Chang, who is aboard the American line steamer St. Louis, which is due to arrive this afternoon, were very busy individuals, completing the few remaining details. While everything is being carried on in a systematic way, there is beneath the surface considerable suppressed excitement, and this is particularly so among the Chinese merchants and fellow countrymen of Li Hung Chang, who make their headquarters in Chinatown. Down at the office of Consul Sze everything was bustle and confusion. Minister Yang Yu, who arrived from Washington yesterday, was astir early in the morning. He drove to the consul's house, where he met Gen. Ruger, commander of the Department of the East, who will also have absolute charge of all arrangements, naval and military, on the route which Li Hung Chang will take during his stay in this country. Gen. Ruger will utilize the Dolphin to go down the bay and meet the viceroy. He will take with him the Chinese minister to the United States, the consul of this city and his staff, and one or two other eminent countrymen. Consul-General Sze will also be in the party. Ex-Secretary Foster, who was Li Hung's advisor during the peace negotiations with Japan, also called early at the Chinese consul's house to await reporting of the steamer. He will accompany the reception committee. At the Waldorf the quarters engaged for the Chinese statesman and his suite are all in readiness to receive him. They consist of the parlor suite and comprise fifty rooms. The troops and cavalrymen who are to escort Li Hung Chang to the hotel after he lands from the steamer, left Fort Hamilton early this morning for this city. If it is decided to take the visitor off the steamer at quarantine, he will probably be landed at the battery or some up town dock, otherwise he will go ashore at the American line pier. From the battery the journey up Broadway would be a magnificent sight for the old viceroy. The programme for his entertainment while here, as previously published in these dispatches, has been somewhat extended. President Cleveland will receive Li Hung Chang at the home of William C. Whitney, Fifth avenue and Fifty-seventh street, to-morrow. In the evening he will attend a banquet at the Waldorf hotel by New York business men. A visit to the tomb of Gen. Grant is the only event now set for Sunday, while on Monday he will go to West Point on the Dolphin to witness the cadets' manouvres. President Cleveland will probably accompany him on this trip. Returning he will review the warships in the harbor. The members of the chamber of commerce will give him a luncheon at the Merchants' club on Tuesday, and in the evening his own countrymen will give him a dinner at Delmonico's. In the afternoon, after the luncheon at the Merchants' club, the visitor will be escorted by a squad of mounted police to the north side of Union square, where a stand is to be placed at his service. From it at 4 o'clock he will review the parade of 400 foot police and a mounted squad of fifty men, followed by patrol wagons and ambulances. Following the police will came 200 white-suited street sweepers. The fire department is not expected to parade, but a false alarm of fire will be sent in and the runs made past the stand, so that Li can see how the Americans move when they are in a hurry. Brooklyn will be visited on Wednesday, and after luncheon at the Union League club Li will be driven through Prospect park. He will review the Seventh regiment Wednesday night. The above is the programme so far agreed upon.

Moores Asked To Resign.

Chicago, Aug. 28.—A rumor is current that the Moore brothers, who have been prominent in connection with the bull movement collapse in Diamond Match stock and the closing of the stock exchange, would be asked to resign their position J. H. Moore, as first vice-president, and W. H. Moore, as second vice-president, to make room for P. D. Armour and George M. Pullman, the largest individual holders of Diamond Match stock.

Spain Not Short of Money.

Madrid, Aug. 28.—The Epoca says that, in consequence of the adoption by the chamber of the bills providing for the farming of the tobacco monopoly and the leasing of the Almaden silver mines, the government has sufficient resources with which to continue the prosecution of the campaign against the insurgents in Cuba. Therefore the raising of a loan has been postponed.

Connecticut Summer League.

New Haven, Conn., Aug. 28.—The Connecticut Summer league held their annual convention at Savin Rock yesterday, with an attendance of about 300 from all parts of the state.

Taunton, Mass., Public Building.

Washington, Aug. 28.—Bids were opened yesterday for the interior finish work of the Taunton, Mass., public building. A. W. Kleinecke of Chicago at $15,864 was the lowest bidder.

HEIR TO A FORTUNE.

A Poor Philadelphia Widow Said To Have Fallen Into Luck.

Philadelphia, Aug. 28.—A published story says Mrs. Mota Jansen, a poor widow aged 36 years, has been notified that she is a principal heir to a fortune estimated at $15,000,000. Mrs. Jansen is a descendant of Johannes Witthe, a German, who died in 1799, and who three years prior to his death left his fortune of 15,000,000 guilders in trust to the Holland government for the purpose of founding a school for orphan children. Witthe stipulated that after a century should elapse the principal should be divided among his descendants. Mrs. Jansen said to-day: "Mrs. Wilhelmina Hausen, who is one of the heirs to the estate, started to regain the money from the Holland government about fourteen years ago. Her lawyes has now won her case, and the money will be turned over to the heirs next spring. It will be divided among Mrs. Hansen, who lives in Copenhagen; Mrs. Peter Larsen, my cousin, who lives at 377 First street, Brooklyn, N. Y.; William Monk, another cousin, of 33 Nevins street, Brooklyn; Mrs. Elizabeth Moeller, my sister, of Copenhagen, and myself. If there are any other relatives to share our inheritance I do not know them." Mrs. Jansen further said that the fortune had increased from 15,000,000 guilders at the time of Witthe's death to 65,000,000 guilders—about $15,000,000.

MID-AIR PHOTOGRAPHS.

Views Taken of Boston by Cameras Supported by Kites.

Boston, Aug. 28.—The mid-air kite photographs of Boston taken by W. A. Eddy of Bayonne, N. J., were developed yesterday afternoon. Of the first twelve films seven were successful, giving distinct views at a great height of the Common, Beacon street, Commonwealth avenue, Charles river and the outlying suburbs. Mr. Eddy estimates that in one of the views the camera was at the moment of exposure fully 1,500 feet above the pavement. Of the five photographs taken Wendesday three failed owing to a defect in the camera shutter, but two good views of the central part of the city of Tremont and Washington streets were secured. Owing to light winds more than three days were required to complete the experiment. The kites used were six and seven feet in diameter, and during the experiments from four to eight of these kites were required to support the camera, depending upon the strength of the wind. The simultaneous temperature observations to be compared with those at Blue Hill observatory will be continued to-day and to-morrow.

GOLD COMING IN.

An Aggregate of $9,500,000 Now on the Way from Europe.

Washington, Aug. 28.—The treasury gold reserve at the opening of business to-day had declined to $101,339,174. Yesterday's withdrawals at New York were $99,700. The mail advices from San Francisco, which are a week late, show that the withdrawals there last week were of $400,000, and this figure has been the average withdrawal there for some time. The treasury was advised that $5,000,000 in gold had been engaged in Europe for export to the United States. This, with former engagements of gold, swells the aggregate now on the way here to $9,500,000.

More Gold on the Way Here.

London, Aug. 28.—The Bank of England has raised its minimum selling price for bar gold to 77s. 11d. per ounce. The selling price of eagles has been lowered to 76s. 7d. per ounce. More gold for America left the bank yesterday, mostly eagles. Yesterday's export of gold from the Bank of England was practically all for the United States.

Adah Richmond Takes an Appeal.

Boston, Aug. 28.—Adah Richmond, the actress, has taken an appeal from the decision of the court allowing the will of the late John Stetson, jr. In her claim the appellant represents that she is "Adah Stetson" of the city of New York, and "that she is the widow of John Stetson, jr.," and is interested in his estate.

GLEAMS OF IRISH HUMOR.

Funny Remarks Popped Out by Witty Natives.

"You should get your ears lopped, Brian," said a "smart" tourist to an Irish peasant whom he was quizzing; "they're too large for a man." "An' bedad," replied the Hibernian, "I was just thinkin' yours would want to be made larger; sure they're too small for an ass."

"Barney" was a noted car driver at a well-known Irish watering place. He held that the "salt wather" was vastly improved by mixture with a "drop of the craythur," but would not commit himself to the opinion that the latter element gained anything by the combination. He sometimes drank more of it "neut" than was wise or well for the father of his weak family. One hot day after a long drive and a liberal fare Barney turned into the best bar in town and asked for "a sprinkle, just to keep down the dust." The proprietor, who would rather have other customers than poor Barney, came in as the latter was raising the glass. "Barney," he said, "I'd rather you wouldn't be drinking, my boy. You know you were sorry for it before, and I suppose you'll be sorry for this, too. "Begorra I might," replied Barney; "but, sure, it's safer to be sorry for takin' it than for not takin' it."

In a certain Irish college the student at his oral examination has to give answers from a pulpit before a board of examiners. Once a student who had no mean opinion of his attainments ascended the pulpit with a rather self-satisfied and hopeful air. The examiner, determined to "lower" him a little, plied him with a series of "stiff" interrogations. Hardly a single correct answer was given, and when his time had expired he descended and returned to his place crestfallen and humiliated. "Now," said the victorious examiner, when he caught the eye of his victim again, "if you had gone up as you came down you'd have come down as you went up."—Westminster Gazette.

Scalloped Potatoes.

One quart of raw, sliced potatoes, two chopped onions, a handful of parsley, two teaspoonfuls of salt and one tablespoonful of butter. Butter a deep dish and put in a layer of potatoes (about an inch), sprinkling with salt, pepper, butter, onion and parsley, and so continue to the top. Bring a quart of milk to the boiling point, add a large tablespoonful of flour stirred until smooth in a little cold milk or water. Pour over the potatoes and bake in a hot oven until tender.—Good Housekeeping.

Impressionist.

"What accomplishment has Della Ware got that fits her for the stage?"

"She is an impressionist weeper."

"Indeed?"

"She can run the gamut from the fall-from-a-wheel cry to the acute anguish caused by an ice cream disappointment."—Buffalo Times.

Losing Flesh

You naturally lose flesh in the summer and running down is so easy. You get a little weaker each day without hardly noticing it. There is loss of appetite, headache, weakness of the muscles, disturbed sleep, weakness of memory, and these are the beginning of nervous prostration. Iron and tonics and bitters may afford some temporary relief, but what you need is a food for body, brain and nerves.

Scott's Emulsion

of Cod-liver Oil with the Hypophosphites, furnishes just the nourishment needed for those who are run down and pale and thin and weak. If you lose flesh in summer take Scott's Emulsion now. Don't wait till fall or winter before beginning.

[illegible] him.

Young Mr. Cumauphen, who has one of the cunningest little cream-colored mustaches in the world, so faint and modest that he has to color it in order to establish its identity, called again last evening.

"I've just been dying to see you, Maud," he gushed, soon as he had got his cane through the parlor door.

Maud looked him over with a critically unfavorable eye.

"I see you have," she said, coldly; "there's a lot of it come off on your chin."

And young Mr. Cumauphen was so abashed that he didn't know what to say. But that wasn't anything unusual.—N. Y. Recorder.

NEVER SEEN AT THE NORTH.

Southern Delicacy That Finds No Market This Side of the Line.

Of the many aliments peculiar to the United States that are exported to Europe with entire safety, there is one that has so far baffled the preservative qualities of refrigeration. This is the coquina, a small bivalve found in Florida, the average size of which is less than half an inch long by one-quarter of an inch wide. It is taken from the sand at low tide, its whereabouts being indicated by a small tuft of grass invariably attached to the shell. When employed as food coquina when gathered are placed in perforated boxes and exposed to the action of the waves to remove as much as possible the particles of silt that adhere to them. This, however, is only partly effective. They are boiled, shells and all, in a pot in a little water, which is alone used as the flavoring extract, as the meat contained in the shells is so trifling and of such light consistency that little or none remains after cooking. The resultant liquid after boiling is incorporated in cream or milk for the concoction of a puree of surpassing delicacy. The flavor of the coquina combines that of the scallop, soft clam and oyster. It is a curious paradox that the largest and the smallest of the clams found on the Atlantic coast possess an identical taste. The great quohogues, or sea clams, washed upon our northern sand beaches in storms are in magnificent proportions of the same general shape as coquina. They also make a delightful puree of the same flavor as that imparted by the minute Florida bivalve. Moreover, they are available for other culinary concoctions to a very superior degree. While coquina are never sold in northern markets, the great quohogue is occasionally obtainable. As a rule, it is a delicacy reserved for those who live directly upon the beaches; for, unless these be frozen, the clams so soon as cast upon the shore bury themselves with surprising celerity in the sand. To find some method of transporting coquina from Florida to our northern markets is worthy of effort, inasmuch as their use in the manner described above will offer an epicurean diversion in a field of alimentation that is now somewhat distinguished by monotony and sameness.—N. Y. Sun.

An Idle Youth.

"I think," said Mr. Chaffie, "that Johnnie is getting to be too trifling for anything. He is the laziest boy in town."

"That may be, but he gets up at six o'clock in the morning, I notice," replied Mrs. Chaffie.

"O, he does that so he can have more time to loaf."—Texas Sifter.

THE CRAMPS IN LUCK

Will Win Nearly $400,000 Premium on the Brooklyn.

SHE IS A WONDERFUL CRUISER

Naval Officers Gratified with the Speed Shown by Her, Although She Made No Better Showing Than Was Expected.

Washington, Aug. 28.—Naval officers are gratified with the speed shown by the Brooklyn, although she made no more than was expected of her, and in some quarters an excess of more than two knots of her contract speed was anticipated. As it is, the Cramps win nearly $400,000 premium by the performance, the allowance being $50,000 for each quarter knot or portion thereof over 20 knots. The New York, which is 1,000 tons smaller than the Brooklyn, made 21 knots, clearing $200,000 more than her contract. On the Minneapolis and Columbia the premium was at the rate of $50,000 per quarter knot, and those vessels having made respectively 20.73 and 22.81 knots, the Minneapolis won a $414,600 premium and the Columbia $350,000. The cruiser Olympia, built by the Scotts on the Pacific coast made 21.69 knots on her acceptance trial and gained a premium of $300,000.

BROOKLYN'S TRIAL TRIP.

Develops a Speed of 21 92-100 Knots and Glides Through the Water Smoothly.

Boston, Aug. 28.—The new cruiser Brooklyn on her official trial spin proved herself to be the greatest naval vessel of her class in the world by covering a distance of 83 knots in a continuous run at an average speed of 21 92-100 knots per hour. She still further showed that she is capable of greater speed than 21 92-100, by maintaining an average of 22 9-10 knots during a portion of the run. This latter speed was accomplished in the run back between the third and fourth buoys, a distance of about seven knots. She also, between the first and second buoys on the return, reached the high average of 22 48-100. In her run of 83 knots she had a boiler pressure of 160 pounds and an average of 138 revolutions a minute, with a maximum of 140 revolutions. The vessel behaved grandly. The vibration was scarcely felt by those on board at any time during the entire run, though the engines were, as a matter of course, worked to their highest tension throughout.

Those Who Were Aboard.

The official naval inspection board were Commodore Dewey, Capt. Picking, Capt. Cook, Chief Engineer Stivers, Commander Davis, Naval Constructor Hanscom, Lieut.-Commander Wood, Lieut.-Commander Schroeder, Lieut. Staunton, Ensigns Deskigner and Skittel The junior line and engine officers who assisted the board in taking observations were Chief Engineers Stivers, Ford, Bayley, Eaton and Edwards. Assistant Engineers Parks, Sittle, Smith, Kaemmerling, McAlpin, Theiss, Leopold, Day, Herbert, Ryan, Morris and Wells. Capt. R. W. Sargent was in command of the vessel during her run, and in addition to President Charles H. Cramp and superintending engineer Edward S. Cramp, the other active representatives of the builders were chief constructing engineer N. P. Towne, chief engineers John Patterson and Nelson John and a crew of about 200, of whom at least 150 were firemen and engineers.

HAWAII'S FUTURE.

Minister Willis Said To Have Propositions To Submit to Dole.

San Francisco, Aug. 28.—The steamer Alameda, from Honolulu August 20, brings advices that Minister Willis has resumed his duties. It is rumored his recent visit to the United States was for the purpose of conferring with President Cleveland on the annexation policy. As the result of the conference it is said that Willis was empowered to enter into negotiations for either annexation, a monarchical form of government with Kaiulani on the throne, or an American protectorate, the choice of either form of government to be left to the vote of the people. Minister Willis made a formal call on the government soon after his return to the city. Nothing definite will be known regarding Willis' instructions until the return of President Dole, who is on the island of Maui at present.

Tin Plate Association Dissolved.

Pittsburg, Aug. 28.—The Tin Plate Manufacturers' association has been dissolved. The association was made up of all the tinplate manufacturers in the country except firms in the remote districts. The withdrawal recently of the American Tin Plate company of Elwood, Ind., and its fight with the Amalgamated association, which ended in defeat, are among the causes of the break.

QUIET AGAIN REIGNS

The Constantinople Ottoman Bank Rioters Surrender.

OFFICIAL REPORT OF THE TROUBLE.

France Will Hasten Another Warship to the Turkish Capital—No Europeans Injured During the Bloody Scenes at the Bank.

Paris, Aug. 28.—As a result of the attack on the Ottoman bank in Constantinople by rioters on Wednesday last the French government has decided to at once send a gunboat to the Turkish capital, although a dispatch received by the managers of the Ottoman bank here from the directors of the bank at Constantinople says that the rioting is over. Official dispatches received here from Constantinople say that the French charge d'affaires there has installed a guard of sailors from the French guardship La Fleche, at the French embassy as a measure of precaution. The official dispatches also give a detailed account of the riots. The attack, which took place at 1:30 o'clock in the afternoon, was made by a score of men armed with revolvers and bombs. When they invaded the bank they killed a number of gendarmes who were on guard. The employes of the bank fled to the quarters occupied by the tobacco syndicate, adjoining the bank. The invaders mounted the roof of the building, and from the open windows fired at the police below. The police returned the fusilade in a vigorous fashion and several persons were killed and wounded. The riot then became general. Shops were sacked and bazaars invaded, and the wildest excitement prevailed throughout certain quarters of Constantinople. The officials of the bank say that none of the staff was injured during the rioting, and that the bank was not robbed. A bomb was exploded in Constantinople near the Galata guard house. Many soldiers were killed and wounded. One report says that there is no doubt that the movement was revolutionary in plan and scope; that it had its origin at the secret meetings of the Huntchagists, an Armenian revolutionary society.

Rioters Surrender.

Constantinople, Aug. 28.—The party of rioters who forced their way into the bank have surrendered and are lodged in prison. No Europeans were injured during the firing.

CHAMBERLAIN'S VISIT.

Said To Be Purely of a Family Affair—Surprise in England.

London, Aug. 28.—The news that Joseph Chamberlain left Liverpool Wednesday for New York came as a complete surprise last night to every one outside of his family circle. An attempt was made in some quaters today to find political reasons for the visit. It was suggested that Ambassador Pauncefote before leaving London for Paris intimated that a meeting between the British minister and Secretary Olney might at this moment remove the last vestige of difficulty in the Venezuelan affair. Mr. Chamberlain himself intimated that his visit was a purely family affar. He forbade any previous intimation to the press. It is believed, however, that he would not avoid a friendly chat with President Cleveland and Secretary Olney on pending questions. His absence indicates forcibly that the feeling of alarm is completely removed from American and South African affairs.

International Bowling League.

Brooklyn, N. Y., Aug. 28.—The annual meeting of the International Bowling league will be held at the new headquarters of the Brooklyn club, Friday, September 4, at noon. The adoption of a consitution and by-laws and schedule of games to be played during the season of 1896 and 1897 will take up most of the delegates' time at the session. President Floss of Buffalo will preside.

Canal Contract Awarded.

Albany, Aug. 28.—Superintendent George W. Aldridge of the state department of public works opened the bids for the first piece of work under the $9,000,000 scheme for the improvement of canals. Jersey Game Laws.

Camden, N. J., Aug. 28.—The game wardens in this vicinity are making strenuous efforts to stop the illegal shooting of rail and reed birds, which this year are included in the closed season until September 1. Until this year the season opened on August 25, and the change is not generally known. The law was changed to conform to the Pennsylvania law.

The Newark News says that there is some talk of ex-Judge W. A. Coddington being nominated for Senator by the Democrats.

Senator Foster M. Voorhees has authorized the Elizabeth Journal to state that he is in no sense a candidate for State Senator in Union county, but that if the nomination comes to him practically unanimously he will accept it. This is considered a very important decision in view of the fact that Union county and the Eighth Congressional district have unanimously supported Ernest P. Ackerman, of Plainfield, for Presidential elector on the National Republican ticket. Senator Voorhees has not heretofore made any formal declaration on this subject, but at the earnest solicitation of his many friends throughout Union county he has finally consented to make this formal announcement.—Journal.

On account of the stockholders refusing to support the Somerset County Agricultural Society it is said that no fair will be held there this coming fall. If this be true, it is to be regretted. The Somerset county people should be represented in the circuit of county fairs, and while it has not been a paying investment in years gone by it should and could be made so. All that is needed is a little push and energy on the part of the stockholders to make the annual fair a success, and situated as the place is, almost directly on the lines of the New Jersey Central, Philadelphia and Reading, Port Reading, and Lehigh Valley railroads, it would undoubtedly attract a large attendance.

A slot-machine for the automatic delivery of packages of medicine is a western innovation which may require the active intervention of boards of health. There are twelve slots, each for some disease with which the adventurous customer may think he is afflicted. The machine, of course, can only furnish the medicine, and each patient must make a diagnosis for himself. The medicine may be all right, if the diagnosis is properly made, but the man who is his own doctor may have a fool for a patient. For dyspepsia and stomach troubles the machine furnishes a little package which contains soda-mint tablets, charcoal tablets, and a little bottle of rhubarb and soda—a well-known medicine, in use in all the dispensaries and clinics in the world. There are specifics also for alcoholism, liver complaints, cough and bronchitis, pain and rheumatics, etc. The coin needed to work the machine is a quarter.

A PERFECT FOOD FOR INFANTS

LIVER CLOGGING.

WHEN YOUR STOMACH CLOGS YOUR LIVER SEE TO YOUR DIGESTION.

Not one person in a thousand knows that the cause of billiousness is the clogging of the liver by the poisons of indigestion. Nor that the only proper cure for it is a tonic to aid the stomach.

But modern medicine declares the truth of it. And the Shakers have proved it by the wonderful success of their Shaker Digestive Cordial.

One of the most important uses of the liver is to arrest and destroy all poisons which try to find their way into the blood. When it's clogged, it can't do this.

Undigested food ferments and putrifies in the stomach, and the poisons of putrefaction clog and paralyze the liver, after which they find their way into the blood.

Here is the true explanation of all the distressing disorders and complications caused by indigestion.

Shaker Digestive Cordial is the only tonic cordial which aids the stomach in a natural way to digest its food. By this means, it cures indigestion, restores the liver, and frees the body from poison and disease.

Headache, dizziness, neuralgia, mental depression, weakness, bad taste, fever, flatulence, constipation, loss of appetite, anæmia, rheumatism, and many other disorders are relieved and cured by Shaker Digestive Cordial.

All druggists. Ten cents for a trial bottle.

CAPTURED A LUNATIC.

A Philadelphia Man Had Been Wandering With His Mind Wholly Blank.

Rumors had been reaching here for several days of a crazy man who had been seen on what is known as the Island Farm, situated at the junction of the Raritan and Millstone rivers, near Weston. It was stated that the man was not clothed and that he avoided every one. The authorities yesterday took the matter in charge, and Policeman Sebring, of Bound Brook, went over to the island and captured the wild man.

He found the man in a terrible physical condition. He was unable to make any resistance, and after being properly clothed was brought to Somerville and lodged in the County Jail. He says his name is George L. Horner, that he resided until last month at No. 910 Cherry street, Philadelphia, and was in the glass business at No. 626 Arch street. On July 25 his wife, to whom he was greatly devoted, died. Disheartened at his loss, he sold out his business and disposed of all his household goods. He left his home with the last vanload of goods, and since then his mind has been a perfect blank.

He was taken to the hospital at Somerville yesterday afternoon and is being looked after by the Order of Foresters, of which he is a member. He is a middleaged German, apparently well educated.

A LIVELY RUNAWAY.

In Which the Young Driver Received Injuries and Goes to the Hospital.

An exciting runaway occurred this noon on Plainfield avenue near the railroad bridge. Peter Galbraith, aged fourteen years, was driving a horse belonging to Galbraith & Walsh, and just before reaching the bridge the horse became frightened and ran away. Galbraith was unable to control the animal and before he realized his danger, he was thrown out of the wagon and sustained a severe injury to his left leg.

The horse continued his journey at a lively gait until he was caught on Front street. Letter-carrier Reville was passing at the time and he assisted young Galbraith to the hospital where he received proper treatment. It was learned that no bones were broken. The accident resulted in the breaking of the harness, but otherwise the damage was slight. The owners of the rig were notified at once and they took charge of the same.

CHAIN AND BALL FOR TRAMPS.

They Are Getting Too Numerous and Too Bold at Rahway.

Acting Mayor Holmes, of Rahway, realizing the necessity of bringing the tramps that invade his district under control, has ordered the arrest of every one found within the city limits and a ball and chain attached to him. They will be put to work on the public streets.

A tramp went to the home of Thomas M. Martin, on Commerce street, Wednesday and demanded something to eat from the servant. As she handed the man food, he demanded hot coffee, and became abusive when told there was none. While the young woman was trying to secure a policeman the tramp escaped.

Now They Are Happy.

John Peterson, of East Sixth street, was arrested Wednesday on a complaint made by his wife which charged him with assault and battery. The defendant was arraigned before Judge Mosher, but as the evidence was weak, Peterson was released. Lawyer Miller represented the defendant, and he, with Judge Mosher, succeeded in effecting a reconciliation between the man and his wife.

—The Union County Democratic Executive Committee are in session this afternoon.

—The young horse owned by Addis & Son, the North avenue plumbers, ran away this afternoon from the yard adjoining VanZandt's feed store on Park avenue. The only damage was the breaking of the harness. A. W. Brown, the barber, caught the horse on North avenue.

—Word has been sent to Rev. Cornelius Schenck in the Adirondack Mountains asking him to come home and preach the funeral sermon of the late Miss Huff, who died at her home on Plainfield avenue yesterday. The funeral will be held Sunday afternoon. She was a member of Trinity Reformed church.

Why is It,

if catarrh is a blood disease, as some claim, that physicians frequently advise change of air and climate to those suffering? Catarrh is a climatic affection, and nothing but a local remedy or a change of climate will cure it. FOR A JUNE WEDDING.

What Is Permissible in Wedding Gowns and What Is Not.

A Pretty Gown for the Bride's Mother—Green and White for Wedding Colors—The Most Appropriate Lingerie Pure White.

[COPYRIGHT, 1896.]

Brides have a way of blossoming forth in June of each year, in spite of advanced women. Youth and springtime have too much in common for our maids to consider single blessedness seriously, and as soon as balmy days appear they turn from musty books and political questions to thoughts of bridal array.

All the girls will not be married this June, it is true, but all who will not be brides expect to be bridesmaids. Heads are in a whirl from morning till night, thinking out color schemes, and novel ideas for the ceremony, and pros and cons of the various gowns.

With all this going on, one can expect the girls to read little else but matters pertaining to brides and their gowning. Therefore, we're going to make this a bridal week in fashion hints, telling of the bridesmaids' gowns, of the bride's mother, of the bride's lingeries, of traveling dress, of reception gowns, culminating in the bridal gown itself.

Since there will be many more bridesmaids than brides, we'll start with the bridesmaids' gowns. The wedding we intend to portray will have a color scheme of green and white. The church will be profusely decorated in palms and asparagus fern, with white carnations.

Four bridesmaids will attend the bride. Their gowns will be of white organdie, in princess cut. Corselets of embroidery open in a V in front, revealing a large expanse of softly-gathered organdie. The puff sleeves end at the elbow, under a tight-fitting band of embroidery, and are worn with white mousquetaire gloves.

The most charming part of these gowns will be the V's of flounced green chiffon which are inserted at the foot of the skirt in fascinating manner. Ruches of the chiffon also cross the shoulders, and the collar is made of the same material.

The large hats are of white straw trimmed with green plumes and white roses. To carry out quaintly old-fashioned effect, these hats will be tied under the chin with green ribbons.

White roses and ferns, tied with green and white striped ribbon, will occupy the hands of these maids.

Next in order we will take up the gown for the bride's mother. This should portray dignity, and be very elegant. Yet it should be very quiet in appearance, a mingling of sorrow because her daughter is leaving, and of joy for the happiness of her child.

Again we turn to the wedding of the young woman we have in mind. For her mother a very handsome gown is being designed in gray satin, brocaded with purple thistles.

The skirt is very full, falling in many godets about the back. It is severely plain, not a single ornament marring its graceful sweep.

The bodice is cut somewhat in Louis fashion, and is constructed of plain gray satin. Falling in graceful godets each side the front is a large collar, edged with narrow steel trimming.

The basque skirts are slashed and edged with the same steel trimmings, and turn in front to form elongated revers. Large steel buttons adorn each side, a long steel fringe falling from the lower ones. A narrow belt fastens the jacket about the waist.

The brocaded satin is introduced to form the sleeves, and purple chiffon the vest and collar.

Not the least attractive feature about this costume is the tiny toque of violets and silver aigrettes, fastend under the chin with purple velvet ribbon. It sits charmingly above the silver hair and blooming cheeks of the well-preserved woman who will don it.

Having disposed of the bridesmaids and the bride's mother, let us talk of the bride's gowning. The first to be discussed is her lingerie, which will be as dainty as the present modes and our bride's tastes can make it. It will include a number of dimity sets, a blue, a pink, a yellow and a pale green, for with each gown the color scheme will be carried out in the underwear.

Blue, for true love, will be her favorite, but she will not wear it for the ceremony, as is the fad with many brides to be. She rightly thinks that a bride's gowning for that occasion should suggest nothing but purity, and therefore she will wear nothing but the sheerest white mull, trimmed with dainty lace and bows of white ribbon.

She will wear a short white silk skirt, wide, short knickers of mull trimmed with rows of lace and adorned with a bow at each knee, a chemise-skirt combination reaching to above the tops of the shoes and adorned to match the knickers; a white brocade skirt, with flounces of point de Paris and a corset of the same brocade. Having donned these, she is ready for her ceremonial dress.

The night dress is warranted to capture the heart of every woman, with its jabots of lace about the neck and front, its gathered empire waist and the innumerable bows of blue ribbon, put wherever an excuse could be found for them.

THE BRIDAL COSTUME.

The bride's trousseau will include a gown of watercress-green velours moire, lined with yellow. The yellow satin front is veiled with green chiffon, while gold and jet passementerie adorn the bodice. This bodice, by the way, is made with tight-fitting sleeves having draped puffs to enlarge their appearance at the top.

Another gown is of deep blue-faced cloth, with a vest of scarlet. A hat entirely of Parma violets makes this a very effective costume.

In the traveling dress our bride to be has foresworn that convention which demands that the traveling dress shall be gray. Hers is of a light chocolate canvas, combined with plaid silk in green and yellow. The skirt is quite unique. It is very full, the fullness being mostly on the side gores and the back, with the front quite plain. On the gores each side the front a drapery of passementerie is festooned, similar drapery crossing the front of the bodice at the belt and the bust line. The plaid silk is used in designing the sleeves and for gathered revers on the bodice, which reveal themselves under the broad expanse of canvas collar.

Another smart costume is of gray and white striped silk, made up over turquoise blue, with a bodice of ecru embroidery over blue. The belt and stock for this gown are of grass linen.

Perhaps the prettiest of all the gowns in the trousseau are those for summer evening functions, although the organdies are so dainty, and sheer, and fascinating that they make a close second.

A very rich gown has a skirt of white and green striped silk, with purplish hollyhocks strewn over it. The bodice is one of those bewildering affairs of deep rose chiffon which entangle themselves about one's heart and is finished with a tiny belt of rose satin.

The reception dress, in which our bride will receive after she returns to her home, is of cream brocade, with lavender sprays. The skirt is very full and is made with a front panel of lavender satin, embroidered with pearls and gold thread. Nothing prettier than this could possibly be imagined. The bodice is short and tight fitting, opening in front to reveal a vest of lavender satin, embroidered like the skirt.

The broad revers are of the same material, edged with embroidery. And the most delightful, mist-like lace falls from the revers and shadows the entire front. The same misty lace is draped below the short sleeves and winds its way through their puffs to the shoulder seams.

Having given a few hints regarding the gowns of the trousseau, let us look for a brief period at the bridal costume. That is the most interesting gown. It is for that that the friends of the bride, and the young lady herself, watch and wait with the greatest interest. And when it finally comes home, how its smallest seam is examined.

The first thing for a young woman to learn is not to select dead white. It is frightfully unbecoming, and an ivory tone is much to be preferred. Satin, of course, is the material to be selected.

The wedding gown must always be high necked, and should preferably have long sleeves, although those reaching to the elbow are permissable. Gowns are much adorned, and in compliance with that mode, our bride-to-be is to have hers adorned with much lace and orange blossoms—natural, certainly. The back of the skirt is untrimmed and falls in a rather long train. Lace narrowly trains the front at the foot, and on the side broadens in large V's. A tiny tracery of orange blossoms divides the front into two parts.

The bodice has very long sleeves, with flounces of lace still longer, until they entirely conceal the hand.

A long tulle veil is thrown back over the head, and a small veil is worn, which the maid of honor removes and leaves on the altar rail. Under no circumstances should it be carried away.

POPULAR TIMEPIECES.

Some Facts Concerning the Sale and Production of Open-Faced Watches.

In this country almost everybody carries a watch. Probably nine-tenths of the men, great numbers of women and many young people carry watches. In the best trade of the city many more watches of gold are sold than of silver; of all the wtches sold throughout the country about 25 per cent. are of gold The percentage of gold watches is increasing. The fashionable watch of the day is open-faced. The sale of open-faced watches is increasing, especially in fine watches, but it is increasing also in watches of other grades. Of fine gold watches sold in the city probably two-thirds are now made open-faced. Of all the watches sold in the United States, gold and silver, probably from a quarter to a third are now made open-faced.

The modern watch has for one of its characteristics thinness. A man's watch, which is now made more especially to wear with evening dress and is all the time growing in favor is a plain, thin, open-faced gold watch which takes up but little room in the pocket. Perfect in its simplicity, this watch is at the same time of fine workmanship and great beauty. It sells at $190. A gold watch not so thin nor so finely finished, but a very handsome modern watch and an excellent timekeeper, by the same makers and bearing their name, can be bought in open-face, the case of 18-carat gold, for $65; in double case, for $70. But gold watches and good watches, too, can be bought for very much less than these prices; in fact, there never was a time when watches generally were made in such tasteful shapes, or when they were so good for the money or so cheap as now.

Taking all the grades together, the American production of watches is about 4,000 daily; the importation of watches amounts to about the same number. One might at first wonder what becomes of all these watches. A great number are taken up annually by the new buyers coming into the market for the first time, out of the constant and large increase in the population. Great as the percentage of watch owners now is in this country, that is also increasing. Many immigrants buy watches as soon as they get the money; some men own more than one watch; watches wear out, or their owners lay them aside for a better watch or for one of newer style; watches are lost and destroyed, and when one comes to take all things into consideration it will be seen that the great production of watches may be in large measure easily accounted for.—N. Y. Sun.

WE MIGHT HAVE HAD WINGS.

Man Reduced to Using Legs Because the Earth Was So Attractive.

If the attractions of the earth were less powerful our winged tribes might have received a much greater development. In virtue of the unquestionable principle known as "the struggle for existence," these winged creatures, dominating all others, would have been the strongest. Progress would have been effected along this line. The superior race, the human race, would have been a winged race. These simple considerations, which it may be easy to extend much further, are enough to convince us that our human form is essentially terrestrial, and that the inhabitants of Mars cannot resemble us. They are different.

Upon Mars, for example, one might suppose, without scientific heresy, that the remarkable lightness of their bodies may have developed the winged race more highly in the direction indicated, and that the inhabitants of this planet may have received the privilege of flight.

Does this amount to saying that, for this reason, they must necessarily have the form of birds? No. The bats, are they not mammals which suckle their young? Is it saying, then, that we must imagine them under this form? Not at all. May they not rather be like dragon flies fluttering in the air above the lakes and canals? As to this point we can imagine everything and prove nothing. It is even highly probable that the reality is something absolutely different from all our terrestrial conceptions.

On the one hand the lightness of the Martian beings is favorable to their winged constitution. On the other hand, however, the atmosphere is hardly well fitted to sustain them. But still we recall that terrestrial zoology furnishes instances of birds which are very heavy, such as condors and the vultures, and these are just the ones which fly highest in the most rarified regions of our atmosphere; they have been observed even above the summits of the Himalayas, the Andes and the Cordilleras, at elevations of from 8,000 to 9,000 meters (27,000 to 30,000 feet), where they can still soar freely, thanks to the enormous spread of their wings. Nor must we lose sight of the fact that a human being weighing 70 kilograms (154 pounds) would weigh not more than 26 kilograms (56 pounds) if transported to the globe of Mars.—North American Review.

Col. North's Definition of Luck.

"There is no such thing as luck," said the late Col. North once. "Everybody in the world has chances. Yes everybody, from the working collier who strikes a seam of coal which was never thought of by the mining engineer, to the colliery proprietor who gets information regarding that seam and resolves to work it. What people call 'luck' simply means that a man sees his chance, holds on to it, and at the right moment works it for himself. 'Luck?' Nonsense! 'Luck' is simply the faculty of seizing passing opportunities."—San Francisco Argonaut.

—The title of emperor is of such exalted dignity as to outrank that of royalty. An emperor is the supreme head of countries, some or all of which are governed by kings.

Delicate Dress Goods.

Some gowns are so dainty in the weave, so delicate in tint, that they seem to soil by being looked at—one or two wearings making them unpresentable, NOT USELESS. We make a specialty of cleaning fine fabrics, the more delicate the material, the better the results. Sometimes an accident will ruin a gown, without injuring the texture. We dye them then, sometimes we get a prettier effect than the original color. Fine goods stand redyeing. The finer the material the better the new color. We charge so little for cleaning or dyeing, that even if you are in doubt as to the result, it's worth while to experiment. Want a new evening gown for a dollar or two? THE HARRISON MEETING.

Many Prominent Republicans Present at the Carnegie Hall Rally.

New York, Aug. 28.—Carnegie hall was crowded last night with an audience that had gathered to hear ex-President Harrison discuss the issues of the campaign. The occasion was a republican rally, held under the auspices of the republican state committee. Chauncey M. Depew presided and delivered an address, as did president David T. Hill of the Rochester university. A host of republicans of national repute occupied seats on the platform and in the boxes or were scattered about in the body of the house. Among them were vice-presidential candidate Garrett A. Hobart, chairman Mark A. Hanna, ex-secretary of state John W. Foster, Gov. Lippitt of Rhode island and ex-Postmaster General Wanamaker. Mrs. Harrison, wife of the ex-president, was in attendance, and with a party of friends occupied box 61. Ex-Senator Platt, just from the Saratoga convention, was a prominent figure at the meeting. Ex-President Harrison was the principal speaker of the evening and his address was listened to with much interest and his remarks brought fourth repeated applause.

BRYAN'S BUFFALO MEETING.

Although Fatigued from Traveling He Participates in a Big Reception.

Buffalo, Aug. 28.—A big reception was extended to William J. Bryan last night. It was in fact continuous from the time he reached the Lake Shore station at 3:30 o'clock in the afternoon, after a journey of two hours and a half from Erie, marked by no incidents of interest, until he escaped from the crowd at midnight and went to bed. Few meetings he has addressed since his nomination was so largely attended as at Music hall, where his principal speech was made. From a political standpoint democrats consider it of the greatest importance, for it was the first meeting held in New York to ratify the nominations of Bryan and Sewall with the sanction, nominal, if not actual, of the state democratic organization, and furthermore it was delivered in the home city of President Cleveland. Mr. Bryan spoke at great length, although husky of voice and tired of body. He explained and defended the Chicago platform and spoke principally on the money question.

Powderly's Choice.

Scranton, Pa., Aug. 28.—Former grand master workmen of the Knights of Labor Terrence V. Powderly, when asked last evening who he thought would be elected the next president, said: "I have no doubt that McKinley will be elected. I do not doubt Mr. Bryan's ability or sincerity, but his inexperience and his surroundings are such as should cause the elector to ponder carefully over the probable result of intrusting the business management of this industrial national workshop to his care."

Hill Refuses To Discuss a Rumor.

Saratoga Gold Democrats.

Saratoga, N. Y., Aug. 28.—The gold democrats of this county will hold a convention to-morrow at Ballston to name delegates to the Syracuse convention.

THE CZAR AT VIENNA.

Dined by Emperor Francis Joseph and the Two Monarchs Exchange Courtesies.

Vienna, Aug. 28.—At a dinner at the Hofburg palace last evening Emperor Francis Joseph in proposing a toast to the czar and czarina thanked his imperial visitors for coming to Vienna, which action, his majesty said, furnished a new proof of the friendship which united Russia and Austria. The czar replied, and offered a toast to Emperor Francis Joseph and the empress, thanking them for the reception which had been accorded him and the czarina. At the conclusion of the dinner the imperial party attended a gala performance at the opera. The toilettes and jewels of the ladies and the uniforms and orders of the many officials present made the scene a most brilliant one. During the day the czar gave audience to the Duke of Orleans, head of the house of Bourbon-Orleans.

Jewish Emigrants Barred.

Washington, Aug. 28.—Mavroyeni Bey, the Turkish minister, has sent the following letter to the secretary of state under date of August 23: "The sublime porte has charged me to bring to your excellency's knowledge, for the needful ends, the fact that Israelitish families which had previously emigrated from Russia to the United States were intending to come and establish themselves in Turkey, and that one of them had already arrived at Constantinople. His excellency Tevfix Pasha adds that access to the empire is formally interdicted to Israelitish emigrants."

ONLY SMOKING RUINS

The Sultan of Zanzibar's Palace Entirely Destroyed.

MANY OF THE INSURGENTS KILLED

Marines from the Bombarding Vessels Still Guarding All Roads Leading from the City—No Europeans or Americans Injured.

Zanzibar, Aug. 28.—Nothing but smoking ruins mark the spot where yesterday morning stood the magnificent palace of the sultan of Zanzibar. All roads and avenues of escape from the city are still guarded by detachments of British marines sent ashore from the warships which yesterday bombarded the castle. The work of taking the insurgents prisoners continue. The dead have all been gathered in and the wounded are being cared for. The usurping chieftain, Said Khalid, whose refusal to surrender and quit the palace, where he was intrenched with a strong and heavily armed band of followers, caused the British boats to open fire on the castle, is still at the German consulate, to which place he fled with the commander of his forces, Said Sales, during the bombardment and sought asylum.

Foreigners Sought Safety on Warships.

Many of the British residents boarded the warships lying in the harbor before the bombardment began, all of the ladies taking refuge upon the St. George, the flagship of rear admiral Harry H. Rawson, but a large number of Europeans remained on shore. Most of the rebels stood to their guns pluckily and fought well, though after the first broadside was fired from the warships a number of the defenders of the palace fled to the outskirts of the town, where many robberies were committed. Everybody on board the rebel steamer Glasgow, which was sunk by the British vessels, were rescued by boats from the bombarding ships. There were a large number among them who had been wounded. Several Indian soldiers were killed during the firing. The Thrush was hit sixty-two times and the Racoon sixteen times by shots from the guns of the rebels.

Bombardment of the Palace.

Said Khalid had ample warning of what to expect if he did not surrender. In reply to the last message sent to the palace by Rear-Amiral Rawson informing him that only one hour more would be given him to quit the palace, he said that he and his followers would die rather than give in. About 9 o'clock the flagship signalled the Raccoon, Thrush and Sparrow to beging firing and a moment later the cruiser and the gunboats opened fire with their heavier guns, sending a storm of shot and shell into the palace. The shells tore big gaps in the palace, scattering death and confusion among its defenders. Some of the guns of Said Khalid ashore were dismounted by the shots and the gunners were put to flight. It was not long after the bombardment began when smoke was seen issuing from windows of the palace, indicating that the building had been set on fire by the shells. The British boats continued to rain shot into the castle for forty-five minutes, when it began to tumble in ruins and flames were making fast headway in the work of destruction. Efforts of the marines, who were landed when the flagship signalled to cease firing, to check the flames, were unavailing and the once handsome structure was reduced to ruins.

Insurgent Loss Heavy.

London, Aug. 28.—Later advices from Zanzibar say the loss of Said Kalid's force was heavy, but the exact number of the killed and wounded is not known. The only casualty on the British side was the serious injuring of one seaman. No material damage was sustained by the British war vessels. Hamoud, a cousin of the late sultan, has been proclaimed successor to the sultanate.

HAMID PROCLAIMED SULTAN.

Dispatch from Consul Mohun to the State Department.

Washington, Aug. 28.—The state department has received the following cable dispatch from Consul Dorsey Mohun at Zanzibar: "Khalid bin Bargash refusing to surrender, palace was bombarded by English fleet at 9 o'clock yesterday morning and totally destroyed. Many killed. He took refuge in German consulate. Afterwards Hamid proclaimed sultan. All Americans safe." The state department has no information as to the Americans referred to in Consul Mohun's dispatch. The American trade with Zanzibar is considerable, approximating $1,000,000 annually. The United States buys from them ivory, hides, rubber, gums and cloves, and sells cotton and petroleum. There is no anxiety lest American interests suffer.

Cyclists desiring to join the League of American Wheelmen will be furnished with application blanks and necessary information by addressing the Cycling Department of the Daily Press.

CYCLING COMMENT.

Miss Kitchen, of White's dry goods store, finds much pleasure in riding a new wheel, recently purchased.

Miss Annie Barton, while riding a wheel on East Front street yesterday afternoon, collided with a carriage. The first wheel of the bicycle was wrecked.

Samuel Goff, of Third and Liberty streets, claims he can ride from here to Westfield, a distance of about five miles, in 14 minutes. If he can do it he beats the record on the county roads.

E. H. Bogardus, of Putnam avenue, and F. L. C. Martin, of Park avenue, leave tonight for Jamaica, L. I., from where they will start tomorrow morning on the Evening Telegram century run to Patchogue and return.

Large cracked stone placed on the road between Somerville and Raritan has made the traveling for wheelmen dangerous, and for the past two weeks cyclists have been riding on the sidewalk. Last week Harry A. Smith was arrested for this and taken before Justice Sutphen. Mr. Smith contended that the commissioners had violated a State law and made riding dangerous by throwing large cracked stone on the road, and that he was justified in taking to the sidewalk to avoid risk to life and limb. As the State law imposes a fine of $20 on contractors who neglect to cover such stone with fine stone or earth within one week, the Justice decided that Mr. Smith was right and discharged him.

A young man complains of the nuisance of having to teach woman to ride. Of course he doesn't really have to, but the circumstances are sometimes such that if he did not offer his services he would be thought churlish. "There are occasions," he says, "when it is fun to do this, but usually it is the hardest kind of work. It is really imposing on good nature to have a man take the place of a bicycle instructor, to run up and down a street or road, holding up a woman who may be of considerable weight. I admit it is not as exasperating as teaching a girl to skate, but when we used to do that there were no rinks where there were professional teachers. The employes at the bicycle academies are much more skillful at their business than an amateur, and women should go to them for their first lessons. When they have made a little progress their male friends are glad to aid in putting on the finishing toubhes, but it is not fair to rely solely on the good nature of even brothers."—N. Y. Tribune.

AROUND THE BASES.

Tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 the Murray Hill baseball team will cross bats with the Y. M. C. A. team in this city. It will be remembered that recently the former team administered a stinging defeat to the home team, and the latter will attempt to regain lost honors.

George Rockfellow, of Park avenue, spent a portion of yesterday at Bound Brook after finny victims.

Winfield Philpott, the engineer at the electric light station, is today at the fishing banks with a party of Brooklyn friends on the other end of a fishline awaiting for seabass and flukes to nibble.

Just Missed His Eye.

Mrs. Edward Kline, of Plainfield avenue, appeared before Judge DeMeza this afternoon and made a complaint against Lewis Green, a colored lad, for throwing a stone and striking the face of her son, Barnet. The stone cut quite a gash in the lad's face just under the eye.

BROKE IN HIS OWN HOME

THAT IS WHAT MRS. MONAHAN SAYS HER HUSBAND DID.

He Said That He Was Going to Leave, But She Says That He Returned in the Night—Then Trouble Commenced.

While Patrolman Myers was following his lonely beat in the vicinity of Clinton avenue on the south side of the Central railroad, early this morning about 3 o'clock, he heard a woman's voice breaking the stillness of the early morn. The unseasonableness of the hour led the officer to investigate and he found the owner of the voice on Halsey street near West Third street. From an upper window of a house leaned Mrs. Monahan while below stood her husband, Michael Monahan. She was evidently scolding her husband and in no gentle terms from what the officer heard. As Mrs. Monahan saw the officer, she immediately requested him to lock up her husband who, she declared, was drunk and was acting in a dreadful manner, and promised to appear against him at the city court later in the morning.

It was evident from Monahan's actions that he been drinking so Patrolman Myers arrested him and locked him up.

Mrs. Monahan appeared at the city court this morning, accompanied by her daughter, both of whom appeared very respectable. Monahan appears to be a respectable man. H. B. Reed was present to represent his brother, Assemblyman Reed, who was Monahan's counsel, and asked for an adjournment. The Judge first heard Mrs. Monahan's storv.

She said she has been supporting him for nearly a month and that last night he said he was going to leave. He packed up a few clothes and left. According to her he came back intoxicated some time after midnight and broke into the house. He told her he had come after his things and carried the kitchen table and chairs out into the yard. When he tried to take down the stove and carry it away she put him out of the back door and locked it. Then, according to her version, he tried to get in the front door and broke the glass. Soon after that the policeman appeared. Reed would not allow Monahan to say anything at present, and the trial was set down for a week from tomorrow morning. Monahan was held in $50 bail.

QUIETLY WEDDED.

Marriage of Miss Christina McInness to John Ebesley.

John Eberley, of East Second street, and Miss Christina McInnes were married at 326 East Third street, at 8:30 o'clock last evening. Rev. G. Kennedy Newell, pastor of Hope chapel, was the officiating clergyman. The wedding was almost strictly priate, only seven couples being present. Daniel McInnes, a brother of the bride, was best man and Miss Marguerette McInnes served in the capacity of bridesmaid. The bride was becomingly attired in white albatros, and she carried a bouquet of fragrant white roses. The bridesmaid was similarly attired. The usual wedding feast was served after the ceremony, and the bride and groom took a late train for Newark, where they will spend their honeymoon. Upon their return they will remain with the groom's mother before going to housekeeping. The wedding gifts consisted principally of cut glass and china ware.

CHARGE AGAINST POLICEMEN.

The Case is Being Investigated by City Officials who are Very Reticent.

Two of the well known officers of Plainfield's police force have been charged with unbecoming conduct by two disreputable young women who have been hanging around this city for several days. It is said that an investigation has been started by the city officials but the latter are very reticent in giving any imformation regarding it.

This morning the two young women, Hattie and Sarah Jane Fothengill, were sent to the County jail pending examination. The officers deny the charge and as the reputation of the young women is anything but the best, the opinion seems to be that the charges will not be proven.

Dropped His Watch in the Water.

Fred Hui, the Park avenue tonsorial artist, was angling for bait with a scoop net in the raceway leading to Tier's lake this morning, when he accidentally dropped a valuable watch from his vest pocket into the water. The watch went to the bottom and Mr. Hui made heroic efforts to recover it. But he was unsuccessful, and then Wm. Stewart, of East Front street, ventured into the water, and after a short search brought the watch out.

Skipped With a Wheel.

F. A. Frucht, the West Front street bicycle dealer, is looking in vain for a Vesper wheel he rented a week ago last Monday to Michael Schultz. He thinks that Schultz has disappeared with the wheel and placed the case in the hands of the police this afternoon. Schultz was formerly employed on the sewers.

MURDERED AT DAYBREAK

A Mere Boy Shoots Down a Bedminster Farmer.

DISPUTE OVER WAGES THE CAUSE.

The Murdered Man Was an Englishman, Thirty Years of Age, and Only a Month Ago Was Joined by His Family From the Old Country—Elmer Clawson, Just Out of Teens, Fired the Fatal Shot, Then Jumped on a Bicycle and Rode Away—Hunted Down by a Vigilance Committee and Threatened With Lynching by the Mob—Rescued by a Constable and Taken to the Somerset County Jail.

The little township of Bedminster, Somerset county, was roused from its wonted quiet this morning by the deliberate murder of Harry Hodgett, one of its citizens. The community was horrified by the crime and a body of determined farmers pursued the murderer, captured him and would have lynched him but for the opportune arrival of Constable Thomas Moore, of the township.

Harry Hodgett was a young Englishman of about thirty years of age who came to this country several years ago and finally settled on a farm about seven miles from Somerville and a mile from Pluckamin.

Sometime ago he employed a young man named Elmer Clawson to help on the farm. Hodgett and Clawson did not agree very well together and a dispute arose over the matter of Clawson's pay. The affair ended in Hodgett's English pugnacity getting the better of him and he ordered Clawson off the premises.

During this last summer Clawson, whose stepfather's home is not far from Hodgett's farm, has been employed on a farm near Bernardsville. Hodgett, in the meantime, had saved enough money from his farm to be able to send for his wife and three little children, who have been living in England. A little over a month ago the loved ones arrived and since then until this morning everything has been going well at the Hodgett farm.

Hodgett was out early this morning and at about 6 o'clock was busily employed in harnessing up his horse, expecting to drive to town. He was working in the stable yard at the side of the house when his old farm hand, Clawson, rode up on a bicycle. Clawson is about twenty years of age. He leaned his wheel against a tree and came up to the bars.

The people in the house included Hodgett's family and the servant girl, while a hired man was working around the barn. They heard Clawson's opening remark, which was "How many cows have you got now?"

"Three" was the answer.

Then followed other remarks. It is not known whether Clawson asked for his pay or not but, at any rate Hodgett's voice was again heard, this time in a tone of anger. He was heard to order Clawson to leave the premises at once. Then followed the sound of a pistol shot.

Clawson had deliberately pulled a revolver and fired at his former employer, the bullet striking him in the left breast. Hodgett followed Clawson as far as the road when he dropped to the ground and died a few moments after. Clawnon mounted his wheel and rode away.

The neighbors were notified at once and the members of the Vigilance Society, of Bedminster Township, gathered together and started in pursuit in wagons. The roads in that section of the country are not in the best condition for bicycle riding, and after about an hour's chase Clawson was captured near Far Hills. The enraged farmers gathered around and were preparing to take summary action by stringing Clawson up to a tree, when Constable Thomas Moore suddenly appeared on the scene and hustled the prisoner away before the plans of the society could be executed.

Clawson was lodged in the county jail at Somerville at 9 o'clock. County Physician Wagner, of Somerville, went to the scene of the tragdy and viewed the body of the murdered man, and the coroner's inquest will be held this afternoon.

A Perfect Fit.

In dealing with your tailor, your shoemaker, your hatter, your dentist, etc., you are very apt to insist upon a perfect fit. Why, then, should you not be even more insistent on this point when you are purchasing eyeglasses, and instead of buying of some notion house or peddler, go to an expert in optical goods and be guaranteed a perfect fit? This guarantee is assured you at Collier's, 105 Park avenue.

REV. DR. TALMAGE AT BOUND BROOK.

He Attends the Fiftieth Anniversary of the First Reformed Church.

Last Thursday marked the fiftieth year since the organization of the First Reformed church of South Bound Brook and on that day it was duly celebrated by fitting services extending throughout the day.

The church was prettily decorated with golden-rod and in the rear of the pulpit was the inscription, "1846—1896, ye shall hallow the fiftieth year." The congregation was especially honored in having present one of its former members, now noted throughout the civilized world, Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, D. D., of Washington, D. C.

The morning service was opened at 10:30 with a few well-chosen words of welcome by the pastor, Rev. Chas. T. Anderson, after which prayer was offered by Rev. David D. Demarest, of the New Brunswick Theological Seminary. After a responsive reading, Rev. James Le Fevre, D. D., delivered an address congratulating the congregation on the completion of the first half-century of its existence Then followed addresses by former pastors, of whom the following seven were present: Revs. George J. Van Van Neste, Henry V. Voorhees, John E. Lyall, Augustus F. Todd, David N. Talmage, James T. Shock and Albert L Mershan.

The fact that Dr. Talmage was to preach in the afternoon, brought to that service a large gathering of people, not only from the Bound Brooks, but from the outlying districts also. The edifice was soon filled to overflowing, and many heard the sermon and caught a glimpse of the celebrated divine through the windows. The sermon was a masterly discourse worthy of its author, who held the attention of the large congregation for over an hour. Among other things, Doctor Talmage spoke very touchingly of the time when he came before the consistory of the church for examination for admission to its membership. After the service Dr. Talmage held a reception, scores of people crowding forward to grasp the hand of the great preacher.

In the evening the following addresses were delivered: "The Early Dutch Settlers of Bound Brook," by Rev. T. E. Davis; "The Influence of the Dutch," by Rev. Joseph W. Daily; and "Material Aids to Spiritual Work," by Rev. John C. Jones.

The church was benefited to the extent of over $100 by the collections of the day and by the sale of refreshments on the church grounds.

Stealing Sun Flowers, and Melons.

Andrew Huff of Park avenue has gone to considerable time and expense during the summer planting potatoes and sunflowers. He also had a fine patch of watermelons, but situated as the patch is on Randolph road, not far off from Park avenue, out of town bicyclists and depraved youths have every access to the place. Only a night or two ago some mean thieves got into the patch and broke off nearly all the sunflower blossoms, and carried away the largest of the water melons. Mr. Huff was only raising the sunflowers for chicken feed, but the melons he expected to put on the table.

The Carnival at Cranford Tonight.

Cranford's carnival takes place this evening and from present indication the evening promises to be a delightful one. The river has been hung with chinese lanterns for several miles while the residences in the vicinity are being decorated. There will probably be an army of strangers in Cranford tonight and Plainfield will be well represented by cyclists and others.

The Misses Blimm, of Somerset street, are entertaining a friend from out of town.

PRETTY AND CONVENIENT

DESCRIPTION OF THE NEW HOUSE OF THE HILLSIDE CLUB.

To be a One Story Structure, With Four Rooms, and Fitted up With a View to Providing a Pleasant Place.

While there has been considerable talk about the new club house of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club, which is now in the course of erection, there are comparatively few that have any idea what sort of a stru ture it is to be. Architect Evarts Tracy was recently interviewed by a Daily Press reporter and the general plan of the club house was explained.

The club house, which is now being erected on Plainfield avenue at the head of Randolph road. is to be a low one-storied building with a shelving shelve roof and a piazza on three sides. The entire building is forty one feet by thirty-two feet, and is divided into four rooms while a small attic, to hold the water tank, is situated over head.

In the main or front room is a large open fire place. just the thing for the cool autumn weather that is approaching. The room will be finished in yellow pine and window seats will be included in the arrangement. The rear room is to be devoted to the gentlemen. It will serve as their dressing room and here will be found lockers and shower bath The ladies' room will be the one on the left. The other room to the right will be given up to the storage of bicycles, golf clubs and tools of the members. Each of the rooms will connect with commodious closets

The building is a frame one and the exterior will be of cedar shingles left to weather. Already the walls have been partially raised and the house will be completed in a few weeks One tennis court will be put in some kind of condition for playing very shortly.

THE POOR MAN'S CARRIAGE.

Shall we Have a Trolley Road From Elizabeth to Plainfield?

Hon J. Martin Roll never minces matters and keeps as close to the people as he can get. When he said that the trolley was the poor man's carriage he hit the nail on the head. A Daily Leader reporter has been among the business people of Elizabeth for the past few days making inquiries, and all are of one opinion namely, that the greatest good to the greatest number should prevail on the question of a trolley from this city to Plainfield.

The cars of the Consolidated Traction Company take much business to Newark. Our tradesmen want this offset by the busines that would naturally come this way. Bicyclists should remember that there are miles and miles of telford roads for them to scorch on elsewhere, and they might as well submit now to the inevitable, for it is only a short time when there will be a popular uprising of the people demanding that a right of way on the northside of the track be given for the construction of a trolley road from this city to Plainfield. What helps the people is building houses What builds houses quickens and improves land and develops property are trolley roads. What we want is more men in public places who favor the "poor man's carriage."—Elizabeth Leader.

A Volunteer Funeral.

The American Volunteers will conduct their first funeral service in this city tonight over the remains of Edith May Felter, who was a member of the organization. The service will be held at Reform Hall at 8 o'clock. Captain Mimms, one of the most popular Volunteer officers, will officiate. The deceased woman lived in Yonkers, N. Y., and was brought to this city to be near her mother, Mrs. Banker, an ex lieutenant in the Salvation Army, at the home of W L Sharkey, 19 Lincoln place, in the hope that the change would benefit her. She leaves a husband and two small children. The remains will be taken to Yonkers on the midnight train.

Lurking Around in the Dark.

Three fairly well-dressed men were noticed hanging along the roadway near Scotch Plains for several hours on Thursday evening passing insulting remarks about passersby. Two women happened to pass along at twilight and the indecent phrases directed to them were anything but pleasant. The women were alone and consequently went on their way.

Nothing Definite Decided On.

There was no definite action taken last evening at the meeting of the committee in charge of the reception to the Volunteer Firemen's Association of New York. The committees had little to report as they have just been appointed, but the various plans were discussed and a definite programme will be laid out in a few days.

ONLY A WEEK FROM NOW

GREAT DAYLIGHT BICYCLE PARADE TO BE HELD NEXT SATURDAY.

Many Designs Have Been Made by Local Riders and They Will Try to Astonish the Natives by Their Great Originality.

As the time for the Daylight Carnival approaches the interest increases. One week from today it is to take place and the subject of carnival is gradually becoming the chief topic of conversation. The designs have been completed and the cyclists are secretly wondering how everybody else is going to decorate.

Many of our youthful cyclists are planning to turn out and they will be carefully looked after. There will be a juvenile division, headed by the Crescent Wheelmen Juniors, and all of the younger element are invited to turn out and make this part of the parade a great success.

The parade committee will hold a meeting the first of next week when the line of march will be selected. As soon as that is announced, it is hoped that every resident along the route will decorate their home to some extent at least. The committee will also divide the parade into its different divisions.

The large posters advertising the meet have been thoroughly posted in Plainfield as well as in Elizabeth and Newark The posters tell what the different prizes are for so if you don't know what they are examine the posters.

HIT WITH A STONE.

Young Borough Lads Indulge in Dangerous Play.

A crowd of small boys were playing on Somerset street, near Chatham, this morning about 1 :30, when some of the boys began to threw stones. Chas. Bird, of Harmony street, was in the crowd and indulged in the stone throwing but he now regrets it, for Wm. Davey, of Jackson avenue, accidentally threw a large stone which struck young Bird on the left side of the head inflicting a deep cut. The blood flowed profusely and the rest of the boys were frightened. Bird was taken to Voehl's bakery, where Mrs. Voehl looked after the boy. His face was covered with blood, and after the latter was washed off hot applications were used. Soon after the boy was taken to his home. Bird has resolved never to throw any more stones. Chief Marshal Wilson gave Davey a good talking to and sent him home.

Colored People in a Scrap.

Some 150 colored people from this city went over to Florida Grove Thursday in various ways. Some went on foot, others by train, but most of them went by wagon. It was the colored folks salt water day, and as usual on such occasions a tugload of New Brunswick toughs were there looking for fight. One or two of the New Brunswick contingent got what they were looking for and went home with big eyes, sore heads and an unfriendly feeling toward Plainfield's colored people.

Clambake Didn't Materialize.

The Crescent Wheelmen's clambake, announced for Thursday evening of this week, did not materialize on account of some misunderstanding. Nat. Astfalk, where the bake was to have been held, on the road leading from Roselle to Rahway, was notified by mail of the proposed onslaught of Plainfield bicyclists, but he didn't go to the postoffice for his mail for a day or two, and consequently no clams were procured and the bake had to be necessarily postponed Unless different arrangements are made, the bake will now take place on Thursday evening of next week.

Hurt His Kneecap.

Harry Lister and Tony Lusardi, both of North avenue, were skylarking on the sidewalk on North avenue about 9:30 o'clock last evening when Lister fell striking his right knee on the curb. The kneecap was dislocated and wrenched considerably out of shape. He was taken home and medical aid summoned, but before Dr. Long arrived the broken bones were sprung back into place, so it was not necessary to reset them. The limb was carefully bandaged and today the patient is resting as comfortably as can be expected under the circumstances.

Going to the Encampment.

Those who will attend the G. A. R. National Encampment to be held at St. Paul next week are Mr. and Mrs. W C. Smith, Mrs. E. C. Morse, W.W. Coriell and V. W. Nash. Mr. Nash will remain in the west for sometime. The party leave Plainfield today.

Appointed Manager.

The Co-operative Association met last night and appointed B. S. Braider manager.

MILLER'S CHARGES NOT SUSTAINED.

The Complainant Made the Defendant and Had to Pay a Fine.

The racket on East Front street last Sunday morning, in which Louis Miller accused four other men of robbing him and then throwing him out of a hack, was the cause of a trial in the city court this morning. Miller was arrested at the time by Patrolman Vanderweg, who charged him with being drunk. The other four, William Kennedy, Thomas Stephenson, Chas. Nelson and Warren Pierson, were arrested Monday on the same charge brought for Miller by his counsel, C. J. McNabb, after hearing a statement from Wm. Emery, of Scotch Plains, at whose place the men had been. At the trial, however, Emery, as well as Vanderweg, stated that Miller was very drunk and the others sober. The latter were represented by ex Councilman Walter L. Hetfield. Judge DeMeza dismissed the complaint against the four and fined Miller $5.

HUSBAND IS SUSPECTED.

Someone Fired at Mrs. Fleming and Her Escorts.

A. C. Fleming, a commissioner of deeds and notary public, of Peapack, was arrested yesterday charged with attempting to shoot his wife and her escorts.

Mrs. Fleming was returning to her home from a festival at Gladstone. She and her party were in a wagon and were driving along a lonely stretch of road. At a particularly dark point a man began shooting at the party from behind a tree. He fired seven shots. One of the bullets slightly wounded the horse and the animal ran, carrying the party out of danger, but not until several bullets hit the carriage.

It is said that Mr. Fleming fired the shots. This he denies and says the arrest is the result of a conspiracy. He and his wife have been living apart for some time. He was bailed.

LOOKED FOR A CORPSE.

The Police Investigate But Fail to Find the Alleged Dead Man.

The driver of the horse ambulance which comes from New Brunswick to this city every day, came to town about 8 o'clock this morning and reported to Roundsman Mattox that a man had evidently been murdered near Avon Park and that his body was still lying by the roadside. The man said he saw the body lying there and stopping his team he got out and found that the man was apparently dead. So he drove direct to this city and notified Roundsman Mattox who in turn notified Chief Grant. The two officers, in company with Special Officer Dagnall, went to the location named but found no trace of the man, neither did they find anyone who could give them any knowledge of the supposed murder.

GARWOOD GROWING FAST.

Another Factory to be Built Along the Jersey Central Line.

Garwood is soon to have another industry added to her present list. A. J. Beckley and Company, of Meriden, Conn., has purchased a plot of ground there of the Garwood Land Improvement Company, between the tracks of the Jersey Central railroad and North avenue, directly opposite of the Hall Signal Company. The company intends to erect buildings and Superindent Washburn was on the ground yesterday arranging to begin work at once. Screens for coal mines and stone crushers and other metal perforating work are to be made at the factory.

Our Opening.

The new school-year of Plainfield Business College will open next Tuesday morning, September 1st. There will be competent instructors in the four different departments—Commercial Shorthand, English and Art. Professor Roberts, the new commercial principal, is a fine penman and a successful teacher. Many have planned and promised to enter this institution at the close of summer. Let there be a grand rally at the opening. The school will run five days and four nights a week.

Called Bad Names.

There has been trouble on Madison avenue among the colored residents of that section between Front and Second streets. Mrs. Rosie Jackson, backed up by her daughter, Maggie Jackson, charged Alfred Champion with calling her bad names. He denied the charge and City Judge DeMeza was called upon to settle the ease in the city court this morning. He decided Champion was to blame and fined him $2.

Petit Jurors.

The following are the North Plainfield petit jurors drawn to serve at the September term of the Somerset county court: Thomas Taylor, Gilbert Van Nest, W. C. Campbell, Abram King.

LAY JUDGES DEFEATED

LAW LEGISLATING THEM OUT OF OFFICE DECLARED CONSTITUTIONAL.

The Question May Be Appealed to a Higher Court—Full Text of the Memorandum Opinion Filed—All Concur.

The Supreme Court yesterday declared constitutional the law of March 26th, 1896, legislating out of office on April last the Lay Judges of the Court of Common Pleas in this State. A memorandum to this effect was filed by Justice Depue and is concurred in by Justices VanSyckle and Gummere, who sat with him in the case, before the court, on application of John Kenny, Lay Judge of the Hudson County Court, for a writ of mandamus directing Law Judge Hudspeth, of the Hudson County Common Pleas Court, to recognize him as a Judge of the court.

The mandamus is refused. The full text of the memorandum is as follows:

"The act of March 26th, 1896, reducing the number of the Judges of the inferior Court of Common Pleas, as constitutional opinion, will be filed on or before opinion day of the next term of the Supreme Court. This memorandum is filed to give the relator an opportunity to have the case reviewed at the November term if he desires to do so.

"If review is desired the Court directs pleadings to be filed and an issue made, which will present an opportunity for such review. The case in the present state of the record not being reviewable, the application for mandamus is denied." All the Judges concur in the decision.

RUN DOWN BY A ROAD HOG.

Wm. Schaffer Has Three Fingers Broken and Sustained Other Injuries.

William Schaffer of Second and New streets was spinning along on his safety, on Park avenue, near the Randolph road, last evening, when some wreckless driver from Metuchen, delibefalety ran into his wheel, almost completely wrecking it. The driver must be inhuman for he never ever stopped to ascertain the extent of the injuries inflicted, for he drove rapidly away.

Schaffer was picked up by some passing bicyclists and assisted home. Dr. Long was summoned and it was found that besides a badly lacerated face, three fingers had been broken, and he was badly injured about the chest.

As near as can be ascertained Schaffer was on the right side of the road but the driver was not.

STOLE BICYCLE BUTTONS.

E. Frank Vail Catches a Young Thief Who Entered His Office.

E. Frank Vail was in charge of the real estate office of his father J. T. Vail, on North avenue, this noon, and stepped into Raybert's store next door for a minute. When he came back he noticed that a number of the bicycle bottons in the collection that hangs in the window, were missing. He ran over to the station and saw two boys walking down the track. He set out in pursuit and captured one of the lads with the tell tale buttons in his hand. The lad was turned over to Chief Grant who locked him up. He was about twelve years of age and said that his name was Peter Benford, son of Mrs. Maggie Benford, one of those who have made Paradise Alley famous in the annals of the city court.

PLEASANTLY ENTERTAINED.

Miss Edith DuBois Gives a Party in Honor of Her Guest.

Miss Edith DuBois entertained a number of her friends last evening at her home on Park avenue in honor of her friend, Miss Susan Buckman, of Brooklyn. The evening passed pleasantly with games and social chat while one of the guests tried his hand at mind-reading and told some wonderful facts. Refreshments were served during the evening.

Besides the Misses DuBois and their guest, there were present the Misses Lucie Palmer Davis, Lottie Coriell and Jennie Quick, Will Symons, Robert Davis, W. Gordon Williams, and Charles Mattis, of Dunellen.

Sentence Was Suspended.

A man, apparently under the influence of liquor, wandered up to the lockup last night and asked for a night's shelter. He was locked up and arranged before City Judge Demeza this morning. He gave his name as Patrick D. Boner. Sentence was suspended.

Always Busy.

That always busy store of White's will offer some exceptionally good bargains for the coming week. They are showing new fall goods and are naming some very low prices on the balance of their summer stock.

LI SEES CLEVELAND

The Old Chinese Viceroy Presented to the President.

RECEPTION AT MR. WHITNEY'S HOME

Secretary Carlisle and Attorney-General Harmon Present—Li Hung Chang To Be Dined To-night by Americans Formerly Residing in China.

New York, Aug. 29.—Li Hung Chang retired early last evening, as is his custom. Consequently he was up and astir early this morning. He breakfasted with several of his ministers, and at 9:30 Gen. Ruger called to escort him to the residence of ex-Secretary Whitney, where President Cleveland was in waiting to receive him. It was 10:30 when Li entered a carriage with Gen. Ruger, Lord Li and Assistant Secretary of State Rockhill. Other carriages were provided for his suite, and accompanied by the Sixth cavalry the start for Mr. Whitney's residence was made. A vast crowd had congregated in front of the Whitney residence and it was with great difficulty that the police cleared a passage for the viceroy and others to enter. After the reception by President Cleveland, Secretary Carlisle and Attorney-General Harmon were presented to the aged Chinese statesman. At 6 o'clock this evening he will be banqueted at the Waldorf by American former residents in China, including American ex-ministers to that country.

LI HUNG'S RECEPTION.

A Grand Welcome Extended China's Great Man in New York.

Li Hung Chang has a remarkable faculty for remembering faces. He also has a remarkable habit of asking pertinent questions. Among the party who went down the bay to meet him yesterday was Gen. Joseph H. Wilson. It was many years since the two men had met. "Your moustache was black when I saw you last," said Li, "and now it is gray. How is that?" "That was a good many years ago," said the general. "Ah! so it was," said Li, and then followed his usual questions: "How old are you?" "Where do you live?" "What's your income?" etc. The viceroy asked for John W. Foster, and when told he was not aboard he asked for John Russell Young, who, he was told would meet him in Philadelphia. T. seemed to please him. Mr. Rockhill, the state department, who speaks the Chinese language, had a long friendly talk with the viceroy and it so pleased him that he insisted upon Mr. Rockhill occupying a seat in his carriage on the way to the Waldorf. Li was much absorbed in his conversation with Mr. Rockhill.

Would Not Submit to Interruption.

Gen. Wilson sat next to them on the sofa and was talking to the interpreter. This seemed to annoy Li, and he rapped the general on the knee as an indication that he did not care to have him disturb his conversation with Mr. Rockhill. Col. John J. McCook, brother of Gen. McCook, was among the party presented to the great Chinaman. Col. McCook had met Li only once in Moscow, but the Oriental statesman remembered him and greeted him with: "My Moscow friend."

Asked About the President.

When Gen. Ruger, with the gold lace on his uniform glittering, boarded the St. Louis from the Dolphin's launch at Quarantine, Li was in the smoking room. When Gen. Ruger and his aides were ushered into the smoking room he walked up to Li. He was presented to him by Mr. Wright, vice-president of the American Line Steamship company, who had made the trip across with him. "I am here to represent the president of the United States," said Gen. Ruger, "and I welcome you in his behalf." Whereupon, through his interpreter, Li answered that he was very thankful for his kind reception. Other men present were presented to Li. The Chinese statesmen continued to receive them standing. "When will his excellency, the president, be in New York?" asked Li. "The expectation is," returned Gen. Ruger, "that he will be here to-morrow to receive you." "Where will the president reside while he is in New York?" asked Li, quietly. Li knows that the official residence of the president is in Washington. "Tell him," said Gen. Ruger to the interpreter, "that we will give him the particulars later in the day." This did not appear to satisfy the inquisitive old Chinaman, but he dropped the subject.

Li's Little Joke.

Li seemed anxious to know just who Gen. Ruger was. When he learned, he asked if he was a retired or active officer. When he secured his information, he said: "The retired officers, I suppose, become wealthy; the active ones become patriotic. How old are you?" he said, addressing Gen. Ruger. "About 60," replied the general, slightly blushing. "You look younger; how is that?" "Good habits and plenty of sleep," said the general. "You do not look 75 years of age." At this remark Li broke into a hearty laugh and a pleased expression crept over his face. All the way up the bay the viceroy kept firing his pointed questions at all who attempted conversation with him, much to the amusement of the group around him. Li had a comparatively pleasant trip across the ocean. He remained in his stateroom most of the time, but found time each afternoon to mingle with some of the passengers. He was greatly liked aboard. He attended a concert given aboard ship and at its conclusion presented photographs of himself to the Abbott sisters, who were among the entertaining artists. A Miss Bessie Gattle, who recited, also attracted Li's attention and to her he gave a silver medal. On the way over Li said he was simply coming to a friendly country on a friendly mission.

The Reception Pleased Him.

When the St. Louis was made fast to her dock and Li saw the vast crowd gathered to see him, the decorations and the cavalry escort in waiting the distinguished visitor's eyes twinkled with pleasure. Although a passage to the carriage had been roped off the police had great difficulty in keeping the crowd back as Li, on the arm of Gen. Ruger, advanced and took a seat in the carriage. Lord Li, the viceroy's adopted son, the Chinese minister to Washington and Mr. Rockhill occupied the front seat in the carriage. The procession up Broadway from the Battery to the Waldorf hotel was uninterrupted by any unusual incident until Nineteenth street and Fifth avenue was reached. There a little ragamuffin threw a dried lemon peel at the ambassador's carriage. It made a curve in the air and Gen. Ruger and Li had to Dodge to escape being hit by it. There was an immense crowd in Thirty-third street and Fifth avenue as the carriage drew up to the hotel entrance.

Meets ex-Secretary Foster.

As Li Hung Chang was about to enter the Waldorf, he saw standing on the steps Hon. John W. Foster, ex-secretary of state. They shook hands very warmly. Mr. Foster, it will be remembered, acted as adviser to the famous Chinaman during the negotiations for peace between China and Japan in the late war. The viceroy did not register. Accompanied by Mr. Foster, Mr. Rockhill, assistant secretary of state, and Gen. Ruger, he ascended to his apartments, which embrace the entire first floor. The sleeping apartments are on the corner of Fifth avenue and Thirty-third street. The distinguished Chinaman was left alone for a few moments. Later he gave audience in the banquet hall to the hundred or more silken-robed Chinese merchants of New York.

Chinese Flag Over City Hall.

Mayor Strong issued a proclamation ordering the Chinese flag to be displayed upon the city hall during the stay of Li Hung Chang in the city. When the janitor received orders to hoist the flag he was in a quandary, for he discovered that the city was not in possession of a Chinese flag. A call was made on the Chinese consul to borrow one, but he did not have one to spare. After much hustling a big one was finally secured from a Mott street Chinese club, and for the first time the dragon of China now floats over New York's city hall.

DOG TAX LAW.

Mandamus Issued in a Suit To Test Its Constitutionality.

Albany, Aug. 29.—Justice Edwards has granted the application of Frederick Fox and Melvin L. Evans for a mandamus restraining the officers of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals from killing dogs belonging to them which had been gathered in by the society's agents because the said canines did not have the society's license tag. The decision was rendered on the argument made before the special term held by Judge Edwards last month. The application was made pending the determination of a suit brought to test the law's constitutionality. The claim of the applicants is that the fee charged for each tag is a tax which goes to the coffers of an independent organization in defiance of the constitution. The matter will in all probability be appealed.

Col. Marcus Kitchen Dead.

Laconia, N. H., Aug. 29.—Col. Marcus L. W. Kitchen of New York died at his summer home in Gilmanton yesterday, aged 58. He is survived by a widow and three daughters. His widow is enroute to Honolulu to visit her daughter Nellie, who is ill there. Col. Ward was on the staff of ex-Gov. Ward of New Jersey and was a pensioner of the war.

California Fruit in London.

London, Aug. 29.—At the sale of 5,000 half-cases of California fruit here yesterday, all in good condition, the prices averaged 1s. lower than last week, owing to the glut of French and English fruit. The peaches fetched 3s. to 6s., the plums 2s. to 8s. 6d., and the pears 2s. to 3s. 6d.

Albany Capitol Work Reduced.

Albany, Aug. 29.—About 300 men employed by the new capitol construction commission will be laid off to-day on account of a lack of funds to longer carry the heavy force of 600 odd workingmen.

COLOR LINE IN SOUTH AMERICA.

It Is as Strongly Drawn There as in Any Part of America.

It rarely if ever happens that a native, whatever his rank, is received on any social occasion inside a white house; indeed, he would seldom be permitted, except as a domestic servant, to enter a private house at all. When Khama, the famous chief of the Ba-Mangwato, a Christian, and a man of admittedly high character, who ruled his people with singular wisdom and ability, was in England last autumn, and was there entertained at lunch by the duke of Westminster and other persons of social eminence, the news excited general annoyance and disgust among the whites in South Africa. A story was told me of a garden party given by the wife of a leading white ecclesiastic, the appearance at which of a native clergyman led many of the white guests to withdraw in dudgeon.

Once, when I was a guest at a mission station in Basutoland, I was asked by my host whether I objected to his bringing in to the family meal a native pastor, who had been preaching to the native congregation. When I expressed some surprise that he should think it necessary to ask, he explained that race feeling was so strong among the colonists that it would have been deemed improper, and, indeed, insulting to make a white guest sit down at the same table with a black man, unless special permission had first been given. Thus one may say that there is no social intercourse whatever between the races; their relations are purely those of business. Now and then a black man gets ahead of the white, but the latter's pride of race remains. I was told of a white who condescended to be hired to work by a Kafir, but stipulated that the Kafir should address him as "Boss."

Of intermarriage there is, of course, no question. It is not forbidden by law in the two British colonies, as it is in most, if not all, of the southern states of America, but it is excessively rare; nor does it appear that there are now other irregular unions outside marriages, as there constantly were in the old days while slavery existed. In this respect the case of South Africa remarkably resembles the southern states, where also there is now very little mixture of blood, though there was a great deal 50 years ago. Probably in both cases it is better that the races should not mingle their blood; for the white race would be likely to lose more than the black race would gain.—James Bryce, M. P., in Century.

The Eskimo Character.

We found the Innuits very quick-witted and intelligent; with unvarying good nature and a keen appreciation of fun, they proved themselves companionable in spite of their uncleanliness. Their skill manifested itself in many ways during these long excursions. Later in the year it showed itself, on one occasion, in a particularly interesting way. Having found it necessary to cross a glacier on a hunting trip, our Innuits paused at the edge and halloed to ascertain the direction of the echo. On the return a storm of snow and fog had obliterated all landmarks, but the Innuits easily found the way by means of the echo.

There was always a charm in their strange melodies, and particularly at night, as they slowly rowed along the black waters among ghostly, beautiful icebergs, under the starless sky. And such melodies! They were like the sighing of the winds, low, contented, full-breathed, yet with an undertone of sadness. But at times their songs are vehement with joy and action.—Frank Wilbert Stokes, in Century.

Something Serious.

Servant—Please, sir, don't you think I had better go for the doctor; Master Johnny says he feels so bad?

The Governor—Oh, that's nothing; he's felt bad before this, hasn't he, and got over it?

"Yes, sir; but not on a half-holiday!"—Tit-Bits.

How to Live a Century

In an address on old age, recently published in the British Medical Journal, Sir James Crichton Browne, M.D., LL.D., says: "Man is entitled to live one hundred years."

Many men have lived a century and not one of them has ever committed suicide. Note that fact. It is a simple question of wear and repair. Accidents excepted, a human life is measured by the body's power to build itself up as fast as use tears it down. In health this is done.

But disease attacks it. Appetite and digestion fail; strength declines; flesh melts like snow. What can stop the wasting and replace the loss?

Scott's Emulsion

of Cod-liver Oil, with the Hypophosphites of lime and soda.

It is a body-builder. It is the essence of the elements and principles that feed, nourish, reconstruct. It is fuel fat for the vital fire; it makes red blood; it stops the wasting; it puts back the lost flesh.

Hence its brilliant results in cases of anaemia, bronchitis, chronic gastric and intestinal disorders and consumption. The oil (easily digested and assimilated) forms flesh and tissue; while the lime promotes the growth of bone. It is like an architect in wood, in stone and in iron—all at once.

In Scott's Emulsion the taste of the oil is fully disguised. It does not nauseate the most delicate stomach.

No other emulsion is "just the same as," or "as good as" Scott's. There is a radical difference.

Accept no substitute.

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

MOTHERS, Do You Know that Paregoric, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, many so-called Soothing Syrups, and most remedies for children are composed of opium or morphine?

Do You Know that opium and morphine are stupefying narcotic poisons?

Do You Know that in most countries druggists are not permitted to sell narcotics without labeling them poisons?

Do You Know that you should not permit any medicine to be given your child unless you or your physician know of what it is composed?

Do You Know that Castoria is a purely vegetable preparation, and that a list of its ingredients is published with every bottle?

Do You Know that Castoria is the prescription of the famous Dr. Samuel Pitcher. That it has been in use for nearly thirty years, and that more Castoria is now sold than of all other remedies for children combined?

Do You Know that the Patent Office Department of the United States, and of other countries, have issued exclusive right to Dr. Pitcher and his assigns to use the word "Castoria" and its formula, and that to imitate them is a state prison offense?

Do You Know that one of the reasons for granting this government protection was because Castoria had been proven to be absolutely harmless?

Do You Know that 35 average doses of Castoria are furnished for 35 cents, or one cent a dose?

Do You Know that when possessed of this perfect preparation, your children may be kept well, and that you may have unbroken rest?

Well, these things are worth knowing. They are facts.

The fac-simile signature of Chas. H. Fletcher is on every wrapper.

MISCELLANEOUS ITEMS.

—During the period of the confederation the power to coin money was vested not only in the continental congress, but in the several states, many of them taking advantage of this to issue copper coins.

—The Massachusetts legislature has appropriated $600,000 for good roads. The farmers of the state have watched the road building operations of the last two or three years and have concluded that there is money in going ahead with the work.

—Canada has just bestowed names on its territory bordering the Arctic ocean. It will hereafter appear on the map in four districts or provinces—Ungaga, Franklin, Mackenzie and Yukon. The four combined contain 1,421,000 square miles, or nearly seven times the area of the province of Ontario.

—One of the largest life insurance corporations in New York is discharging a number of its clerks owing to unusual dullness in its business at the present time. The custom is to make changes and raise salaries in March. It is the first time in the history of this company that clerks have been discharged at this season of the year.

—The lash was recently applied to the back of a man in England who had committed highway robbery. He knocked down a young woman and stole her purse. Justice Day, of the Kent assizes, expressed his disapproval of long sentences for first offenders. He thereupon sentenced Ellis to a month's imprisonment and 30 lashes from the "cat."

—The Yankee Notion arrived in Belfast, Me., recently. It is a frail, nondescript-looking vessel, 20 feet long, six feet wide, with a house amidships, and is constructed of odds and ends of lumber. The occupants are Cobbler William Cottrell, of Swan's island, and his yellow dog. Capt. Cottrell proposes to navigate the Maine coast, earning his living at odd jobs of cobbling.

—The women of the early years of New Netherland and New York differed from the women settlers of Virginia and New England. They had other traits than those of domestic housewifery; they partook frequently of the shrewdness and business sagacity and capacity of their Dutch husbands. Widows seem to have felt no hesitation and experienced no difficulty in carrying on the business affairs of their dead partners; their ventures were as extended and as fearless as those of the men. They traded for peltries with the Indians with marked success. Perhaps part of their profit may have come through the Indian braves' serene confidence in their own superior sagacity in bargaining and trafficking with the "white squaws."

Sea Moss Blanc Mange.

In reply to a "Subscriber" we give the rule for sea moss blanc mange. Purchase half a pound of Irish or Iceland moss or a package of sea moss farine. The latter is a convenient form of the article sold by grocers who seldom deal in the ordinary lichen Islandicus of Iceland and the Irish coasts. Some persons prefer the genuine sea moss, and this must then be purchased at a druggist's. Wash a handful and rinse it in a number of waters to remove all the grit. Throw it in a quart of milk that has been brought to the boiling point. Put the whole in a double boiler and stir it until enough of the sea moss has been absorbed by the milk to make a blanc mange. Add half a teaspoonful of salt, a teaspoonful of any simple flavor and sugar to the taste. No exact time can be given for the time of cooking the moss in the milk, as some moss seems to contain more of the gelatinous substance of the lichen than others. This matter probably varies with the age of the moss. Cool a little of the mixture after cooking it and notice whether it forms or not.—N. Y. Tribune.

THE CINCINNATI.

Smallest But Most Distinguished of the Revolutionary Orders.

The other day there was held in Philadelphia a meeting of the Society of the Cincinnati.

When the struggle for independence had come to a final conclusion and Lord Cornwallis had handed over his sword, the time came for the disbanding of the Continental army. Gen. Washington at this particular time had his headquarters at the old Verplanck mansion, near Fishkill-on-the-Hudson. The officers of the army were most of them aristocratic gentlemen who had gathered together from the various colonies. They had formed many pleasant acquaintances as well as warm friendships in camp and field, and when it was suggested that these be perpetuated by the formation of a permanent organization, the project met with warm approval. Accordingly, on May 13, 1783, a meeting was called. Baron Steuben, who was inspector general of the army, presided. Gen. Knox, that doughty old patriot, read a paper which he had prepared, and which was adopted as the original constitution.

The original draft of this document has been preserved and was handed down with other relics and mementoes of the order to the late Hamilton Fish, who was for many years its president.

The organization was one of officers only, and this was why it was so bitterly assailed in later years. The clause designed to perpetuate the order, which made only male descendants, or, failing these, collateral male descendants, eligible for membership, stamped the order, according to popular belief, as an imitation of European orders of knighthood. It was also asserted that this was an attempt to establish an aristocracy, and the legislatures of Rhode Island, Massachusetts and Pennsylvania censured it by resolution. In fact, Washington saw something of the danger and secured a modification of the clause at the second regular meeting.

It was intended to have a branch of the order established in each state, but this was never done, and to-day there are but seven state organizations. Many of the French officers who served in the revolution were made members, and a branch of the order, which is still in existence, was organized in France by royal consent. Count d'Estaing sent to Gen. Washington, who was elected the first president of the order in this country, the eagle of the French branch, set in diamonds, as a gift of the French naval officers.

The jewel has been worn in succession by each president general of the society from Washington's time down to to-day. It has adorned the breast of Alexander Hamilton, of the two Pinckneys, of Ogden, Lewis, Popham, Dearborn and Fish, who was made president in 1854 and held the office until his death, since which time the office was vacant until recently, when Maj. William Wayne, of Philadelphia, a descendant of Gen. Wayne, known as "Mad Anthony," was chosen. On the election of Gen. Wayne the historic jewel of the order was handed over to him by Nicholas Fish, a son of the late president. The society meets only once in three years, and so the next general assembly will not occur until May 13, 1899, when a meeting will be held in New York city.—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

Jealousy Under the Sea.

"Well, you're home at last, are you," said the mermaid, angrily. "And where have you been, I'd like to know? Do you realize that it is nearly 24 hours since I last saw you? A pretty husband you are!"

"But, my dear—" the merman began.

"'But'—'but' don't say 'but' to me. No doubt, you've an excuse. You'd be a poor sort of a man if you couldn't think of one by this time. But I know where you were. You've been hanging around those bathing resorts again."—Chicago Tribune.

CALLERS AT CANTON

Major McKinley Still Receiving Delegations of Visitors.

DELIVERS TWO SHORT SPEECHES

Assured of Support by a Delegation of Ministers—A Committee from the Republican League Convention Pay Their Respects To Him.

Canton, O., Aug. 29.—Major McKinley made two speeches yesterday and they were both short. His first visitors were a committee representing the executive committee of the national republican league. They came from the enthusiastic meeting at Milwaukee. They gathered in Major McKinley's library and after they had been presented to him, John Goodnee of Minnesota, the spokesman, assured the major of the earnest support of every member of the league. Its active membership at this time, he said, is over 2,000,000 voters. In response Major McKinley made a neat little speech and altogether the meeting was very enjoyable. Late in the afternoon a large delegation of United Brethren clergymen who are attending a conference here, called on Major McKinley. Bishop J. H. Mills of Oregon spoke in behalf of the ministers. He assured the republican nominee of the hearty support of the liberty-loving people of the country and predicted a grand victory for him at the polls in November. Major McKinley replied by thanking them for the compliment and courtesy of the call and the assurances of support. Several more messages of a congratulatory character concerning his letter of acceptance were received in this morning's mail.

Carlos Roloff has succeeded in landing an important expedition, divided into three sections, on the Cuban coast and in forwarding the men and supplies into insurgent camps. Gen. In Behalf of Armenians.

Saratoga, N. Y., Aug. 29.—An enthusiastic meeting was held in behalf of the persecuted Armenians in convention hall last evening. Spencer Trask of New York city presided, and previous to introducing the speakers of the evening made a brief address, in which he took occasion to correct the impression now prevailing that Clara Barton had abandoned relief work. The truth is, he said, she has perfected the work there as far as possible and will return this fall to continue it.

Bicycle Club Incorporated.

Albany, Aug. 29.—The Quill Club Wheelmen of America, New York city, has been incorporated under the laws of the state of New York. The objects of the club, which was organized on April 14, 1895, are the promotion of social intercourse and cycling among its members, of which at present the club has about seventy-five, and they are chiefly newspaper men.

Tested Her Guns at Sea.

Sandy Hook, N. J., Aug. 29.—The United States monitor Terror, which went to sea yesterday for the purpose of testing the pneumatic appliances of her guns and carriages, has returned to her anchorage in the lower bay. She signalled when passing in that she had fired four rounds from her guns, the last one with full powder charge. The result proved to be excellent.

The Kaiser's Cup.

Berlin, Aug. 29.—Emperor William has announced his intention of presenting a cup of his own design to be competed for by British yachts of 40-rating and upward in June next upon the occasion of the celebration of the 60th anniversary of Queen Victoria's accession to the throne. The course will be from Dover to Helgeland.

Rubber Factories Not To Resume.

Savage Barbarities at Constantinople.

Berlin, Aug. 29.—The Tageblatt's Constantinople correspondent, in a dispatch to his paper, details many acts of savage barbarity which he witnessed during the rioting which began on Wednesday, which were similar to those he had seen during previous massacres.

Two Brothers Drowned.

Harrisburg, Pa., Aug. 29.—Calvin and George Diehl, brothers, aged 16 and 18 years, were drowned in the canal near Middletown yesterday. They were swimming and Calvin was seized with a cramp. George went to his assistance and both were drowned. The bodies were recovered.

TALKS TO FARMERS

Mr. Bryan Attends the Big Alliance Picnic at Knowlesville.

GREAT DAY IN HIS CAMPAIGN

Visits Niagara Falls and Makes a Speech in the Cataract House—Conveyed to the Picnic Grove in a Carriage Drawn by Four Horses.

Niagara Falls, N. Y., Aug. 29.—In picturesque features William J. Bryan's day of campaigning was replete from start to finish yesterday. Leaving Buffalo early in the morning, he came to Niagara in a trolley car, viewed the falls and rapids, attended a farmers' picnic at Knowlesville, and, returning to Niagara by way of Medina late last evening, ended the day with a speech from a stand erected at the Cataract house. But while the trolley ride was unique in campaigning and the visit to the falls afforded a pleasant relaxation from the hard work he has been doing for the Chicago ticket, the great gathering of agricultural people addressed by Mr. Bryan in the recesses of a deep wood far exceeded them in dramatic and scenic effects. All day long the farmers had been assembling at Slawson's grove, a mile and a half from Knowlesville station, and when Mr. Bryan reached there he found a great gathering present. This picnic is an annual affair and is under the control of the Orleans County Farmers' alliance. Mr. and Mrs. Bryan with congressman William Sulzer, John Cuneen, secretary of the New York state democratic committee and others reached Knowlesville by train from Niagara Falls early in the afternoon. A big barouche, drawn by four gray horses, was in waiting for the candidate and his wife and in this way they were conveyed to the village, half a mile distant. A band composed of Tonawanda Indians headed the parade, and after the candidate's carriage came a big procession of country rigs, and in this way Mr. Bryan started on his journey to the grove. A halt was made near the canal bridge and Mr. and Mrs. Bryan alighted to take luncheon at the house of a local supporter. The procession rested while the candidate ate. Mr. Bryan spent little time at the table. Re-entering his carriage, leaving Mrs. Bryan to follow later, he was conveyed to the big grove. The farmers' annual picnic is always largely attended, and this year was no exception. It is estimated that at least 1,500 vehicles were there. Of the bicycles, the same broad computation could be applied. They were everywhere. One enclosed space contained 1,000 of them, and a dozen men did a big business checking them for the riders until after the close of the day. The shell game man was much in evidence, and fakirs selling Bryan and McKinley badges, venders of hot sausages, cider, peanuts and other things that people eat when they can't get a regular meal, the side-show men and many more enterprising people did a rushing business. Women, young and old, dressed in clean, bright prints, formed a large part of the congregation and mingled with the crowds of farmers who had come to the grove for their annual picnic and festival. It was as stated largely a gathering of farming people and its importance from a political standpoint was augmented by the fact that it was the first distinctively agricultural audience addressed by Mr. Bryan, with the possible exception of those who heard him at Madalin, on the Hudson, last Saturday, since his advent into New York state. The democratic nominee did not waste time after his arrival, but was introduced and began his speech at once. It was somewhat lengthy and dwelt principally with the silver question and farming interests.

Oil Wells in Alaska.

Seattle, Wash., Aug. 29.—A. H. Eddy of Hartford, Wash., an ex-member of the state legislature, has returned from Alaska, where he reports having discovered two great petroleum wells in the mountains not far back from the coast and within about 100 miles from Juneau. He brought samples of crude oil which he proposes to have tested. He says there is a flow of 200 or 300 barrels daily.

Warning to Striking Shipbuilders.

Glasgow, Aug. 29.—The English, Irish and Scotch shipbuilding masters have notified the executive committee of their employes that unless the strking workmen at the Govan shipyards, on the Clyde, resume work prior to Saturday, Sept. 12, twenty-five per cent. of the number of their employes will be discharged on that date and a like number on each of the three succeeding Saturdays.

For a Cabot Celebration.

Montreal, Aug. 29.—A St. Johns, N. F., dispatch says that the idea of a Cabot celebration in the colony next year is taking definite shape. The British man-of-war Buzzard goes north to make a survey of Bonavista harbor, with a view of reporting on the best site for a pier and a monument to Cabot. The celebration proper, it is expected, will take place in July or August next.

Fair Tonight and Sunday; Stationary Temperature

At 2 o'Clock Leggett's Thermometer Registered 77 Degrees.

The elaborate reception and entertainment of the great Li Hung Chang is a striking exhibition of one of the idioms of this country, when it is considered to what restrictions the rest of the almond-eyed people are subjected when endeavoring to enter this country.

In his address to the Elizabeth Democrats, Thursday, James E. Martine quoted a New York paper who ridiculed W. J. Bryan because he appeared in an alpaca coat and wore pants that bagged at the knees. Mr. Martine then caused a laugh by saying: "I have been a candidate for political office once or twice, but failed to connect, and I have just found out that I was defeated because I had no crease in my pants.'

The Supreme Court decision declaring constitutional the law legislating the lay judges out of office is an important one in more ways than one. One effect it will have is the destruction of a campaign argument which the Democrats would have used to throw discredit on the last Legislature if the decision had been an unfavorable one. There is a probability, however, of the case being appealed to the Court of Errors and Appeals.

BABY DEATHS MULTIPLY.

TINY STOMACHS GIVE OUT, DIARRHEA FOLLOWS.

Utmost Strength Needed to Withstand Heat of August—Lactated Food Keeps Them Sturdy, Well-Fed and Steadily Growing.

These feverish days and nights make it a question of life and death with the babies.

It cannot be impressed too often nor too strongly upon parents that August is the most deadly month for children, especially for those under 5 and for babies going through their second summer, and that now is the time when young children need the most wholesome, nourishing, and palatable diet that can be procured for them.

Lactated food is recognized all over the country as the most nourising, strengthening, easily digested, and palatable food that can be given the baby.

Hot weather must not be allowed to weaken the child's digestion nor prevent its eating heartily. Many parents, knowing the vital importance of keeping baby abundantly nourished in hot weather, force the child to take more food than it can assimilate, or food that is ill adapted to hot weather feeding.

High temperature, with such improper feeding brings cholera infantum, diarrhea and convulsions.

Mothers who feed their children on lactated food will have the comforting feeling of having done everything possible for insuring baby's health, growth and lasting happiness. Lactated food is the happy achievement of a long desired substitute for mothers milk. It is known to invariably make firm flesh, a clear skin, bright eyes, and to strengthen the child's body so that diarrhea, cholera infantum, and exhausting summer sickness do not gain a footing. Lactated food babies are rosy specimens of genuine fun lovieg, noisy children, that develop strong physiques, with large bones and muscles.

The only assured safety for pale, weak, sickly babies in summer is for mothers to stick close to a diet of pure lactated food. The danger of overloading the tiny stomach, and the consequent diarrhea—nature's way of dealing with indigestion—is thus avoided. Lactated food is the one perfect substitute for healthy mothers-milk. Specialists in children's disorders prescribe it, intelligent parents everywhere recommend it, and babies living on it show how perfectly it is adapted to infant summer feeding, by their healthy condition, their plump, happy faces and their bright eyes.

Mrs. H. A. Vreeland, of Windsor, Conn., has the same reason to bless lactated food that thousands of other mothers have. She writes to the proprietors of lactated food:

"I send you herewith a picture of my baby, Vira Roberta Vreeland, who has been raised on your lactated food, it was recommended by the doctor and druggists, and it saved her life. She was very sick with cholera infantum, and this was the only nourishment she took. When eight months old she weighed 26 3-4 pounds. I can gladly recommend lactated food to any mother."

Members of the Plainfield Branch of the Salvation Army were here, yesterday, selling War Crys and looking around for a place to open a branch of the army in the Plains.

Thomas Paff and a Mr. Wright went to the Passaic river for fish, on Wednesday, and Mr. Paff captured a three-pound bass—the largest one caught in that vicinity for a long time. They also caught a lot of perch, catfish and other specimens.

The "Hon" Robert Walpole says there is no law to prohibit a person from fishing on Sunday. So he's going to try his luck in the Passaic river, tomorrow. "Bob" returned home yesterday from a two-day's fishing at Weston, this state.

Attention has been called to two black dogs of the Newfoundland species, which run around Coles hill snapping and barking at pedestrians and horses which chance to pass that way. John Marsh had a horse frightened there sometime ago, and the animal ran away. The horse has ever since been on the lookout for dogs.

People in this staid old quiet town have not recovered from the shock received on Wednesday evening, when Edmund Verity and George Lyon had the encounter. True, Lyon was held for the Grand Jury, but the two persons who caused all the disturbance, have not yet had a settlement between themselves, and bad blood, it is said, exists between the two. During the encounter Wednesday evening, one of the upright posts in front of a grocery store was torn out bodily, allowing the wooden awning to sag considerably.

Why is It,

if catarrh is a blood disease, as some claim, that physicians frequently advise change of air and climate to those suffering? Catarrh is a climatic affection, and nothing but a local remedy or a change of climate will cure it. Ely's Cream Balm is so efficient as to do away with the necessity of leaving home and friends, causing instant relief and is a real cure of catarrh.

ANTIPODEAN ANGLING.

Edible Fishes Are Found in Large Numbers.

Fortunes Await Fishermen Who Go to Australia to Engage in the Business—Where Pilchard and Herring Abound.

Deep-sea fishing is an almost unknown industry at the antipodes, although the Australian coast, especially that of New South Wales, is regularly frequented by immense shoals of pilchards, herrings, sprats and other edible fish, of excellent flavor, and readily captured by those possessing the requisite skill and experience. Mr. J. Douglas Ogilby, of the Sydney museum, alluding to this, says: Notwithstanding that for many years it has been so well known that our seas teem with herrings, and that great fortunes await those who make an effort to gather this harvest of the deep, and that in comparison with such countries as Scotland, Canada and the New England states of North America we are favored with all the advantages accruing from serener skies and more peaceful seas, we are, nevertheless, content to sit idle year after year and make no attempt to gather the wealth thus prodigally spread out before us; while at the same time, we are annually expending thousands of pounds in conveying across our more fecund waters the salted, tinned and potted products won from the tempestuous and frigid seas of the North Atlantic by our hardier relatives.

The pilchard and herring are found in immense quantities off the New South Wales coast during the colder months, the spawn of the former being found in abundance on the less frequented portions of the shores. The pilchard has a wide range throughout the Pacific ocean, from the shores of North and South America westward, but nowhere is it more abundant than in the seas of New South Wales and those of New Zealand. In the latter colony it has already attained to considerable celebrity, and to some value, as an article of export in its smoked form, when it is widely known and generally esteemed under the name of "Pictou bloaters." The herring follows the same course as the pilchard, but is not so rigorously oceanic in its habits, nor so strictly a migrant as that fish; at all events, small consignments of them are not unfrequently sent to the Sydney market, and at most seasons a few specimens may be found among silver bellies (gerridae) and other fishes of like appearance and habits. The herrings are short and deep, grow to nine inches in length, and are blue above and silvery below, the back being traversed longitudinally by from one to three more or less distinct golden bands margined above by dark blue stripes; when fresh they are of excellent and delicate flavor, and would be of superior quality for canning.

The fresh-water, or Napean herring, is abundant in all the coast rivers of New South Wales, and affords some sport to anglers by rising with avidity to the fly, but is of little value as an edible fish. Among the larger herrings is the chiro, which is a uniform silvery fish, having, for a herring, an exceptionally elongate body, with a proportionate depth of from one-fifth to one-sixth of the total length. It is a large and powerful fish, attaining to a length of at least three feet, and is an inhabitant of all tropical seas, wandering, as is natural in a fish possessed of such powers of locomotion, far into the temperate regions, and wherever found is esteemed as a delicacy. The tarpum is the most common of the large herrings, and few seasons pass without a number of specimens finding their way to the Sydney market. Like the chiro, it is of uniform silvery, but the body is much shorter and deeper proportionately, its depth being from two-sevenths to one-fourth of its length; but its most noticeable characteristic will be found in the elongation of the last dorsal ray, which is prolonged into a filament similar to what obtains in the bony bream of the Murray river system, and the thread herrings of the tropics. The tarpum grows to three feet, or even more, in length, and is an excellent table fish.

The sabalo is the largest of all the clupeiform fishes, attaining to a length of five feet, and having a strong external resemblance to the true salmon (salmo salar), from which, of course, the absence of an adipose dorsal fin, of teeth, etc., at once distinguish it. Its flesh is held in different estimation, in some places being eaten with avidity in others being considered poor, dry and tasteless; it is rarely brought to market, but is largely used as bait. Blue sprats are frequent visitors to the New South Wales coast, the maximum size being five inches. They are beautiful little creatures, and, like all members of the herring family, swim in closely packed masses near the surface, the dark blue color of the back making them distinctly visible to their enemies at a considerable distance. Other kinds of pilchard, herring, sprat, etc., are known to exist, but, owing to want of suitable appliances for the capture of ocean surface fishes, little practical information is at present obtainable, although there is sufficient to prove that the deep-sea fishing industry would prove a mine of wealth to those engaged in it under proper conditions. —Sydney Cor. Knew His Business.

"I don't know why you should have selected this particular site for a summer hotel," said a newly arrived guest to the landlord, who was an old acquaintance. "It strikes me as a very warm place."

"That may be," replied the landlord, "but you will find the proper temperature has been obtained. The waiters are all girls from the Boston colleges."—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

HELPFUL AUNT MARY.

She Was Always Looking Out for Other People's Interests.

There is a dear old lady who visits her nephews and nieces in New York occasionally, whom we may call Aunt Mary, and who, while expressing her appreciation of the delights of city life, finds much fault with certain phases of metropolitan existence.

"You never know your nearest neighbors," she protests. "The folks next door may be robbers, and pickpockets, and everything, for all you know."

"But if they are, we don't want to know them, auntie," returns a favorite nephew. "Fancy calling on a friend, and when you go to leave your card find that he has picked your pocket of your card-case, not to mention your watch and purse."

"And as for recognizing that a stranger exists in public, why, it's a crime," Aunt Mary will continue, warming up to her subject. "A body might break his neck here, and no one would speak to him."

"But, auntie," goes on the incorrigible, "there are so many people here that we can't go round with splints and adhesive plaster and that sort of stuff in our pockets, and if we see a stranger's head wobble rush up and offer the things to him with the idea that he's just snapped off his neck."

But recently, in returning home on the train, Aunt Mary had a chance to demonstrate her theories. In the seat ahead of her was a young couple who enlisted her favorable attention. She conceived them to be newly married, and her heart warmed toward them without delay. The train soon stopped at a small station, and they left the car. She observed them on the platform outside, and just before the train started she happened to spy a pasteboard box tied up with a bit of string in the seat they had deserted. "Goodness," thought Aunt Mary, "they're so intent on each other that they've forgotten their luggage." She seized it and looked out of the open window. The girl stood by the baggage-room door, the man having apparently gone inside. Aunt Mary waved the box at her. She answered, but the clang of the engine-bell drowned out what she said. Again she waved the box; the other shook her head. The train started; Aunt Mary cast the box out violently. It struck the platform at the feet of the girl, the string broke, and out rolled a half-dozen pairs of new socks, several starched cuffs and collars, a pair of suspenders, and a couple of white shirts. "They've got 'em, anyhow," thought Aunt Mary, as she settled back in her seat. "Lucky I saw it. Curious how forgetful young folks can be. But—" She looked up and met the reproachful gaze of the man standing by his empty seat.

"Madam," he said, "the—er—young lady stops at that station, but I go on to Buffalo!"

"But how was a body to have known it?" says Aunt Mary, when she relates the incident.—Harper's Magazine.

TO BE ONE'S OWN MANICURE.

Materials and Implements for Treating the Finger Nails.

Hot water is the first requisite, and a thorough washing or soaking of the hands. This is best attained by having the hot water poured into a basin continually for two or three minutes. The hands must be allowed to soak for fully five minutes, and it is well, instead of soap, to wash the hands very thoroughly in bran, which makes the skin soft and white. After the hands have been thoroughly cleansed the nails should then be attended to. With a piece of orange wood stick sharpened to a point and a bit of jeweler's cotton rolled around the point and wet with the acid that comes for this purpose every particle of dirt and stain should be removed. The hands must then again be washed, this time in warm, not hot, water. Scissors, very sharp and fine, must then be taken, and all loose flesh at each side of the nails carefully trimmed. The nails must be shaped in a pointed oval. All roughness must be filed away and the flesh at the base of the nail pushed smoothly and firmly back, so that the half-moon, supposed to be a point of beauty, can be discerned. It is no longer considered good form to have so much polish on the nails that they look as though they had been buttered, as was the fashion two or three years ago. But a certain amount of polish is necessary. Rosaline put on over the entire nail and the end of the finger, then washed off again and the nails polished briskly with a polisher makes the hands look very trim and pretty. The first manicuring is by all odds the most difficult. After the nails and hands are once got into good condition 15 minutes each Monday morning will keep them in proper condition all the week through, if only ordinary care in washing the hands, with an occasional rub from the polisher, is given.—Harper's Bazar.

House Jackets.

Some of the new dainty house jackets are made like the jacket bodices en suite with the street costume, these showing a curved seam over the hips, to which is applied a gathered lace flounce which joins the continuous seam down the back. The large turn-down collar is edged with the same wide lace, and frills to correspond fall from the full elbow puffs. The jacket fits the figure very snugly in the back and has but one dart seam on each side of the front, and the usual under-arm seam.—N. Y. Post.

A Fruit Drink.

A pleasant drink offered at luncheons, where women who value their complexions will not drink wine, is made from orange juice treated with fruits. The juice is served in tall glasses and is undiluted. Into each glass is dropped four slices of banana, a Tokay grape cut and seeded, a slice from a tart apple and a pinch of sugar. The drink, of course, is intended to be sipped through the courses and may be the only one served.—Chicago Tribune.

Be it resolved that the Clerk notify the Board of Chosen Freeholders of County of Somerset, and also the like Board of the County of Union, that Watchung Avenue, from Front Street in the City of Plainfield, County of Union, to Jackson Avenue in the Borough of North Plainfield, County of Somerset, is about to be opened sixty feet wide at great expense, and that a bridge to carry said street across Green Brook, will be necessary and that said Boards are requested to provide for the speedy construction of such bridge, which should be sixty feet wide, carrying roadway and sidewalks to correspond with the rest of the street.

From the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, Union County.

Elizabeth, N. J., July 18, 1896.

To the Director and Board of Chosen Freeholders of Union County.

Gentlemen—Your attention is respectfully called to the laws of N. J., of 1873, page 55, section 5.

And be it enacted, That of all fines and penalties, and monies imposed, and collected under the provisions of any act of this state, for the prevention of cruelty to animals, or for the protection of dumb animals and not especially provided for in said act, one-half shall be paid by the Justice, or by the Clerk, or other officers of the Court, receiving the same, to the informer, complainant or prosecuter, and the other half to the District Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals of the county where the same were imposed and collected, if one is in existence in that county, and if not, then to the New Jersey Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, to be used by said society, in aid of the benevolent purpose for which it was incorporated.

This society was organized in 1875, and in all this time has never received the fines it is entiled to under the law. Perhaps this is the fault of the society in not claiming or demanding them

We, therefore, respectfully ask your honorable body to pay over to this society, the fines collected at the last court from Max Sampson, $50; Max Fern, $25, and at your early convenience, to look up the fines due this society, during preceding years, and pay over to this society, the amounts justly due it under the laws, and your petitioners will forever pray, etc., etc.

THE SUMMER WARDROBE.

It Should Include Light Wraps for Evening Wear.

In our variable climate the summer wardrobe must be supplied with garments both thick and thin to meet emergencies. One day it is so warm that you are melting and dissolving in perspiration; the next a shivering temperature suggests that the wind has blown across icebergs, and makes a fire on the hearth more than welcome. Unless one changes underclothing with the changing record of the thermometer, it is wise to have always at least a single warm wool gown or jacket, which is ready to one's hand at need. For ordinary all-day wear a well-made skirt of water proof serge or flannel, a cotton waist or a silk one, and a coat, to be worn or laid aside at will, constitute an appropriate costume for most young women. The temptation in midsummer is to provide too many very thin and too few warm and thick dresses. A wool gown of light weight should be part of every lady's summer outfit.

Shawls and wraps are usually disdained by girls who consider them fit only for their elders. But a soft white shawl to wrap over a thin evening toilet—on the veranda, or in the drawing-room when the windows are open, and the evening breeze sweeps in fragrant with flower scents or salt with the sea—is not a thing to be despised. Still, if a girl considers such an accessory to her toilet inappropriate, let her do without it. It is certainly elegant and suitable in the appointments of mothers and grandmothers, and the girl may not monopolize all the beautiful things for herself.

The summer wardrobe is incomplete without a light raincloak, easily rolled up and carried, and ready for the sudden shower; shoes of different weights—the substantial russet with broad, sensible soles, as well as the daintier tie and the fairy-like slipper—must be provided for the separate occasions when the feet must be well shod. It is still true that the well dressed woman is known by her shoes and her gloves, though less than formerly is attention to these matters a distinction, since most of us care intelligently for these details of costume.

The summer wardrobe requires more thought and planning than the winter one, because it must be kept fresh and dainty at all hazards. Ribbons must be renewed, rumpled skirts must be ironed, gowns must have an air of newness. The light materials in vogue for dressy functions will give the wearer a dowdy look unless they are constantly cared for, kept free from dust and preserved from crease and stain.—Harper's Bazar.

Scalloped Eggs and Potatoes.

Take equal quantities of hard-boiled eggs and potatoes sliced. Moisten with cream sauce, put in a baking dish in layers with bread crumbs, the top and bottom layers being of crumbs, and brown in a hot oven, cooking until the potatoes are done. This makes an elegant dish for tea.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Delicate Dress Goods.

Some gowns are so dainty in the weave, so delicate in tint, that they seem to soil by being looked at—one or two wearings making them unpresentable, NOT USELESS. We make a specialty of cleaning fine fabrics, the more delicate the material, the better the results. Sometimes an accident will ruin a gown, without injuring the texture. We dye them then, sometimes we get a prettier effect than the original color. Fine goods stand redyeing. The finer the material the better the new color. We charge so little for cleaning or dyeing, that even if you are in doubt as to the result, it's worth while to experiment. Want a new evening gown for a dollar or two? Laundry drivers will receive your work.

RUSSIA BUYS MACHINERY.

Delaware Iron Co.'s Tube and Pipe Mill To Be Sent to That Country.

Philadelphia, Aug. 29.—The Russian government has been negotiating for some time with the Delaware Iron company of New Castle, Del., to secure a large amount of its machinery, and the bargain has been finally consummated. The contract entered into involves the delivery of all the material of the tube and pipe mill connected with the iron company's big plant. It also involves the sending to Russia of a large force of workmen, who will be engaged abroad to put the machinery together and start it in good running order. To transport the property thus purchased the British tramp steamer Henley has been chartered by Hagar & Co. of this city. Besides taking out the material furnished by the iron campany, the vessel will carry additional machinery bought in this country to Mariapole on the sea of Azov. The sale by the iron company of its tube and pipe plant does not in any way affect the future conduct of its works. As soon as the cargo is shipped the Delaware Iron company will go ahead replacing all it has sold to the czar's government.

SQUAW MEN IN REVOLT.

Further Bloodshed Expected in the Seminole Reservation.

Guthrie, Okla., Aug. 29.—The squaw men in the Seminole Indian reservations are in open revolt and threaten to exterminate the full-bloods. At the last session of the Seminole council a law was passed ordering all white men who married Indian women to leave the nation. There are 800 squaw men. When a body of police Indians attempted to put the council laws into effect on Wednesday an open battle took place in which three Indians were killed. Great excitement exists and further bloodshed is looked for. Troops from the First cavalry are on their way to the scene of trouble. For several years it has been the practice of white men to go into the nation, marry an Indian woman, and thus obtain sixty acres of land. The efforts of the full-bloods and half-breed Seminoles to break up this practice causes the trouble.

Your speech in New York attacks me specifically, and I would be pleased to meet you in joint debate before a northern audience, preferably at Indianapolis. B. R. TILLMAN."

Yellowstone Park.

Washington, Aug. 29.—Capt. Anderson of the Sixth cavalry, superintendent of the Yellowstone National park, in his annual report to the secretary of the interior, recommends an annual appropriation of $100,000 until the road system of the park is completed. For the season of 1895—June to September inclusive—2,866 persons visited the park. Tables kept in regard to the geysers show little regularity in their periodical outbursts except those of "Old Faithful."

Philadelphia, Aug. 29.—The executive committee of the Associated Cricket clubs of Philadelphia held a meeting yesterday afternoon for the purpose of considering the details in connection with the annual match between the United States and Canada, to be held here Sept. 4 and 5. TURKEY MUST PAY UP

Believed That Uncle Sam Is at Last in Earnest.

OPINION AT THE NAVY DEPARTMENT

Significance Attached to the Orders Sending the Bancroft to Constantinople—Probably in Connection with the Demand for Indemnity.

Washington, Aug. 29.—It is impossible to learn at the state or navy department whether any assurances have been received from Turkey that Minister Terrell will be permitted to have the moral support of a ship flying the stars and stripes near his legation. The utmost reticence is preserved about Turkish affairs, and even in the past few days, when it was learned that Mr. Terrell's demands were not receiving satisfactory replies from the porte and he was said to have exhausted his efforts to secure redress for the Harpoot and Marash outrages, officials here have declined emphatically to answer questions about the matter. It appears, however, that the administration has contemplated for some time the dispatch of the Bancroft to Constantinople, as shown by the following letter addressed by Mavroyeni Bey, the Turkish minister, to Secretary of State Olney last January: "Mr. Secretary of State: His excellency, Tewfik Pasha, has just informed me that the sublime porte regrets that it cannot comply with Mr. Terrell's request for permission for the Bancroft to pass through the strait, that vessel having been authorized to remain at the disposal of the United States legation at Constantinople. Your excellency knows perfectly well the earnest and sincere desire of the imperial government to do all in its power to strengthen, if possible, the ties of friendship which unite the two countries, but in this case a certain fact is involved, to wit: That only the signatory powers of the treaty of Paris enjoy the right to have vessels of war permanently at Constantinople at the orders of their respective embassies. Now the United States government does not appear in the number of the signatories of that treaty. I am, consequently, sure that your excellency will be pleased to take the foregoing into consideration. MAVROYENI."

Another Request Denied.

If any reply was made to this letter or if any correspondence followed or preceded it, that correspondence is not obtainable. On November 5 of last year, Admiral Selfridge being at Marseilles, France, in the flagship San Francisco on his way from Washington to the Levant, wrote Mr. Terrell as follows: "Considering it very desirable that I should confer with you relating to disturbances in the east, I have the honor to request that you will procure a firman from the porte for me to visit Constantinople in the Marblehead, the smallest vessel of our squadron. The Marblehead has a displacement of 2,000 tons." Mr. Terrell immediately saw the sultan and made the application which as the minister reported to Mr. Olney, "he very politely declined to give for the alleged reason that similar applications would then be made by the other powers which he could not possibly grant."

No Protection for Americans.

Minister Terrell, writing to Admiral Selfridge Nov. 20, 1895, said: "There is a feeling here of much apprehension and the news from the interior of Asia is fearful. Certainly over 20,000 men have been killed in cities and large towns away from the sea coast, while the country from the Black sea to the Caspian is believed to be desolate. The co-operative action of European powers, if agreed on, is not known here. If there should be an effort by their boats to rush by the Dardanelles and reach this city, the interval between the effort and the arrival of the fleet here would be one of much danger to resident Christians. Other governments have dispatch boats on which their people take refuge; our's has none."

First Move To Force a Settlement.

Minister Terrell a month later was compelled to go to Smyrna to confer with the admiral. It is believed in naval circles here that the preliminary orders sending the Bancroft to Constantinople constitute the first step in the administration programme to compel Turkey to respect the peremptory demand for full and immediate satisfaction for $100,000 indemnity made last November, for the destruction of the American college and other property at Harpoot and a similar demand for the burning of the college at Marash. It is believed this will be enforced before the close of the present year, even if it be necessary to detach all the battleships and big cruisers from Admiral Bunce's fleet for the purpose.

HOSIERY AND SHOES.

What Is Being Worn with the Summer Costumes.

Black hose and ties having a moderately pointed toe and medium heel are correct with any summer costume, though tan ties and hose are cooler looking and very stylish with thin street or house gowns. A colored shoe makes the foot appear two sizes larger—a fact that makes many hesitate in buying either tan or white ties. The latter in canvas are worn with white hose at summer resorts and chiefly with white suits. They are certainly entirely out of place on the streets of a large city. Patent leather ties are said to draw the feet and also to easily stretch out of shape, but they are, nevertheless, much worn for dressy street wear. White glace kid slippers keep their shape better than those of suede kid. White slippers and hose should be worn with a white evening costume, but black ties and hose are worn with a white da toilette unless white canvas ties are preferred. High buttoned shoes have kid or cloth tops and patent leather tips, with the razor-pointed, moderate or square toe and a flat, moderate or high heel. Wipe shoes when taking them off; air and stuff them with soft paper when not in use. Wearing shoes on alternate days keeps them in better trim besides resting the feet. Russet ties may be cleaned with paste that is sold for that purpose, and white canvas ties with French chalk or naphtha; the latter is very explosive when exposed to either light or fire, consequently great care must be exercised while using it. Black shoes and hose are worn with any costume; tan hose and shoes with brown dresses. Dressy black kid slippers for the house have bead-embroidered toes in open or close work.—Ladies' Home Journal.

—The employes of the Gas Company discovered a leak in the main on North avenue today and immediately set to work repairing it.

If you have ever seen a little child in the agony of summer complaint, you can realize the danger of the trouble and appreciate the value of instantaneons relief always afforded by DeWitt's Colic & Cholera Cure. For dysentery and diarrœa it is a reliable remedy. We could not afford to recommend this as a cure unless it were a cure. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

AN IMPRESSIVE FUNERAL

TOUCHING SERMON BY REV. MR. SCHENCK AT MISS HUFF'S BURIAL.

She Faded Like a Leaf, the Minister Said, and She Was Prepared to Meet Her Maker—Obsequies Largely Attended.

The funeral services of the late Miss Clara Huff were held yesterday at 1:30 from the house, 114 Plainfield avenue, and at 2 o'clock from Trinity Reformed church. Every seat in the large church was occupied with relatives and friends of the decedent, and the service was particularly impressive. As the funeral cortege entered the church Rev. Cornelius Schenck, who conducted the services, preceded the mourners and read appropriate Scripture selections, while Organist Arthur L. Titsworth rendered a solemn funeral march. The singing of "Only Remembered," by Miss Etta Krymer, Miss Lizzie Dunn, A J. Moore and H. J. Martin, was most impressive. This was followed with Scripture reading by Rev. Cornelius Schenck. He also read a portion of the eighth chapter of Romans, which was a favorite chapter of the departed. Mr. Schenck then spoke in part as follows:

"Five years ago the person at whose bier we now stand stood in yonder pew and made a frank confession and was received into this church. Those years have passed quickly, as they have been filled with hope, sorrow and pain. As a leaf, Miss Huff has faded gradually. During the past two years there had been a failure, a lack of strength and vigor, but not a lack of hope or faith. We noticed the change and like a leaf she faded beautifully. Naturally of a winning manner, she grew more beautiful in character. As I was coming from the mountains yesterday I noticed in one place how the early frost had changed the leaves. There were no two alike. I thought of her who has gone, how she had changed since the frost had touched her. I do not say she died prematurely, as some are wont to say, for God's time is our time. She is now living in Christ as she did for years. She was modest and I do not believe she would care to have her traits spoken of, but I will say that she lived a Christian life, modest, unostentatious and self-sacrificing, a life of expectation and trust. There were no clouds, for she did not fear death. Her concern was that her loved ones might meet her in an unbroken band. What a legacy to possess! To the Christian Endeavor Society and Sunday-school of which she was a member and to her associates in the city who loved her, I entreat that you hear the voice that comes to us on this occasion and work while it is day"

Mr. Schenck closed his remarks with a touching and heartfelt prayer, after which "The Christian's Good Night" was rendered by the quartette.

All present were then given an opportunity to look for the last time on the form of their beloved one.

The floral tributes were very beautiful and consisted of a large pillow from the Christian Endeavor Society, bearing the monogram "C. E.," a handsome pillow from the sisters with the word "Sister" inscribed thereon and several bunches of choice cut flowers.

Those who served as pall-bearers were: Julius Williams, Frank Storr, William F. Dunn, William Crawford, E. E. Garretson and James Albert Love. Interment was in Somerville.

BOTANISTS ON A RAMBLE.

Found a Peculiar Tree or Plant of the Catalpa Species.

About twenty members of the Torrey Botanical Club, New York, visited Fanwood Saturday afternoon. They were met by a number of local botanists, mostly from Plainfield, and enjoyed a ramble that was one of pleasure and profit to all.

There were, as usual, several camerists along who took snap shots. One was for the purpose of determing the true name of a luxuriant plant or tree, very tall and stately, the leaves of which measured fully twenty-four inches across, the stem being hollow. This plant or tree was judged by some to be a catalpa, usually found farther south and abundant on the banks of the Mississippi.

The party returned to New York on the 6:01 train very much pleased with Fanwood and its surroundings.

Tendered a Reception.

Mr. and Mrs. George McCosker, who were married on Wednesday evening of last week, were tendered a reception yesterday at their new home corner of Second and Berckman streets, About twenty couples of young people were present and enjoyed an afternoon and evening of uninterrupted pleasure.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Wellborn, of West Second street, are receiving congratulations today. It is a boy.

IDEAL AUTUMN WEATHER.

The End of August Marked With Favorable Atmospheric Conditions.

Plainfield is enjoying a season of real autumnal weather, and yesterday was one of its most delightful days. The throng of people who are now returning from their summer outing found Plainfield equal to any summer resort.

Everybody turned out yesterday to enjoy the glorious weather. Those who did not try a ride in a carriage or on a bicycle, took a little stroll. An old resident of Netherwood told a Daily Press reporter this morning that the crowd of carriages, cyclists and pedestrians on South avenue yesterday was larger than he had seen this year. In the evening light overcoats and wraps felt very comfortable, but nevertheless many walked out.

The colored camp meeting at Netherwood was crowded with both colored and white people. One of the ministers who was to conduct it failed to appear but another one held a very successful meeting.

During the afternoon and eventng the electric cars were packed and the number of passengers carried was unusually large.

PHYSICAL DIRECTOR HERE.

C. E. A. Heywood Ready to Start the Y. M. C. A. Gymnasium Work.

C. E. A. Heywood, the new physical director for the Y. M. C. A., arrived in town Saturday evening. Mr. Heywood comes from the Springfield Training School, which institution affords the best physical training, theoretical and practical, that can be had in the country and turns out the most competent physical directors. Dr. Gulick, who is at the head of the physical department in the school, strongly recommends Mr. Heywood. Mr. Heywood was also class leader for three years at the Twenty-third street Branch of the New York Y. M. C. A., which is one of the best-conducted gymnasiums in the country, and which was under the direction of Dr. McCurdy. Mr. Heywood is thoroughly competent to make physical examinations and to make the gymnasium work interesting and attractive to all.

MAYOR AS THE CADI.

His Honor Dispenses Justice in the Absence of City Judge DeMeza.

City Judge DeMeza will not be in Plaingeld today and, in his absence, Mayor Gilbert dispensed justice to the solitary offender in the city court. That individual gave his name as William Sullivan. Patrolman Flanagan found him on Front street Saturday night soliciting money at the stores. Sullivan admitted begging as he said he needed the money to buy bread with, but he declared that he was not drunk. The Mayor gave him his choice between a $5 fine or five days in the county jail. He will probably choose the latter as his finances are not in a flourishing condition.

Chicken Thieves.

Thieves for the feathery tribe are about, as usual. And this season is no exception to the rule. A year ago about this time a hen roost on Randolph road was robbed of a lot of fine fowls, but the thief was never captured. A night or two ago some one or more went into Jacob Tingley's hen roost on West Fourth streetarriedand carried away thirty yellow cochin chickens, the broods from two hens. Some time ago the same coop was robbed of some twenty-five or thirty choice fowls, and since then a padlock was placed on the door. But this didn't interfere with he intruders, for they went into the coop and carried away the little chickens and left their mother there.

Well Known Here.

Charles Stanley Reinnart, the well-known draughtsman and illustrator, who was taken suddenly ill at his studio, Twenty-third street and Fourth avenue, New York, last Thursday, and was removed to the Players' Club, on East Twentieth street, died there yesterday morning. He gained a reputation as an artist of considerable talent in Paris and New York. He was a member of the Century Club and of the Academy of Design, and was a popular after-dinner speaker. Mr. Reinhart was the brother of Jos. W. Reinhart, of Belvidere avenue, this city, and was well known here.

Stole a Basket of Grapes.

Samuel Conway and John Taylor, colored, were caught Saturday evening lifting a basket of grapes from in front of Joseph Carbone's place on North avenue. On the complaint of the latter the two men were arrested and this morning they were arraigned before Justice Newcorn. The prisoners demanded a summary trial for petty larceny before two justices, but later they withdrew the demand and waived examination to appear before the Grand Jury. Justice Newcorn held them in $100 bail for their appearance. Spencer Conway furnished the bail.

CRANFORD'S CARNIVAL.

LARGE CROWDS AND BRILLIANT ILLUMINATIONS MAKE A SUCCESS.

Held on the Cranford River Saturday Night.—Plainfield's Band Was There as Was a Large Crowd of Plainfielders.

You might have thought that the great Chinese statesman, Li Hung Chang, was at Cranford Saturday evening by the crowd that began to gather there even before that charming little suburban town had had its last glimpse of the setting sun. It was Cranford's annual event, the river carnival. It was to have been held a week ago but a storm prevented. The postponement was certainly no injury to the carnival for it was hard to see how it could have been improved. Of course, it goes without saying that it was a success.

Early in the evening the roads leading to Cranford began to fill with cyclists, carriages and pilgrims on foot, all journeying toward Cranford as their Mecca, and from then until midnight Cranford was a lively place. The residents did their best to make the affair a success and the result was something magnificent. The river banks were strung for several miles with Chinese lanterns hardly two feet apart, while the streets approaching the river were similarly decorated. Nearly every house within several blocks of the scene of the carnival was decorated and some of them very elaborately. Many of the decorations along the river were very beautiful and some of them quite original. One man, named Moore, had his name spelt out in letters of fire on the river bank. The night was a still one, and the candles that were arranged to form the letters burned brightly.

The crowd itself was worth seeing. Along strolled one of the young men of the Cranford river navy, as the association of the boat owners is called, in his bright red uniform coat and white duck pants with some fair companion leaning on his arm. Then right behind would be a party from the nearby country districts gazing with mouth agape at the wonderful sights. Cyclists there were in countless numbers while all the thoroughfares were blocked by vehicles of all kinds from the fashionable turnout to farm wagon arranged for a straw ride. It is impossible to estimate how many people assembled there but they must have numbered up in the thousands.

Of course, the part of the carnival of primary importance was the fleet of row boats and canoes and they slowly moved up and down the river amid the plandits of the watchers on the banks.

Some of the boats were very handsomely arranged but the canoes were, by far, the most pleasing. Under a bower or canopy of lanterns of fantastic shapes and a charming arrangement of bunting and flowers, sat the navigator at one end deftly handling his paddle while his fair lady reclined at the other end, in some charming and picturesque costume. One canoe received special applause. The decorations were entirely of white while a canopy of white flowers o verhung its two occupants, the beautiful face of which added to the effect.

The Plainfield Cornet Band and the local band were placed in stands about a mile apart and the lively strains of some of the familar marches made the members and visitors instinctively keep time. The band were not the only Plainfielders present for a stroll up the river revealed many familiar faces, some in carriages, some accompanied by their wheels while a large delegation came on the train.

The evening closed with a dance and reception given by the members of the navy to their friends.

Thrown from a Tandem.

Two men riding from Nutley to Newark on a tandem were going along Park avenue, near Cedar Brook, on the way to this city this afternoon, when the front handle-bars parted. The tandem struck a stone and the two riders were thrown to the ground. One of them was badly cut about the head and body and the rider in the rear was also badly bruised. They were taken to Dr. Long's in a carriage, and after the wounds mere dressed they left by train for Newark.

TROTTING AT ITS BEST.

HOTLY CONTESTED RACES AT THE DRIVING PARK LAST SATURDAY.

One Dead Heat Trotted and all the Other Contests Caused Great Interest—A Big Crowd Was Present at the Events.

The patrons of the Gentlemen's Driving Park were given a great day's sport, Saturday afternoon, when a hotly contested programme was carried out. The news that there was to be some fine trotting, spread rapidly and as a result there was fully a thousand people present to enjoy the racing. The crowd reminded one of the old fair days when the crowds used to gather and watch with intense interest the races between their favorite horses. The races were called soon after two o'clock and it was dark when the last one was finished.

The first number on the programme was the race between "Jamie" and "Vesta," owned respectively by James Carpenter and Samuel Kelly, of Woodbridge. Both heats were won by "Jamie" in 2:30¼ and 2:30½. The next race was between John Brown's "Roy B," of Rahway; James Carpenter's "Are Boy," of Woodbridge, and Edward Ames' "Prince" of Woodbridge. The time was 2:41¾, 2:36½ and 2:37. The run off between the first two resulted in a dead heat. 2:37.

William Cartwright's "Harry," of Rahway, James Arkell's "Vanity," of Westfield, and Thomas Brantingham's "Myrtle Twig," of South Plainfield, were matched in the third race and "Harry" won both heats in 2:38 and 2:36½.

The most important race of the afternoon followed and all interest was at fever heat. It was between Joseph Sweet's "Newton B.," of Perth Amboy, J. M. Osborn's "St. Alban," of Plainfield, and W. F. Brock's "Archie," of North Plainfield. All three horses are very fast and a close race resulted. The time was 2:26½, 2:30½ and 2:26½. The run off between "Newton B." and "Archie" was won by the former in 2:26. Peter Osborn drove "Archie" for Mr. Brock.

The last race was between D. Darby's trotter and Harry Gwynette's "Fanwood," both of Fanwood. The time made was 2:36, 2:36¼, 2 39¼.

The crowd present thoroughly enjoyed the afternoon's sport and while the racing was purely for pleasure it did not lessen the interest in the least.

SETTLING THE AVENUE EXTENSION.

Most of the Affected Borough Property Owners Sign the Papers.

In connection with the opening of Watchung avenue, Borough Counsel Chas. A. Reed has succeeded in effecting a settlement with the following people who are to be affected by the opening: G. L. Taynor, L. M. Bird, Harriette Richardson, M. E. Mayer, C. W. Taynor, Mary E. Adams, Chas. Taynor, Elmer V. Taynor, Margaret T. Daley, Mary E. Daley, Elizabeth Mayer, Fred Becker, T. Rutledge, G. F. White, St. Joseph's church, Mary E. Schenck and Emil Messerschmith. It will be remembered that The Daily Press published the figures allowed each one sometime time ago, and the settlement was for the same figures.

There are remaining eight persons who have not settled, but this is due to the fact that several of them are away. However, it is confidently expected that a complete settlement will be made by Friday so that a report of the work can be submitted to the Borough Council Friday evening. All of the above who settled made no objection to the amount set against them and they accepted the terms as satisfactory.

PASTOR TO TALK FOR BRYAN.

Unitarian Minister to Take the Stump for Ten Weeks in Connecticut.

The New York Journal has the following dispatch from this city: Rev. W. L. Utley, the Unitarian clergyman who was prominently mentioned as a probable successor to Rev. Dr. Hobart Clark, of All Souls church, when Dr. Clark first tendered his resignation, will not be able to come to Plainfield, at least, for the present. He is located at Darien, in Fairfield county, Conn., where he is regarded as one of the most talented preachers of his denomination.

A letter received states that the pastor has entered into an arrangement with the National Democratic Committee to take the stump in Connecticut for Bryan and Sewall, and that he will devote the next ten weeks to campaigning.

All Souls church is nothing if not liberal, and had its preference taken the shape of a formal call, the matter of the minister's politics might not have made any difference. As, however, the call has not been given, no action will follow at present.

Mrs. A. B Clarke, of Alfred, N. Y., is visiting with friends in this city.

AN ARMY FUNERAL.

The American Volunteers Hold Services Over the Remains of a Comrade.

The first funeral to be held by the local post of the American Volunteers, took place Saturday evening at Reform Hall. Mrs. Edith May Felter, a member of the local post, quietly passed away last Thursday after a lingering illness, and her fellow-workers observed the last sad rites over her remains.

Captain Mimms, who is a great favorite in this city, acted as leader at the meeting, which was a very impressive one. Unlike the usual meetings, it was very quiet, and there was a solemnity about it that impressed all. Captain Mimms made a few touching remarks about the departed soldier, and the services closed with a consecration meeting. A significant fact was that one of the Salvation Army officers assisted at the meeting. The floral tributes about the white casket told of the sorrowing relatives and friends.

The body, accompanied by the family and near friends, was taken to Yonkers on the 11:28 train Saturday night, and yesterday morning a short service was held at the grave previous to interment. A very touching incident was witnessed Saturday evening when the bereaved mother of the decedent was looking for the last time on the face of her daughter. The scene touched every heart.

Those who served as pall-bearers were P. B. Laire, Theo. Harman, G. H. VanNest, Alex. Grant, W. L. Sharkey and F. Pangborn. All of the above are members of the local American Volunteer Post, No. 6.

BAD TOWNSHIP ROADS.

North Plainfield Highways Getting Into a Wretched Condition.

The residents of North Plainfield Township still continue to complain regarding the wretched condition of the township roads. Formerly there used to be a very heavy travel over the roads, but their present condition has changed the course of travel so that its a rare thing to see a wagon go by. The blame is laid solely on the township committee for they have failed to do their duty. Early in the spring the expenditure of $10 on certain portions of the road would have saved $100, which amount will now have to be spent to put the roads in their proper condition again. Something will have to be done very soon or else the citizens will seek the courts for redress.

FINED FOR HORSE BEATING.

James Kiely's Visits to Road Houses With a Borrowed Carriage Ends in Trouble.

James Kiely, of Netherwood, was arrested Saturday charged with cruelty to a horse, which is owned by John K. Van Ness, of this city. He was taken before Justice Collins at Westfield and fined $25.

Kiely went to Van Ness on August 22d and borrowed a horse and carriage, saying that he wanted to take his children out driving. He then took his four little children and started toward Westfield. On the way he stopped at several road houses, and finally became so druk that he could not manage the horse. In turning a corner in Westfield the carriage was upset and wrecked. Kiely then began beating the horse unmercifully. When Van Ness heard of it he had Kiely arrested.

Taken to the Hospital.

Walter Magué, aged tweny five years, son of Mr. and Mrs. N. C. Magué, of Stebbins place, was taken to the Muhlenberg Hospital yesterday suffering from a complication of diseases, mainly among which is said to be typhoid fever. The patient was taken there in an unconscious state, but this morning his condition was reported as somewhat improved. He was taken there simply because it was considered that he could have the best of care and medical attendance, and the change was sanctioned by the Jr. O. U. A. M., A. O. U. W., and the Pond Beneficicial Society, all of which societies he belongs to.

Walter is well known and universally esteemed by a large circle of friends, who look forward to his speedy recovery.

Real Estate Transfer.

The following transfer of real estate was recorded in the Union County Clerk's office during the week ending August 27th: John E. Kelly to Patrick I. Kelly, Plainfield, lot, LaGrande avenue, $5,000. The following contract has also been filed: City National Bank, Plainfield, with Harold W. Tomlinson, Plainfield, electric wiring the bank, $335.

Caught a Runaway Near Metuchen.

Alex. Filmore, of Park avenue, caught a runaway team between Campbell's Clubhouse, on Park avenue, and Metuchen yesterday. The team was going at breakneck speed and the driver and a companion were thrown out but not seriously injured.

MURRAY HILLS WINNERS

LACK OF JUDGMENT LOST THE GAME FOR THE Y. M. C. A.

For Four Innings They Did Not Score, Then They Rolled Up Six, But Were Equalled by the Opponents in the Next.

The Murray Hill baseball team made its second appearance in this city on Saturday afternoon last, and for the second time they returned home with a victory. The attendance was excellent and every one was confident that the home team would win, but it was not to be, and the cranks were downhearted. The game was a peculiar one in many respects, and the Y. M. C. A. boys should have won. Up to the fourth inning they failed to score, but in that inning they succeeded in placing six runs to their credit, and that was all they got. In the first half of the fifth the visitors, through a combination of errors and two hits also secured six runs. These runs, together with two more previously made, proved to be the winning score. The hits were even, each side making seven, and the errors stood seven to six in favor of the home team. A few slight changes were made in the placing of the Y. M. C. A. boys. Schenck played first base and MacLoughlin covered left field. Burt did not appear and in consequence Warren MacLoughlin occupied the box. He pitched a good game and struck out eleven men, while his opponent only struck out six. Just when the home team needed a few hits they were unable to get them. Careless coaching in the first inning spoiled two runs which they could have had with ease, but the desire to reach home was too strong and they lost the runs through poor judgment. In the field, at times, the Y. M. C. A. boys gave a good exhibition of juggling, but then they have not played in two weeks and their joints were a little stiff. In all, however, both teams played a creditable game, and the crowd seemed to enjoy the contest. Graham was not so effective as in previous games, and he was touched up pretty lively at times.

McKenzie, the old Princeton player, covered first base and put up an ordinary game. He did nothing remarkable neither in the field or at the bat. There was no heavy batting as on the previous occasion, although the home team secured more hits. T. H. Keller umpired the game and gave excellent satisfaction. Tom is all right, and when the crowd gets the best of him they must be well up in the game. Several attempts at bluff on the part of the visitors were dealt with properly by Tee Kay. The Plainfield people would no doubt enjoy another game between these teams, and would probably patronize it largely. Symons distinguished himself by making a three-bagger and reaching home, while Schenck made a two-bagger, which brought in two runs.

Next Saturday the home team will play the Plainfield Athletic Club team. The latter team has been playing good ball, and their defeats are few and far between.

The full score of Saturday's contest is as follows:

LI ON THE DOLPHI.

Inspects the White Squadron and Then Starts for West Point.

THE PROGRAMME FOR TO-DAY

Sunday He Placed a Wreath on Gen Grant's Tomb and Later Called on Mrs. Grant at Her Son's House.

New York, Aug. 31.—Although somewhat fatigued from his visit to the tomb of Gen. Grant yesterday Li Hung Chang was astir early this morning, and at 7:30 o'clock was on his way, accompanied by Gen. Ruger, members of his suite and others, escorted by cavalry and police, to the East Twenty-sixth street dock, where the United States dispatch boat Dolphin was boarded and the journey for the lower bay begun. This trip was to give the ambassador an opportunity of inspecting the white squadron, now at anchor off Stapleton. After the inspection the trip to West Point was begun. The great old Chinaman, despite his age and the fatigue from his lengthy travels, did not take advantage of the Sabbath to gain a little rest. He arose at 6:30 o'clock and had breakfast. At 10 o'clock a delegation of thirty Chinese merchants, representing the Lee family in these parts, called on the ambassador to pay their respects. The delgation, which was headed by the Chinese consul, was attired in all the splendor of Oriental dress, and their pigtails were carefully groomed. The members of the delegation all bowed, almost to the ground, as they entered Li Hung Chang's presence, and the great man returned the salute. The audience lasted for more than an hour and it must have been a pleasant meeting for the delegation was smilling all over when they came out. The most interesting part of yesterday's programme was the visit of the ambassador to the tomb of Gen. Grant on Riverside drive. Li Hung Chang had a great admiration for Gen. Grant, who was one of his heroes. At an early hour in the forenoon a crowd began to gather in the vicinity of the Waldorf anxious to get a glimpse of the famous Chinaman. Acting Inspector Harley with a force of 125 policemen stationed around the house kept the people from crowding around the hotel. There was no cavalry escort, the mounted policemen doing the honors. The programme of the viceroy was a personal one, and this accounts for the absence of the government escort. A dense mass of people lined the sidewalks along Fifth avenue as far as the eye could see. There were bluecoats stationed all along the route covered by the distinguished visitor.

The Start for Gen. Grant's Tomb.

Col. Fred D. Grant accompanied by his son, Ulysses Grant, and his brother, Ulysses Grant of San Diego, Cal., arrived at the Waldorf at 2:20 o'clock. Mrs. Grant, the widow of Gen. Grant, who was staying at the Fifth Avenue hotel, was driven to Col. Grant's house on Sixty-third street, where Li Hung Chang was to visit her after the ceremony at the tomb was over. An immense wreath which the embassador was to place on the tomb of the dead general was first carried down stairs from the viceroy's apartments. This wreath, carefully guarded by a member of Li's suite, was placed in a cab and taken to the tomb. Precisely at 3 o'clock Li Hung Chang, escorted by Gen. Ruger and Col. Grant, came down the stairs and walked through the corridor of the hotel to the Thirty-third street entrance. There a carriage was in waiting and Li took his seat in it. Col. Grant, Gen. Ruger and the official interpreter occupied seats in the same carriage. In the second carriage were Gen. Miles, Gen. Horace Porter and Henry W. Cannon. Ulysses Grant, the son of Col. Fred Grant, his uncle, Ulysses Grant, and Mr. Drew were in the third carriage. Then came the Chinese minister and ex-minister to China George F. Seward. In the last carriage were four attendants of the ambassador. Li Hung Chang's chair occupied a carriage all to itself. The crowd gazed curiously at the chair on which the ambassador is wont to be deported from place to place.

Enthusiastically Received.

Everything was ready in a few minutes and the start for the tomb was made at 3:10 o'clock the carriages driving at a fair gait up Fifth avenue. Li held his famous umbrella over his head all the way. He received an enthusiastic ovation from the 30,000 or more people who lined the Riverside and Morningside drives. A large space surrounding the tomb had been roped in, giving the spectators a good opportunity of witnessing the proceedings. At the foot of the steps leading to the crypt was stationed a sergeant's guard from Governor's island. A solitary policeman stood guard at the gate of the tomb.

Carried in His Famous Chair.

Li Hung Chang and party drove up Riverside drive opposite the tomb at 4:15 o'clock. His appearance was a signal for hearty cheering. There was a short delay while one of the Chinese attendants hastened back to a rear carriage to bring Li Hung Chang's seat and chair. When it arrived he took a seat in it and was carried by four policemen a hundred feet or more, the distance from the road to the tomb. He carried an umbrella in one hand and a gold mounted cane in the other. The members of the suite followed with the other visitors.

Places a Wreath on Grant's Tomb.

On reaching the top of the flight of steps Li alighted. The heavy iron door leading to the tomb was then open. Li, after taking in one hand his floral wreath, entered the crypt and placed it on the iron casket. Before doing so he made a profound bow. At his side were Col. Fred Grant, his brother, U. S. Grant, and his son, U. S. Grant, jr., as well as Lo Fung Lu, the Chinese interpreter. On the steps on side stood Gen. Ruger, Gen. Horace Porter, Col. J. J. McCook, J. H. Seward and Capt. Mills, A. D. C. to Gen. Ruger. Several members of the viceroy's suite, including his son, Lord Li, also stood near the entrance. The occasion seemed to affect Li deeply. In conversation with Col. Grant he referred to his warm admiration of the late general's qualities. One of the leading reasons, he added, for returning home by America was to visit his friend's grave.

Spent Twenty Minutes in the Tomb.

Through the interpreter he made many inquiries about the mausoleum, now building, and towards which he forwarded Hon. John Russell Young a check for $500. After remaining standing for twenty minutes alongside of the casket Li uttered several words in Chinese and made a profound bow. Stepping backward to the door he repeated the same words to himself and made a second bow. Then he withdrew. As he seated himself in the sedan chair the crowd uttered a rousing cheer. This seemed to please him greatly for he gently nodded his head. The entire party then entered carriages and were driven through Morningside park and Central park and Fifth avenue to the residence of Colonel Grant in East 62d street. There a crowd of 3,000 people awaited him. Li declined the use of the sedan chair and leaning on the arms of Gen. Ruger and Col. Grant, he ascended the flight of carpeted stairs. At the door he was met by Ulysses S. Grant, son of the late general. The other members of the party followed.

Li's Visit to Mrs. Grant.

The viceroy was conducted to the parlor where he was received by Mrs. Grant, widow of the general. She stood near a large oil painting of her late husband. Mrs. Grant and Li are old friends, and the meeting was affecting. Mrs. Grant met his excellency in China in 1879, when accompanying Gen. Grant on his trip around the world. The viceroy was presented to all the invited guests. He spoke feelingly to Mrs. Gen. Grant of the great loss she had sustained in the death of her husband and said that he would always cherish the general's memory. Then the viceroy presented Mrs. Grant with several pieces of valuable brocaded silk, a rare Chinese vase and a number of chests of tea. He also presented U. S. Grant, jr., son of Col. Grant, with a valuable Jade stone. The viceroy seemed to enjoy his visit greatly. Refreshments were served in the dining room. Li contented himself with taking two cups of tea and afterwards smoking a few cigarettes. The visit lasted an hour. When Li was on the point of leaving Mrs. Grant presented him with a large sized steel engraving of her husband. Col. Grant's gift to his visitor was a terrestrial globe. Li Hung Chang, accompanied by Col. Grant, reached the Waldorf on his return at 6:45 p. m.

Li's Reception at West Point.

West Point, N. Y., Aug. 30.—Upon his arrival here this afternoon Li Hung Chang, the Chinese ambassador, will be met at the landing by Col. Ernst and his military staff. The distinguished party will be conveyed in carriages to the parade grounds under the escort of the cavalry detachment, accompanied by Captain Parker. At 4 o'clock there will be a review of the battalion of cadets under command of Colonel Mills after which there will be a reception for the ambassador and his suite at the superintendent's quarters.

TRIED TO INCITE A MUTINY.

A Sailor on a British Bark Brought to New York in Irons.

New York, Aug. 31.—The British bark Artisan is in port from Manila via Delaware Breakwater, after a tedious passage lasting 171 days. Capt. Purdy reports that the Artisan experienced a succession of very heavy gales from the west and southwest off the Cape of Good Hope lasting twenty-eight consecutive days. When the Artisan was within fifteen days' sail of the Delaware, a seaman named Frank Jones refused duty and tried to incite several of his shipmates to mutiny. He also threatened to set fire to the ship and attempted to kill the mate and one of the sailors. Capt. Purdy decided to put Jones in irons and locked him up in the lazarette. He will be handed over to the authorities here.

Kicked by a Prisoner and Died.

Fall River, Mass., Aug. 31.—Edward Miller, Saturday evening, stole a horse and wagon belonging to Owen Barry. Miller was arrested and while the call wagon was taking him to the central station he assaulted the driver, Valorous O. Sayward, kicking him in the stomach. After locking up Miller, Sayward became sick and was relieved from duty. He died yesterday. Sayward was 50 years old and a war veteran. A widow and four children survive him.

Murdered His Rival in Love.

Perth Amboy, N. J., Aug. 31.—Insanely jealous because he could not win the hand of Berti Potaki, a Polish girl, George Subrack, aged 36 years, Saturday night attacked and killed with a knife a more successful rival for her hand. The dead man is John Juhasz, 22 years old. Both men are Hungarians.

The Tragic Death of Lieut. Harlan

Dresden, Aug. 31.—Lieut. Harlan of the Prussian Uhlans, who was killed a day or two ago by being thrown from his horse, was the son of a Mr. Harlan, a former United States consul in Germany, who is now living in retirement in Dresden.

AN AWFUL SITUATION.

The Trying Experience of an Unfortunate Swimmer.

Young Plunk Sladdock, a prominent society swell of Hawville, O. T., had just finished whispering into the rosy ear of Miss Gladys Mork, the village belle, the sweet story, old, but forever new, and the maiden's soft cheek was reposing trustfully on his manly bosom, the while he was filled with emotions so joyous and tender that he scarcely knew whether his head was on straight or not, when suddenly a deep, solemn groan of misery gushed in at the open window of the dimly-lighted sitting-room of the Mork villa wherein the young couple sat.

"Oh, mercy," fluttered the maiden, in sudden fright. "Somebody has been listening."

"Wal, I'll soon see about that!" ejaculated the swain, grimly, jerking out his ready revolver with the deftness born of long practice. "Who the dev—that is, who are you, out thar?"

"All that is left of Henry J. Tiddicum," replied a careworn voice, as a head and neck, the latter, unadorned by a collar, were dimly seen rising outside of the window. "Don't mind me. I have no objections to offer."

"What are you doin' out thar, an' what in thunder do you want?"

"I jest want to ask a favor of you, an' then I'll slink away. I hope you will excuse me for mentionin' it in the presence of a lady, but I went in swimmin' down at the creek late this afternoon—it seems almost a year ago to me now—an' some diabolical boys stole my clothes or the cows ate 'em up, or something. Anyhow, they disappeared, an' while I was pryin' around huntin' for 'em a picnic party of young ladies and gentlemen an' a preacher or two got betwixt me an' the creek before I noticed 'em. I have been prognosticatin' around, so to speak, from one slight hidin' place to another ever since.

"I have been blistered by the sun, torn by brambles, chased by dogs, stung by hornets, lacerated by red ants, shot at once or twice by near-sighted gents, an' burned to a ragin' fever with shame. I lost my bearin's after dark, an' finally slipped up to this window in time to hear you propose to the girl I've been engaged to for the last six months, an' whom I loved quite a good deal.

"An' now all I ask is that, in the name of pity, you'll wake Miss Gladys' brother, Hank, an' borrow enough clothes from him to cover me sorter half way decently while I sneak home through town, or if he hain't here, please fling me out a blanket or a barrel, an' let me go. I have nuthin' to live for now, but I don't want to be found dead in the awful an' unsightly condition I'm now in."—N. Y. World.

Elephant Hunting Profits.

By the slaughter of elephants in Africa an annual profit of some £1,000,000 is realized. If the elephants, instead of being left a prey to the hunter, were tamed, they would bring an annual profit of some £135,000,000, according to authorities.

NO MORE CUTTING OFF OF LIMBS

Embalming Substituted for Amputation the Latest in Surgery.

A new and simple mode of treatment has been introduced in France by which, it is claimed, a large proportion of injured limbs now usually amputated can be saved. The method, which is due to Dr. Reclus, was recently described before the French congress of surgery, and is thus explained:

"Whatever the extent or gravity of the lesions, he (Dr. Reclus) never, under any circumstances, amputates the injured limb, but merely wraps it in antiseptic substances by a veritable embalming process, leaving nature to separate the dead from the living tissues. This method of treatment possesses the double advantage of being much less fatal than surgical exaeresis, and of preserving for the use of the patient, if not the entire limb, at any rate a much larger part than would be left after amputation. He advocates this very conservative treatment on account of the excellent effects of hot water, which he uses freely. After the skin has been shaved and cleansed from all fatty substances by ether, etc., in the usual way, a jet of hot water 60 to 62 degrees C. (140 to 144 degrees), but not higher, is made to irrigate all the injured surfaces and to penetrate into all the hollows and under all the detached parts of the wound, without exception. This is the only way of removing all clots and to wash away all foreign bodies, together with the micro-organisms they may contain. The advantages of hot water at this high temperature are threefold: First, hot water at this temperature is antiseptic, heat greatly increases the potency of antiseptic substances; second, it is hemostatic (that is, staunches the flow of blood); third, it helps to compensate for the loss of heat resulting from the bleeding, and especially from the traumatic shock. After the 'embalming' process and the dead tissue has been separated from the living, the surgeon has nothing to do except to divide the bone at a suitable spot. According to Reclus the results attained are remarkable."—Philadelphia Press.

BUTTERFLIES AS ORNAMENTS.

Beautiful Specimens Cultivated in Captivity for Decorative Purposes.

One of the new and curious fads is the treatment of beautiful butterflies, not as objects of scientific interest, but as decorative articles. When a valuable collection of mounted butterflies was sold recently, handsome specimens were bought by various persons, not with the intention of making them features of a butterfly collection, but solely for the sake of the inherent beauty of the butterflies.

A comparatively recent invention for mounting and exhibiting insects has made it easy to use butterflies in this fashion. Handsome moths and butterflies are now mounted upon plaster of paris tiles, each tile having a depression for receiving the body of the insect. The mounted insect is covered with a glass plate of the same size and shape as the plaster, and glass and plaster are firmly held together by strips of paper pasted on. In some instances, for better decorative effect, the plaster is gilded. No lettering or numbering appears upon the visible surface. On the pasteboard back of the plaster tile is written the scientific name of the butterfly, together with whatever account of the insects and habits may be desired

As some of the tropical butterflies are of rare beauty, the decorative effect of the insects when thus mounted for exhibition is very striking, and three or four disposed about a room attract much attention and interest. This fad is less costly than many others. Specimen butterflies of rare beauty may be had at from two to five dollars, and the mounting does not add materially to their cost. Many are not only beautiful, but also valuable as illustrating the effects of evolution. The non-scientific interest in butterflies is likely to increase the demand for handsome varieties. Those from India and Brazil are especially prized for their beauty. As there is great danger that the perfect butterfly will be injured when captured, butterflies are now cultivated in captivity, especially to supply the demand for interesting specimens.—N. Y. Sun.

GERMAN SOCIALISTS

Suitable Halls in Gotha Denied Them for Their Congress.

TO MEET AT SIEBLICHEN ON OCT. 11

Emperor William's Brewing Ministerial Crisis—German Catholics Warned Against Emigrating to the United States.

Berlin, Aug. 31.—It is now announced that the annual congress of the German socialists will be convened at Sieblichen, near Gotha, on Oct. 11. It was originally intended to hold the congress in the city of Gotha, but this was found impossible, for the reason that the executive committee of the socialists were refused the occupancy of any hall in that city capable of containing the number of persons who would be present as delegates, to say nothing of the spectators, the owners declining to allow their halls to be used for the purpose of socialist meetings. The programme of the congress is heavily charged with resolutions in which a number of new questions appear. The meeting is likely to be an exceedingly lively and interesting one, despite the fact that the anarchists will be kept out of the congress, for there is certain to be a row over the upheaval which has occurred within the fold of the Vorwarts, the leading organ of the German socialists, six of the editors of which journal, headed by Dr. Adolf Braun, published a protest in the leading colums of the Vorwarts on Thursday denouncing Herr Liebnecht's dictatorial management of the paper. Whether Liebnecht be present in Berlin or absent from the city he absolutely controls the policy of the Vorwarts without even the pretense of consulting with his colleagues.

The Ministerial Crisis.

The temporary silence of the German newspapers in regard to the ministerial crisis does not imply that the emperor has arranged with Prince Hohenlohe that the latter shall retain the chancellorship, nor does the announcement of the Reichsanzeiger, the official gazette, that a bill for the reform of the military judicial procedure is to be considered by the bundesrath, avert the resignation of the chancellor or remove the probability of a conflict between the kaiser and the reichstag. The fact is that a great deal depends upon the nature of the measure placed before the bundesrath. If the emperor assents to the reform demanded by the reichstag making the military tribunals independent proceedings and the supreme military court's final proceedings public no constitutional struggle will arise over this question. But the emperor certainly will not assent to such a measure and every one knowing the exact situation still expects that the matter will give rise to a fight in the reichstag of the gravest character in defense of the constitutional authority against the court cabals. If Prince Hohenlohe retires after seeing the visit of the czar to Breslau concluded, his retirement will be the signal for a general rising against the emperor's secret advisers, his military-cabinet, his naval cabinet and his civil cabinet, which are now practically ruling the affairs of the empire.

Rebuked by His Mother.

There are court whispers that the Empress Frederick has written to the kaiser rebuking him for ignoring the visit to Germany of the Duke and Duchess of Sparta, the latter the emperor's sister, who have recently been staying with the latter's mother, Empress Frederick at Kronberg. The emperor quarreled with his sister over her conversion to the Greek church upon the occasion of her marriage to the heir to the Greek throne and has since given the cold shoulder to her and her husband.

Against Emigration to American.

The Catholic congress, which closed a five days session at Dortmund on Friday, passed a resolution proposed by Dr. Porsch warning German Catholics against emigrating to America under the present economic conditions. Among the other resolutions adopted were those condemning the practice of duelling in the army and navy and deploring the fact that on Christian power has effectively espoused the cause of the Armenians. Resolutions were also passed advocating the repeal of the anti-Jesuit law and the prohibition of the employment of married women in factories.

Theosophist Convention.

Berlin, Aug. 31.—The American Theosophists, Meedames Tingley and Wright and Messrs. Hargrove and Patterson, had a warm reception upon their arrival here at the hands of the representative Theosophists of Germany. The Theosophists of Berlin, Hamburg, Bresden, Nurnberg and Breslau have sent delegates to the Theosophist convention.

To Watch the Campaign Here.

Berlin, Aug. 31.—Dr. Barth, the noted radical leader in the reichstag, sailed for New York from Bremen on Aug. 25 on board the steamer Havel. He goes to America for the purpose of watching the presidential campaign and the election. Dr. Barth is especially interested in the currency and tariff questions.

LED BY SUPERSTITION

Cause of Anti-Foreign Feeling Among China's Lower Orders

IDEAS ENTERTAINED BY THE IGNORANT

An Extraordinary Incident Showing How Readily the Hatred for Foreigners May Be Kindled into Dangerous Proportions.

Tokio, Aug. 12, via San Francisco, Aug. 31.—An extraordinary instance of the readily excited anti-foreign inflammability of the lower orders in China has just occurred at Foo Chow. On the 19th of July some foreigners accompanied by their servants, went for a short excursion from that city and arriving at the temple of the Goddess of Mercy, in the suburbs, entered into conversation with the abbess as to the meaning of some votive bags suspended in the temple. The abbess explained that the bags contained the names of children who, on being attacked by smallpox, were brought to the temple and offered at the altar of the goddess, after which ceremony—supposed to save their lives—they were taken away, the bags containing their names being left in their stead. While this conversation was going on a crowd of children collected outside and began crying out "foreign devils." The foreigners took no notice, but their servants rebuked the children, telling them that if they did not desist, the foreigners would catch them. The children ran off in alarm and reported to their parents that foreigners had come to secure and carry them off. A panic quickly ensued. The alarm was given and amid the beating of gongs a large number of peasants and rowdies, variously armed, began to assemble for the purpose of attacking the foreigners in the nunnery. Fortunately the elders of the place succeeded in quieting the tumult and the foreigners got home without any knowledge of the fate they had so barely escaped.

Absurd Superstitions.

But the train had been fired. Rumors were quickly spread that the foreigners then engaged in building at Ching Yang wanted a number of children to bury at the foundations of the new houses, the ground being inconveniently soft, and were also about to steal all the name bags in the temples, to be used as charms. A general stampede of children and families took place, some flying from Foo Chow and others running to it for refuge. Some boats arriving at a place fifteen miles down the river were seen to be manned by persons wearing light jackets and Japanese-made straw hats. These were mistaken for foreigners come to seize the name bags in the temple. The priests, closing the doors in apprehension of a riot, were accused of having been bribe by the foreigners, and in the sequel the temple doors were broken in, the priests badly beaten and all the name bags recovered by the people, who then started enmasse for Foo Chow. The story constitutes a striking commentary of the ideas entertained about foreigners by the lower order in China. Everywhere the theory seems to prevail that Chinese children are special objects of foreign ferocity. A man recently arrested in Hunan for killing a child confessed under the bamboo torture that he had been hired by a foreigner. Had the magistrate taken him at his word the missionaries in the neighborhood would probably have been murdered. But a further application of the bamboo induced the man to withdraw his confession.

Forest Fires in the Northwest.

Astoria, Ore., Aug. 31.—Forest fires are still raging in the vicinity of Oakpoint, Wash., but a change in the wind has deflected the flames northward, and Oakpoint City, as well as several canneries on the Columbia river, which were threatened, are now out of danger. Benson's logging camp, the largest plant in this section, was totally destroyed. Twenty square miles of heavy timber has been consumed, entailing a loss of nearly half a million dollars. The fire is now well back in the forest and several logging camps are threatened.

Bicyclist Killed by a Trolley Car.

Bridgeport, Conn., Aug. 31.—Hugh L. Wade of Easton, aged 33, was killed by a Washington bridge trolley car last evening on Stratford avenue. Wade was riding a bicycle between the tracks when he turned to cross in front of the car. The fender struck the wheel and Wade rolled beneath the car. The motorman was not arrested.

Died During a Fit of Coughing.

Middletown, Conn., Aug. 31.—Miss Bridget Sullivan of New York city broke a blood vessel while coughing Saturday night and died almost immediately. She was as well as usual up to the time she was seized with the coughing paroxysm. She was about 30 years old and was visiting Mrs. John Shannon of this city.

An Offer for Fitz and Choynski.

BELLS.

Hear the bells, bells, bells—cycle bells!
How they jingle through the air,
Tinkle, tinkle, everywhere;
O, what jolly, merry notes
Ripple from their silver throats.

Ring, ring—peal, peal—
See the flying steeds of steel;
All the boys are bold as men,
All the men are boys again;
Wheeling sets a scorching pace
For the plodding human race.

Hear the bells, bells, bells—mellow bells!
Ringing early, ringing late—
Wheeling antics never wait;
All the world is cycle-mad,
Riding fashion's daring fad.

Peal, peal—ring, ring—
Every rider is a king;
O, what dignity they feel
When they mount the dizzy wheel;
O, what grace and valor meet
On an airy cycle seat.

Hear the bells, bells, bells—weary bells!
See the noisy, rushing throng
Challenging the trolley gong:
Cycles have the right of way,
Everywhere and every day.

Ring, ring—peal, peal—
Don't you hear the clanging wheel?
Never was there such a din
Since the earth began to spin—
Since she made her primal run,
In her orbit round the sun.

Hear the bells, bells, bells—rival bells!
See the vaulting heroes spring;
Hear the danger signals ring:
Bluster, bluster, off they go,
In a reeling, wheeling row.

Peal, peal—ring, ring—
How the buzzing tires sing;
Nothing spurs to fearless deeds
Like these fragile, agile steeds;
Courage never wanes or sleeps
While the flying courser leaps.

LOVE AND DEBT.

R. RHODES was the high sheriff of —— county, Mass., and his good name, inherited from the father and cherished by the son, made him not only popular as an officer, but rather wealthy as a man. Why Mr. Rhodes had never got married the ladies could not ascertain, though they talked the matter over and over very often, but almost all said there must have been some cause in his youth—Mr. Rhodes was 35, at least,—which was known only to himself and perhaps one other.

"Some disappointment," said Miss Anna, a young lady who thought it wrong that gentlemen should be disappointed, "some fatal disappointment."

"Not at all," said her maiden aunt, "not at all; nobody ever thought that Mr. Rhodes had courage enough to offer himself to a lady. He is so modest that I should like to see him make a proposal."

"No doubt of it, auntie; no doubt of it; and to hear him, too."

"Your father and I," said Anna's mother, "once thought that Mr. Rhodes would certainly marry Miss Susan Morgan, who then lived in the neighborhood."

"Was he accepted by Miss Morgan?" asked Anna.

"I don't believe she ever had an offer," said Aunt Arabella.

"Perhaps not," said Mrs. Wilton; "but she certainly deserved one from Mr. Rhodes; and I have frequently thought that, during services in church, he was about to make proposals before the congregation, as he kept his eyes continually on her."

"Do you think," asked Anna, "that Miss Morgan was as fond of him as he appeared to be of her?"

"She certainly did not take the same means of showing her feelings," said Mrs. Wilton, "for she never looked at him in church, and seemed to blush when, by any means, she discovered that others had noticed his gazing upon her."

"I should think," said Anna, partly aside, "that a man like Mr. Rhodes would not lack confidence to address a lady, especially if she was conscious of her own feelings and of his infirmity."

"LET ME TAKE THAT."

Mrs. W. smiled, and Aunt Arabella was about to say that no lady should ever evince her feelings under such circumstances, when Mrs. Wilton remarked that once, when she had joked Miss Morgan upon her conquest, she rather pettishly replied "that she may have subdued him, but he had never acknowledged her power."

"Conquest and possession did not go together, then," said Anna.

"Well, is this attachment the cause of Mr. Rhodes' single condition? Was there no one else at whom he could look in church, who would be likely to look at him also?" said Anna, nodding toward her aunt.

"No," said Aunt A., with a hearty smile, "none in the pew to which you allude. I at least was too strongly impressed with the force of the Tenth Commandment, 'thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's ox nor his ass,' ever to be looking over Miss Morgan at Mr. Rhodes."

One morning Mr. Rhodes was sitting in his office, when one of the deputies read off a list of executions and attachments, which he had in hand to serve, and among them was one against a lady at a short distance. The amount was not great, but enough to bring distress upon a family.

"Let me take that," said the sheriff, with some feeling; "it is out of your walk and I will drive to the residence of the person to-morrow morning."

The modest vehicle of the officer stopped at the door of a neat dwelling house in a retired, delightful situation, where all things told of taste and economy. The sheriff opened the gate, ascended the steps of the house, and asked if Miss Morgan was at home.

The servant answered in the affirmative.

As Mr. Rhodes passed along the hall he thought over the part he had to perform—how he should introduce the subject—how, if the debt should prove to be onerous, he should contrive to lighten the burden by his own abilities; and when he reached the door he had conned his salutation to the lady and his opening speech on the subject of his official call.

The servant opened the door—Mr. Rhodes entered with a bow. He blushed, hesitated and at length took a seat, to which Miss Morgan directed him by a graceful turn of her hand.

After a few moments' hesitancy, Mr. Rhodes felt that it was his business to open a conversation that would explain the subject of his visit; so he offered, by way of preface, a few remarks upon the coldness of the spring.

"Yes," said Miss Morgan; "but yet, cold as the weather has been, and even notwithstanding a few frosts, you see the trees have their richest foliage, and the flowers are luxuriant."

"True," said Mr. Rhodes; "it seems that though there may be a great deal of coldness, nature will have her own way, and, in time, assert her prerogative, late, perhaps, Miss Morgan, but still the same."

Mr. Rhodes felt rather startled at his own speech, and looking up, was infinitely astonished to see that Miss Morgan was blushing like one of the roses that were hanging against the window.

"We are always pleased," said Miss Morgan, "to see what we admire breaking through the chilling influences by which they have been restrained, and satisfying our hopes of their ultimate disclosure."

Miss Morgan was looking directly toward the bush on which three roses were clustering in most gorgeous richness.

Mr. Rhodes put his hand into his pocket, and felt of the official papers, to gather a little courage from their contact.

"I have," said Mr. Rhodes, "an attachment."

Miss Morgan this time lent blushes to the rose.

"The attachment, Miss Morgan, is of a distant date, and I felt that much time had already elapsed; that, indeed, instead of intrusting it, as I might have done, to another, I thought that in a matter of so much delicacy it would be proper for me to come in person."

"For me, Mr. Rhodes? the attachment for me?"

"As I was saying, Miss Morgan, the attachment I have; and I felt it a matter of delicacy to come in person, thinking that my own means might be considered, if there was any deficiency in the value of this property."

"Mr. Rhodes, you seem to be rather enigmatical."

"I, nevertheless," said Mr. R——, "mean to speak very plainly when I say that with reference to this attachment, Miss Morgan, should you honor me so far as to accept my profession, my pecuniary means would be devoted to the—to the attachment.'

"I was," said Miss Morgan, "wholly unprepared for this."

"I was afraid that was the case," said Mr. Rhodes, "and therefore I thought it more delicate to make the offer in person.

"You are very considerate, Mr. Rhodes."

'Am I, then, to understand, Miss Morgan, that my proposition is agreeable to you? In other words, that it is accepted?"

"Mr. Rhodes," said the lady, with much hesitation, "I must claim a little time to think of it."

"I will call, then, on my return from the village beyond."

"Let me ask a little more time," said she; "say next week."

"Miss Morgan," said Mr. Rhodes, "the matter requires immediate answer; the attachment is of an old date, and time now is everything. My feelings are deeply interested; and may I not hope that while you are using so short a time to consider a subject which you are pleased to view as of such great delicacy with regard to yourself, you will allow my feelings to weigh with you in deciding in favor of my proposition, which, I assure you, is made after due deliberation upon my ability to perform my part of the contract."

Mr. Rhodes then took his leave, astonished at his own volubility, which, indeed, nothing could have induced but his desire to relieve one so much esteemed as Miss Morgan from present embarrassment.

Mr. Rhodes drove to a neighboring place, deeply occupied with his good purposes toward Miss Morgan, satisfying himself that the pecuniary sacrifice he had proposed was due to his untold and unknown affection for her, and not beyond his means.

Miss Morgan felt a renewal of all those feelings which had rather been dormant than quenched in her bosom, and desired the advice of her married sister, who was unfortunately absent. That Mr. Rhodes had once felt a strong attachment to her, she could not doubt, that he had continued to cherish, as she had done, the reciprocal feeling, she had not ventured to hope. But as it was evident that the proposition of Mr. Rhodes was not from any sudden impulse, Miss Morgan resolved to signify her assent to a proposition so worthy of consideration on all accounts.

In less than two hours Mr. Rhodes drove up to the door again, fastened his horse, and was readmitted to the little back parlor, which he had occupied in an earlier part of the day.

"Miss Morgan," said Mr. Rhodes, "before receiving your answer, which I trust you are prepared to give in favor of accepting my proposals, I wish to state to you that I have considered all the circumstances of my situation and yours, and find myself better able, from some previously unconsidered matters, to keep my part of the arrangement than I thought myself when I ventured to make the offer; so that the kindness, if you will have that word used in this matter, is all on your side."

"Under present circumstances—I mean those of our long acquaintance and our family intercourse, though of late rather interrupted," said Miss Morgan, "and my right, by years," she added, casting a glance at a looking-glass that showed only matured womanhood, "to speak for myself, I have concluded to consider your proposal favorably."

"Consider! Miss Morgan, consider favorably! May I not hope you mean that you will accept it?"

Miss Morgan gave no answer.

"Nay, then, it is accepted," said Mr. Rhodes, with a vivacity that Miss Morgan thought would have brought him to her lips—her hand, at least.

"How happy you have made me," said Mr. Rhodes; "having now disposed of this matter, there are ten days allowed."

"That's very short," said Miss Morgan; "only ten days; you seem to be in a haste unusual to you at least."

"It is the attachment, and not I, that is imperative.

"You speak rather abstractedly, Mr. Rhodes."

"But truly, very truly, Miss Morgan."

"But why limit us to ten days?"

"The attachment requires it."

"I thought," she said, smiling, "the attachment would be for life."

Mr. Rrodes looked exceedingly confused. At length he started suddenly toward the lady.

"My dear Miss Morgan, is it possible that for once in my life I have blundered into the right path? Can I have been so fortunately misconceived?"

"If there is any mistake," said Miss Morgan, "I hope it will be cleared up immediately. I can scarcely think that Mr. Rhodes would intentionally offend an unprotected orphan, the daughter of his former friends."

Mr. Rhodes hastily pulled from his pocket his writ of attachment, and showed it to Miss Morgan.

"This is certainly your name, and this property—"

"Is the disputed possession," said Miss Morgan, "of my sister-in-law of the same name, Mrs. Susan Morgan."

Mr. Rhodes stood confounded. He was afraid of the course which the matter was likely to take.

"So, Mr. Rhodes, you see the attachment was for this property. Now, as it is not mine, and as, indeed, I have little of my own, you, of course, have no claim upon my person."

"I beg your pardon, my dear, Miss Morgan, I beg your pardon, but be pleased to read lower down on the writ! you will see—look at it, if you please—'for want thereof take the body.'"

"But, Mr. Rhodes, the promise was extorted under a misapprehension, so that I am released."

"No, not at all; you are required only to fulfill the promise just as you intended when you made it. And as to the attachment for the widow and her property, I'll serve that by deputy."

In ten days the clergyman, and not the magistrate, was called in, and the whole arrangement was consummated.

And Aunt Arabella who was so careful about the Tenth Commandment, declared that it said nothing about coveting a neighbor's husband, and if it had, she did not think she should violate it.—Indianapolis Sun.

Nearly as Bad.

Telling what we have heard to another's disadvantage is not so bad as starting a slander without provocation, but it is next to it. Slanders do more harm through being repeated by those who just tell what they have heard than through being first told by the one who invented them. If a slanderer could find no one to pass along his slanders without being sure as to their truth or falsity, he would have no success in his occupation. "Where no wood is, there the fire goeth out; so where there is no talebearer, the strife ceaseth." Before we tell anything to another's discredit we should first know (not merely think) it is true, and then we should be sure that good is to come of its repeating.

HORSE IN A MANHOLE.

Thousands of Chicago People Witness an Unusual Sight.

Animal's Head and Forelegs Remain Above Ground, But Its Hind Feet Play a Lively Tattoo on the Ends of Telephone Pipes.

Thousands of people blockaded the corners of Madison and Dearborn streets at Chicago the other day to witness a sight rarely seen in the city—the head and forelegs of a horse protruding from a manhole and the animal making occasional frantic but futile efforts to extricate himself.

The horse belonged to A. C. McClurg & Co., and was being driven east on Madison street. Albert Thorsen was the driver. The horse was hitched to an ordinary delivery wagon.

Passing Dearborn street at 11 o'clock, immediately in front of a Madison street grip car, Thorsen noticed that the cover of the manhole at the southeast intersection of the thoroughfare had been removed. This manhole offers access to the underground wires of the Chicago Telephone company. The cover had been removed by Ed Jansen, who was cleaning out the manhole.

Thorsen endeavored to pass the opening on its north side, believing there was plenty of room for his wagon between the manhole and the car tracks, and that the grip car was not in dangerous proximity. In both of these conclusions, however, Thorsen was in error.

The grip car bumped the wagon, and the wagon shoved the horse.

The latter made an effort to clear the manhole and failed. Its front feet passed the dangerous opening, but the rest of its body disappeared from sight.

When Thorsen realized his danger he uttered a shout fraught with fear for his own safety, rather than as a warning to anybody else in danger; but it helped to save the life of Jansen, who was working inside the manhole. It notified him that something out of the ordinary was taking place above ground. Without an instant's loss of time he backed into a tunnel eight or ten feet in length, having an outlet at a manhole just around the corner on Dearborn street, in which his body was half hidden when the commotion above ground began.

While he was thus engaged in seeking a place of safety the hind hoofs of the horse were playing a lively tattoo on the protruding ends of pipe containing telephone wires, where Jansen had but a moment before been working. Other employes of the telephone company raised the cover of the Dearborn street manhole, and Jansen was quickly brought to the surface; not, however, until he was several shades paler than when he entered the Madison street opening, and trembling with fright at his narrow escape.

Immense crowds quickly gathered. Every window in the buildings on the four corners of these two busy streets was filled with sightseers, and within five minutes there was a crowd so dense the policemen could do nothing with it. As rapidly as the policemen drove the people back from one side of the manhole, the struggling hundreds on the other crowded to the front and interfered with all efforts to release the unfortunate horse. Almost everybody within shouting distance of the scene of the accident had a suggestion to offer as to how best to remove the horse from the manhole, and the suggestions were almost as various as the suggesters were numerous.

The first experiment was tried with a piece of iron pipe three inches in diameter. A rope was passed behind the fore shoulders of the animal and then made secure to the center of the pipe, which was 12 or 14 feet in length. It was brought down close to the horse and as many men as could grasp the pipe prepared for a lift, on which they exerted all their strength. The pipe was bent into almost the shape of a letter U, but the horse was not budged an inch.

Then hook and ladder truck No. 6 was telephoned for. The fire lads quickly responded, bringing with them a wagon load of paraphernalia. Practically the first experiment was duplicated, a 16-foot ladder being substituted for the iron pipe, but when the ladder bent and threatened to break this scheme was also abandoned.

Then a piece of timber two by six, ten or twelve feet long, was strapped flatwise to the ladder and efforts made to liberate the horse resumed on this basis.

With the ladder thus strengthened and the lifting power increased by hundreds of willing hands for which there was room on the ladder, the horse was lifted bodily from the manhole and laid out on the street amid the cheers of the thousands of people who had watched the interesting process, which had consumed almost an hour.

There were abrasions here and there on the horse, but after recovering from the nervous shock he was led off apparently without being much the worse for his exciting and unusual experience.

Facts About Cholera.

The explanation of the German cholera epidemic of 1893, given by Dr. Barry, is conclusive as to the danger of water contamination. The outbreak in Hamburg, notwithstanding the new filtered water supply there, was at first decidedly startling, but the officials soon found that owing to a settlement of some masonry connected with a conduit conveying the water from the filter beds to the pumping station unfiltered Elbe water had got access to the supply. Dr. Barry arrives at four definite conclusions: 1. That cholera diffusion invariably follows lines of human intercourse. 2. That increased steam communication by land and water, especially between central Asia and Europe, has led to a rapidity in the diffusion of cholera hitherto unprecedented. 3. That cholera in its progress by way of river traffic has fastened on more centers of population than when its diffusion has taken place overland. 4. That all "explosions" of cholera have been found, on investigation, to have been referable to specifically polluted water supplies.—London News.

Brains Sleep in Sections.

Sir James Crichton Browne, the expert on brain diseases, holds that insomnia is not attended with such disastrous consequences as is commonly supposed. It is not as dangerous as the solicitude of the sufferer. He suggests that the brains of literary men, who are the most frequent victims, acquire the trick of the heart, which takes a doze of a fraction of a second after each beat, and so manages to get six hours' rest in 24. Some brains, in cases of insomnia, sleep in sections, different brain centers going off duty in turn.—Chicago Tribune.

From a City Point of View.

She was from the city, where the lawns are well watered and well kept, and was on a visit to the country, where the grass is mostly hay, and very dry and dusty even for hay.

"Papa," she said, thoughtfully, "the people never try to water the grass out here, do they?"

"Of course not," he replied. "It would be too much of a task."

"They leave it all to God to look after, don't they?" she persisted.

He nodded his head, and for a few minutes she was lost in thought.

Delicate Dress Goods.
Some gowns are so dainty in the weave, so delicate in tint, that they seem to soil by being looked at—one or two wearings making them unpresentable, NOT USELESS. We make a specialty of cleaning fine fabrics, the more delicate the material, the better the results. Sometimes an accident will ruin a gown, without injuring the texture. We dye them then, sometimes we get a prettier effect than the original color. Fine goods stand redyeing. The finer the material the better the new color. We charge so little for cleaning or dyeing, that even if you are in doubt as to the result, it's worth while to experiment. Want a new evening gown for a dollar or two? Laundry drivers will receive your work.

MAJOR M'KINLEY'S CAMPAIGN.

The Situation in the West as Viewed at Republican Headquarters at Chicago.

Chicago, Aug. 31.—Letters were sent recently from republican national headquarters to fifteen or twenty chairmen of state central committees, requesting weekly information on the party prospects in their states. Replies were received from Kentucky, Indiana, Montana, Idaho, Washington, Nebraska and South Dakota. All of them reported active campaign work and steady improvement for McKinley. Mr. Payne, who is acting chairman in Mr. Hanna's absence, said this morning to a reporter of the United Associated Presses: "Reviewing the campaign reports which have been received in person and by letter, I can say they are encouraging from the cities in the western states, but it is a fact that back in the agricultural regions of Minnesota, Iowa, the Dakotas and Kansas there is some lukewarmness towards the republicans on account of the money question. Hard and active work is needed in the states west of the Mississippi. The votes that Bryan will get in Wisconsin will be scattered."

PANIC THREATENED.

Weyler's Decree Stopping the Gathering of the Coffee Crop Causes a Sensation.

New York, Aug. 31.—A special dispatch to the Herald from Havana, Cuba, via Key West, Fla., says: "Capt.-Gen. Weyler's proposed decree to forbid planters to make any attempts to save their incoming sugar, coffee, cocoa and tobacco crops, and virtually approving Gen. Gomez's threat to paralyze the agricultural and commercial interests of the island while the war continues, is creating a big sensation, and a panic is threatened. It is rumord that when Marquis Apezteguia, the president of the Spanish conservative party on the island, and a leading sugar producer, headed a committee of Spanish planters and merchants who called at the palace Friday to protest, Capt.-Gen. Weyler denied them a hearing. Then, it is alleged, a secret meeting was held Friday night, at which it was decided to send telegrams to Spain, via Key West, demanding the recall of Capt.-Gen. Weyler, and asking that Gen. Polavieja be sent to succeed him."

TO ISSUE AN OPEN LETTER.

Understood That Cleveland Will Soon Express Himself on the Money Question.

New York, Aug. 31.—The Herald says: President Cleveland's visit to this city Saturday afforded him an excellent opportunity of discussing the political situation with the sound money members of his cabinet. It is said that Mr. Cleveland did not suffer the golden chance to slip and Messrs. Olney, Carlisle, Harmon and Lamont and Mr. Whitney, whose sound money views are well known, held, it is said, an informal discussion of the situation, dwelling principally upon the question of a third ticket. It is understood that Mr. Cleveland told the gentlemen present that he would shortly issue an open letter on the money question, and that he had wished to consult them as to its details. The discussion was prolonged for more than an hour preceding the luncheon served in Mr. Whitney's house, and was also continued during that repast.

BRYAN'S JOURNEY WESTWARD.

To Speak To-day at Ripley and Then Move on to Cleveland.

Jamestown, N. Y., Aug. 31.—Mr. and Mrs. Bryan, attended service at the First Presbyterian Church in Jamestown yesterday and heard the Rev. G. M. Colville, the pastor, preach a sermon from the text beginning "He saw a great multitude." This was construed into a reference to the audience which Mr. Bryan addressed at Celoron on Lake Chautauqua Saturday night. This morning the nominee and his wife started on the trip up the length of the lake by boat, to Chautauqua, and from there they will go to Ripley, where Mr. Bryan will speak. Then they will continue their journey westward to Cleveland.

American Steam Laundry at Maracaibo.

Washington, Aug. 30.—The consul at Maracaibo reports to the state department the establishment there of an American steam laundry with $20,000 capital. Hitherto, washing was not returned for two or three weeks, and, as the citizens enjoy well-starched shirt bosoms, the venture is a great success. A large brewery has also been started by resident Germans. It is said to be driving out the cheap European brandies as well as furnishing ice to the inhabitants.

'FRISCO IS SLIGHTED

A Big Portion of Hawaiia's Exports Now Sent Around the Horn.

DIRECT SHIPMENTS TO NEW YORK

Trade with the United States for Six Months Ending June 30 This Year Almost Double the Amount for the Same Months Last Year.

Washington, Aug. 30.—Consul-General Mills, at Honolulu, supplementing a former report calling attention to the diversion of Hawaiian trade from San Francisco to New York, writes to the department under date of August 13, that during the six months ending June 30 the total exports from Honolulu to the United States were valued at $8,748,526.40, against $4,499,516 27 for the corresponding period last year, an increase of nearly $4,000,000. Of this total $8,542,781.64 represents the value of sugar sent to America, $2,457,532 of it going around the Horn to New York' except a small cargo which went to Boston. Already during the present calendar year the direct shipments to New York have amounted to $3,046,368.49. Consul Muth at Magdeburg in a report to the state department, says the first to reply to Germany in reference to increased sugar bounties comes from Austria where the consumption tax has increased from $4.45 to $5.26 per 100 kilos raw sugar net, and the total amount of export bounty to be granted by the government has gone up from $2,023,000 to $3,641,400. The new law went into operation Aug. 1, and lasts one year. France for the present has only increased the duty 68 cents on raw sugar and 87 cents on refined grades per kilos to prevent German sugar entering the country with her own product, but she is confidently expected to increase the export bounty soon or pay an open bounty to meet German sugar in the world's market.

YOUNG BARON'S DOWNFALL.

Denied the Girl of His Choice He Flees to America and Becomes a Thief.

New York, Aug. 31.—A young man who describes himself as Joseph, Baron von Rabeneck of Philadelphia, is in the Tombs prison to which he has been committed on the charge of snatching a purse from a woman's hand. He told the following story: "I was born in the province of Rhine. My father, Baron Rabeneck, who is now dead, was a colonel in the German army. I was educated in the universities of Bahn and Gottengen. Later I became a lieutenant in the German army. A short time ago I was engaged to a poor girl in the town where I was stationed. I was about to marry her when my mother interferred, having other arrangements for my marriage. When I could not marry the girl I fled to this country, arriving first in Philadelphia. I had plenty of money but it did not last long and I was soon penniless. I became so reduced that I was compelled to accept a position as a lunchman in a cafe. I came to New York and got work in a saloon at $3.50 per week, and was finally, after one week, compelled to leave. Then I hunted for work everywhere. I got up at 4 o'clock and watched the papers, but could get nothing. Finally, after being without food for two days, I became desperate and santched a woman's purse." The young baron told his story not with the air of a man seeking newspaper notoriety, but with much nervousness and hesitation.

TWO DAYS IN A TYPHOON.

Then the Ship Tam O'Shanter Passed Through Miles of Snakes.

New York, Aug. 30.—The clipper ship Tam O'Shanter of Portland, Me., has arrived here from Hong Kong after an eventful passage of 110 days. Capt. Peabody reports that when two days out from Kong Kong he encountered a heavy typhoon lasting forty-eight hours. The storm was accompanied by a tremendous rain storm which deluged the ship for two whole days, accompanied by severe thunder and lightning. Capt. Peabody, who is not prone to telling fish or snake stories, reports that off the coast of Borneo the ship passed through fifty miles of water literally covered with snakes of all sizes and colors. Such large numbers of snakes are frequently seen in eastern seas.

Zante Currants for the United States.

Washington, Aug. 31.—The American consul at Zante, Greece, announces the first shipment of Zante currants to the United States in several years, the last tariff act (Gorman bill) having abolished the discrimination against these currants under the McKinley statue. The first two shipments sent this month were of 1,550 barrels.

Still Wailing About Samoa.

CLAWSON IS THE ACCUSED.

Such Was the Verdict of the Coroner's Jury in the Murder Case.

According to the Coroner's jury in the inquest held over the remains of Harry Hodgett, the young English farmer, who was murdered near Pluckamin Saturday morning, as was told in The Daily Press that afternoon, Hodgett came to his death at the hands of Elmer Clawson.

The inquest began last Saturday afternoon and was adjourned until today. At 11:30 o'clock, after about fifteen minutes deliberation, the jury brought in their verdict.

The accused man was brought into the Court at Somerville, where the inquest was held, and appeared very calm and collected. He was dressed in dark trousers and a whie sweater. By advice of his counsel, Steele & Meehan, of Somerville, he refused to be sworn when asked if he would by Coroner Stillwell.

County Physician Wagoner told the result of his autopsy. The first bullet, he said, entered the left breast and penetrated the lung, causing a hemorrhage and resulting in the death of Hodgett. It lodged in his spine. The second bullet lodged under his shoulder blade. The third was picked up on the floor. The bullets and the shirt of the murdered man were produced in evidence.

The courthouse was crowded, but the audience was a very quiet and orderly one.

—The contract case of W. R. Codington against Hans Stiglitz was adjourned in Justice Crosley's court this moreing. In the same court the case on contract of Charles J. McNabb against Laufer was tried and judgment for $30 and costs was given the plaintiff.
